Good news for collectors is the continued maturing of the United States Telecard Association. At a recent meeting of its Board, membership was strengthened significantly by the appointment of MCI and U S West. With these two new important additions, the Board now includes five of the seven Baby Bells (all except BellSouth and Bell Atlantic) and three of the Big Four (all except AT&T). Bell Atlantic has publicly withdrawn from the prepaid business. BellSouth may be hitching its wagon to Visa Cash. AT&T has consciously decided not to participate at this time. We sincerely hope that AT&T will decide soon to join the USTA. To do otherwise would hardly support AT&T's quest to remain a telecommunications leader and be perceived as such by its customers and shareholders.

Funding for the on-going operation of the USTA now seems assured, but that's not yet the case for the standards program. Until that is in place, there is consensus that there will be no logo or seal of approval designed for use on cards to indicate a guarantee of performance. Let's hope that the extra funds will be found soon; carriers that can qualify to use such a seal — particularly the larger ones — will be able to set themselves apart from all other issuers. It seems obvious that this is where the funding should come from, too.

The USTA is also becoming stronger in terms of consumer advocacy. The organization will be increasing the capacity of its consumer hotline (800/333-3513) and more actively promoting it — a wise move given that it may be some time before the standards are in place.

In our "Going for Gold" article in the March edition of Moneycard Collector, we reported that several Atlanta area merchants had been signed up to the Visa Cash program by NationsBank. The statement was incorrect. The businesses were, in fact, signed up by First Union Corporation.

Warning!

I'm writing this letter to warn all the (phone card) dealers about a person named Paolo Rizzi, located at 2245 Biscayne Bay Drive, North Miami, FL 33181. It is my opinion that Mr. Rizzi conducted a serious mail fraud.

On November 1995, Mr. Rizzi contacted me. He told me that he read my ad in Moneycard Collector and would like to place an order. He made two orders ($680 and $580) and promised to wire transfer the total amount, $1,260 to my account at Bank of America. The next day he faxed me a "Funds Transfer Request" form from the First Union Bank of Florida as a proof of payment. The form was signed by him and "approved" by a bank operator. I sent out the two packages. It turns out that the "Funds Transfer Request" form was a forgery. I contacted the First Union Bank of Florida and was told that the fund transfer was never initiated.

On January 1996, Mr. Rizzi disconnected his phone and could not be reached. I reported the incident to the First Union Bank and filed a complaint to the Postmaster at North Miami, Fla. Paolo Rizzi has a strong European accent.

T.J. Fan, The Stamp Fan, West Covina, Calif.

A certified letter sent by Moneycard Collector to Mr. Rizzi produced no response. If any of our readers have any additional information on this person, please contact us and we'll pass it on to T.J. Fan.

Identification, please

I have some cards in my collection that I have not been able to find any information on. One has a John Deere Industrial Track Backhoe pictured, and was given to customers who purchased and financed new industrial equipment. The other card is a 3D Polaroid with a camera and telephone.

We appreciate your magazine here in West Texas.

Keep up the good work.

Barbara Ezell, Midland, Texas

The John Deere cards that you refer to were issued by CDG. The three cards include five minutes of time each, and only 350 sets were issued in August 1995. The Polaroid hologram cards were premiums available after purchasing packs of film. Five-minute, 20-minute and 60-minute cards were sent by mail, depending on the number of rolls purchased. GTI provided the phone time.

Australian amplification

Included in the November issue of your impressive magazine was an article about Australian phone cards. Author Phil Flanagan made mention of PayTel in the story. Informative as it is, I am concerned about some inaccuracies that I feel do not fairly represent our activities. We are not merely "providing phone service on the ferry..." For example, we have put a considerable amount of energy into the design of our world-first satellite payphones, which governments for most Australian states are installing on their passenger train services.

Due to contractual arrangements with our state governments, the majority of our 1996 issues will be trains or train-related.

Stuart Rooke, Sales Manager, PayTel Australia

Thanks for getting us on the right "track." Readers will note some of the PayTel cards being offered in our "New International Issues" section on page 58.

Hawaiian Eye

I received the January Moneycard Collector and looked over the price list for the GTE Hawaii cards. In my opinion, the listings are a total mess and are nowhere near what the prices should be. You need some kind of input from collectors, as well as dealers who know what they are talking about. If you want my help, I will be glad to supply input or you can keep on publishing information that is not even close to reality. I and my friends who also read and collect Moneycard Collector are totally disgusted at how you are listing these prices.

Don Whitmore, Plainview, NY

We appreciate your concern about the GTE-Hawaii card prices. Traditionally they have been some of the most volatile prices on the telecard market. We rely totally on dealer input to establish the prices that we report each month, and we have faith in those well established dealers. Occasionally, there is an error in entering this information, but for the most part, we are confident as to the validity of these prices. If you have a problem with the prices these dealers are actually charging for these cards, we can only suggest that you contact them directly. They are listed each month in the preface to the Price Guide section.

Not 'the real thing'

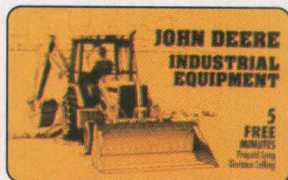

I collect telephone cards that feature the Coca-Cola theme. Most Japanese and other foreign-issued Coke cards feature Coke advertisements. I eagerly seek cards showing reproductions of Coke billboards or magazine ads from the 1900s, and on up into the '40s. These make a delightful collection, and there are both U.S. and foreign issues of these.

Many current U.S. cards carry the Coke logo as a small part of the card, incidental to the card's principal theme. The recent HT cards with Coke logos are of this type, as are the Charlotte Speedway cards, the die-cut race car issues and others.

I think U.S. Coke card collectors are being misled as to what is truly a Coca-Cola card, and that misconception is being fostered for profit purposes. To me, I see no sense paying the premium Coke card price for an event card that happens to bear a Coke logo.

If you publish this, look for some self-righteous howls from dealers and issuers of the cards I mention. But the truth hurts.

Mike O'Brien, Sandwich, Ill.

McDonald's + phone cards = an irresistible treat

By Nancy Blackburn

Whether you admit to having grown up in the '50s or not, most Americans associate McDonald's with the words, "fast food." Many a child has eagerly awaited those four magic words from Mom or Dad on Saturday or Sunday afternoon: "Let's go to McDonald's."

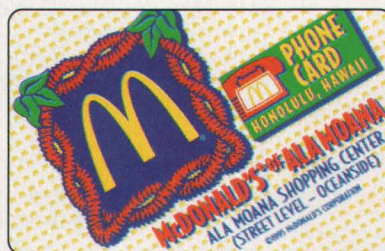

The clamoring chorus from the family vehicle can still be heard some 40 years later, only nowadays the clamor is coming from phone card collectors.

McDonald's first venture into the U.S. phone card market was a three-minute AT&T TeleTicket included with each Extra Value Meal in 11 test cities. Originally scheduled for a three-month run, April 1 to June 30, 1993, the promotion was prematurely shut down by individual franchise holders in nine of the 11 cities.

AT&T and McDonald's were both unhappy with problems that arose, and the project was terminated early. One major difficulty was the American public's unfamiliarity with phone cards, which prompted extra questions that slowed down the usually speedy fast-food lines. And AT&T was not happy with the number of youngsters who used the 1-800 help line number to make rude or abusive calls.

The next set of McDonald's telecards was issued in November 1994, through the efforts of Frank Zamarripa, a man who had combined his passion of collecting McDonald's memorabilia with his dedication to raising funds for Ronald McDonald Houses in the Southern California area (see Moneycard Collector, Sept. '95).

The prepaids are designated as the Frank & Son phone cards, Series I-III. According to Zamarripa, "The first set of 500 did not even sell out at the first show in November 1994, and I had about 150 sets on hand. Suddenly it took off and people were calling and offering me $500 a set, and now I have no problems selling them."

Zamarripa was not out to turn a profit for himself, but to raise money for the local Ronald McDonald Houses. As an avid McDonald's collector, he conducted bi-weekly shows in his 25,000 sq. ft. Southern California warehouse, and in four years raised more than a half-million dollars for the Camp Ronald McDonald and Houses in Los Angeles, Orange County, and Loma Linda.

The main annual event is scheduled for a weekend in October or November, with smaller shows held every Wednesday and Saturday. And for the last two years, this is when and where the very popular Frank & Son phone cards have been unveiled to collectors.

Premier Telecom Frank & Son sponsor cards

Since those first two releases, McDonald's and phone cards have been an unbeatable meal ticket for American issuers. One of the most recent offerings, the second such set from Phone Cards Hawaii, is a corporate phone card portraying the Plumeria lei, for the Ala Moana McDonald's in Hawaii.

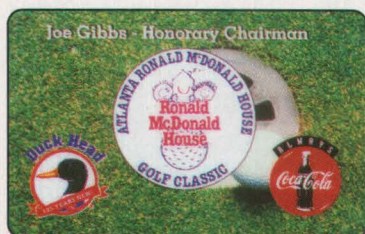

The first issue, which showed the Llima lei, gained notoriety when all 1,000 cards sold out in less than 55 minutes, drawing the ire of nearby merchants when lines of people blocked entrances to their stores.

According to Phone Cards Hawaii's Brian Ching, the release of the second edition coincided with the rupture of a main high pressure water line in front of the driveway entrance, just as hordes of Christmas shoppers were battling their way into Hawaii's largest shopping center. One thousand cards were sold on the first day, and many customers were relieved to find 1,500 cards remaining the following day.

McDonald's franchise holders can request usage of the McDonald's logo when sponsoring an approved event or benefit, such as for the Ronald McDonald House. Franchisees can also ask corporate permission to use the logo for a sales promotion. In this case, corporate McDonald's instigated the issuance of the first corporate phone cards and authorized the cards.

However, there are only 50 special-edition 5-card sets, packaged in a legal size folder that has all four of those cards plus a special card that says "VERY LIMITED EDITION" in red.

Collectors seeking less expensive McDonald's cards should look at phone cards featured on franchise-sponsored releases. Several attractive cards are available in the $10 to $15 range.

Name of the Game - Tele-Tagz obtained 1,000 of a 2,000-card issue featuring McDonald's in Germany and "Batman Forever." This three-minute promotional card came in an attractive folder and was sold with a McDonald's meal purchase. The DC Comics Batman logo is prominently displayed, along with the famed Golden Arches.

HT Technologies has released several cards with McDonald's logos. The 1995 Azalea Festival in Oklahoma is featured on one of the cards, which includes one of the first colored logos (McDonald's) ever to appear on a card back.

Also from HT were the controversial Duck Head Classic cards, which included the Ronald McDonald House logo on the front and the Golden Arches logo on the reverse. And sharp-eyed collectors will note that the Alexander Chen artwork on HT's popular three-card set, "42nd Street," includes the recognizable restaurant signage from New York's Times Square landmark.

"Back to School The McDonald's Way" was an attractive card co-issued by Cable & Wireless and Phonecard Management of America (PCMA) to benefit McDonald's Children's Charities of South Florida. The 10-minute card was sold at face value ($10) and remains quite affordable on the secondary market.

Other "Mickey D" issues have included a popular NAT show card from the 1995 Hawaii Pacific Collectibles and Sports Card Expo; the nostalgic two-card Sprint set commemorating the 40th anniversary of the first McDonald's restaurant; the beautiful four-card Pearlridge (Hawaii) puzzle set also from Sprint; three additional McDonald's issues from Premier Telecom; and McDonald's-related cards from Southern New England Telephone (SNET), MCI, Talk 'N Toss and Cable & Wireless.

With the proliferation of Golden Arches popping up throughout the phone card industry, the question now on the lips of many phone card collectors and dealers is: "Can there ever be too much of a good thing?" When it comes to McDonald's, the reactions are mixed.

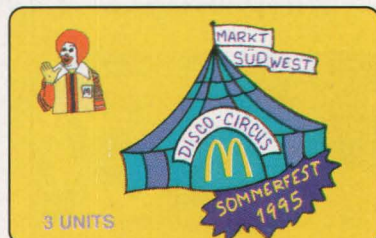

Amber Zaferis, sales representative for Diamond Promotional Phone Cards in Mesa, Ariz., suggests that collectors look for corporate McDonald cards that also display a second or third well-known logo or trademark. "McDonald's phone cards are solid because you do not depend only on collectability, but on the utility market and modern technology. Phone cards combine advertising with promotions in a commodity. The telephone is a necessity, and phone cards are a collectible — a combination that will go far.”

Dave Valdez of Tele-Tagz offered a perspective relative to memorabilia collectors in general: “Twice a week, every week, 5,000 to 10,000 people walk through each Frank & Son collectors’ show in Southern California. For a large weekend show, 30,000 people will walk in and out. The market is not flooded and it is not dismal. It is very, very bright.”

This is a sobering thought, when we reflect on the point raised in a recent letter from Bruce Harmon in Moneycard Collector (February 1996), “Where is everybody?” Maybe “everybody” should be at these type of collector shows, since that seems to be where the action is taking place. Has any U.S. phone card show or expo truthfully reached public attendance figures approaching 10,000 to 30,000?

But not everyone is bullish on McDonald’s telecards. According to one East Coast dealer, McDonald’s cards may not always hold their value. “When phone cards are issued like candy and high prices are asked for contrived issues, the market will die.”

The dealer strongly believes that based on the track record of sports cards, collectors should be careful to buy cards that are numbered, as an assurance that only a designated number of the cards were actually issued.

Concern was also voiced that large numbers of cards might be declared “sold out,” when they are actually on consignment or being held by dealers to resell on the secondary market. Again, the admonition to “know your dealer” applies.

Even Frank Zamarripa agrees that the market is currently being flooded by too many McDonald’s cards. “But,” he says, “since I’m not out there to make money for myself, it’s been nice being able to raise a quick $30,000 to $40,000 for Ronald McDonald Houses.”

“I’ll keep doing this for as long as it is fun, and will only stop when it becomes work. I enjoy doing this worthwhile cause for kids and I have a blast meeting people from around the world.”

During the past 40 years, the popular Golden Arches have been firmly interwoven into the fabric of the typical American family’s life. Just as McDonald’s changed the way families have eaten and interacted, so are phone cards expected to impact the telecommunications of the 21st century.

More than just a haven for fast food fanatics, McDonald’s has become the theme of some of the most sought-after phone cards in the hobby today.

SPEDWAY STORES DEVELOP CUSTOM CARD Dublin, Ohio-based ConQuest Telecommunications is now producing a private label prepaid calling card for sale in Speedway convenience stores.

Available in $5, $10 and $20 denominations, the cards feature custom call greetings and multilingual voice prompts in English, Spanish, French, Chinese, Japanese, Korean and German. The cards are being sold in more than 1,600 of the convenience store's locations across the nation.

ACMI CONQUEST COMPLETE MERGER The combined endeavors of ACMI and ConQuest Telecommunications services have culminated in a merger of two industry leaders, and not surprisingly, a special joint-issued prepaid phone card. Although the 500-issue phone card will be available only to employees of the now consolidated company, the merger itself will benefit collectors and users alike.

The two successful companies decided to unite to strengthen their own services and begin to offer customers more service options. In fact, says ACMI President Kevin Pirolo, each company brings special capabilities that bolster the efforts of the other.

"ACMI and ConQuest have been leaders in two totally different veins of the prepaid industry," Pirolo explained. "ConQuest is known for its retailing of cards, and for its offering of cards with impressive technical capabilities. Now those qualities have been combined with ACMI's strengths in the promotions, premium offering and replenishment services."

Collectors should know that the merger does not signal the end of ConQuest and ACMI cards as we know them. Although ConQuest absorbed ACMI, both will continue to operate as separate entities. Pirolo stressed that collectors and users should be aware of the heightened value of cards now that the company has merged.

"This merger shows a vote of confidence by the business community in the prepaid calling card product for telecommunications purposes," says Pirolo. "As cards are used more for a broader range of purposes, they can do nothing less than become more attractive to users and collectors."

The two companies will remain in their current facilities, with ConQuest's headquarters located in Columbus, Ohio, and ACMI's offices in Memphis, Tenn.

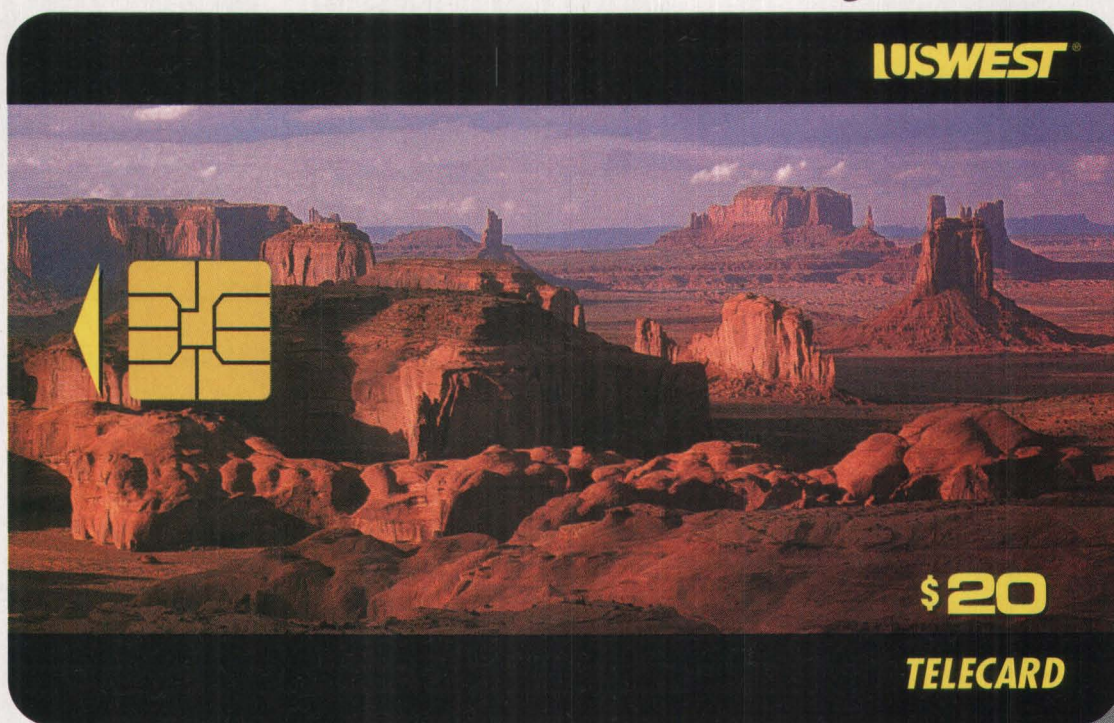

The ACMI/ConQuest Board of Directors (left to right) Peter Halliday (president of a brokerage firm and former senior vice president of Advest, which underwrote the initial and secondary offering of The Limited), Harold Erbs (chairman of the board of Laboratory Tops, Inc. and co-founder former CEO of Quest Microwave), James Sobwick (president of ConQuest and co-founder of LCI), Dennis Geraghty (president, Greyden Press), Kevin Pirolo (president, ACMI), Gerald Gorman (president, North Pittsburgh Telephone Co.) and Patrick Hart (president and founder of Hartstone, Inc., a popular ceramics company) proudly display the Special Edition Merger card.

AMERICA'S MOST WANTED

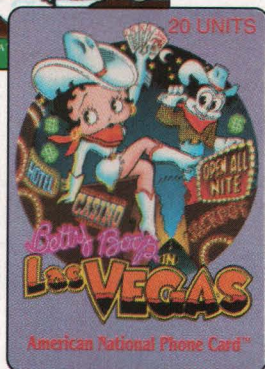

Who else but Betty Boop could bop onto the America's Most Wanted scene and take charge as if she owned the joint? We certainly don't mind, for as far as the American National Phone Card series goes, America's cartoon darling can visit us anytime.

In any case, Betty sashays in, along with a few old favorites... corporate cards! The vibrant OmniTel Carefree Gum card proves once again that collectible promotional cards can be well designed and larger than life. And just when we thought Coca-Cola issues were beginning to wane, 50 percent of this month's list is devoted to this thematic.

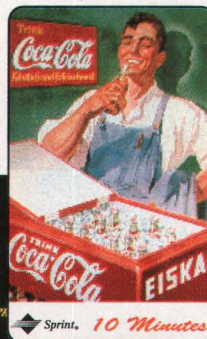

America's Most Wanted once again faces repeat offenders. The popular Ascot Domino's Pizza/Coca-Cola card has hit us two months in a row. And, the vibrant Innovative Telecom Lifesavers set also revisits. No doubt, attractive, steady selling issues are what our collectible needs to build a strong foundation and to move ahead.

1 AMERICAN NATIONAL PHONECARD BETTY BOOP

America's lovable Betty Boop climbs to the top of our Most Wanted list this month, with visits to Las Vegas and the North Pole. Betty struts her stuff on both Jumbo and standard size ANP cards. The strong artwork allows the Jumbo card to show off its true capability as a billboard or poster. Credit for much of this sales success has to go to the marketing savvy of ANP President, Richard Nelson, who has developed a loyal group of coin and phone card dealers. The cards are fun and inexpensive.

2 SPRINT/CLASSIC "COCA-COLA" AROUND THE WORLD The object of strong advertising and intense media interest, this three-card set was propelled into second place by a flurry of pre-selling. The beautiful artwork represents ads from Japan, Germany and the U.S. With just 30 minutes of Sprint long distance time and a retail price of $39.35, calling can be very expensive on this created-for-collectors-only set.

3 SPRINT/CLASSIC COCA-COLA SANTA SERIES The five-card set was first advertised in the Coca-Cola merchandise catalog as early as September 1995. The lofty $110 initial purchase price makes significant appreciation unlikely, but for the ardent Coke collectors with resources, it has become a must-have. The five cards include a total of 120 minutes of phone time.

4 OMNITEL CAREFREE GUM This delightful card is the highest placed corporate advertising card on America's Most Wanted this month. Corporate cards are currently enjoying a run of popularity because there are a lot of different issues, and they are generally inexpensive. The cards also provide a familiar image — one with which collectors can relate.

5 ASCOT DOMINO'S PIZZA/COCA-COLA Here's another corporate card, with the added lure of a Coca-Cola logo. Advertising their Deep Dish Pizza, this Minnesota-distributed card should be another Coca-Cola winner for Cocaholic collectors.

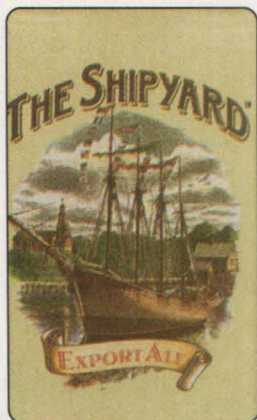

6 PREMIER TELECOM MCDONALD'S PIN CLUB-GERMANY

New from the producers of the famous Frank & Sons' McDonald's sets, this winner showed up as a top seller on several dealers' lists this month. The Pin Club card shows a small lion cub pin and a hot air balloon pin as one of a series of German McDonald's phone cards. Pin collecting is big in Europe, and I suspect the McDonald's pins are some of the most collectible. With a mintage of 2000, the card should be a good one if the Pin Club membership in Germany approaches this number.

7 OMNITEL SHIPYARD BEER

KEYCHAIN The combination keychain/telecard is one of the most handy I've ever seen. It has an attractive design and fits the popular mold of corporate cards – low price with an attractive design. A winner for the Boston-based beer and issuer alike.

8 HOMISCO WORLD'S FAIR 1939 One of the first show cards to ever make the Most Wanted list, this card dates back to last September's TeleCard World East Expo. Always creative and quality conscious, Homisco has also produced cards of the old San Francisco Chinese Telephone Exchange and Alexander Graham Bell on a stock certificate. This one is a unique masterpiece.

9 CENTURY TELECOM SMITH'S PHONE HOME

FREE SET A beautiful set of four cards from a Smith's store promotion in five Western states this past fall (Moneycard Collector, p. 57, Jan. '96), the cards were premiums in 12-packs of Coke. The three-minute cards feature pleasant winter scenes from the Coca-Cola advertising archives. If we can blow our horn a bit, Moneycard Collector was a partner in the program, providing information about the hobby inside the cardboard containers.

10 INNOVATIVE TELECOM LIFESAVERS SET

Here is the third corporate card this month, and the design speaks for itself – bright and bold, and one that we're all familiar with. Other bright and bold cards from IT are the NBC Peacock and Crayola cards, all which have been winners with collectors.

CABLE & WIRELESS APOLLO XIII

TELECHIPS One of the most innovative prepaid products to hit the U.S. market, TeleCHIPS are designed to look like gambling chips. Made from clay epoxy, they feel and even sound substantial. The Apollo XIII example includes the popular patch design artwork in a unique but useable format. Look for a story on this new stored value product in next month's issue.

"America's Most Wanted" is compiled monthly by Moneycard Collector and written by dealer Steve Eyer of Mt. Zion, Ill. Rankings are based on actual sales figures supplied to Moneycard Collector by U.S. phone card dealers. All dealers are welcome to participate by faxing their Top 10 best sellers for the month, along with the actual number of cards sold to retail customers. All sales figures will be held in strict confidence by Moneycard Collector. Dealers need to fax their data by the middle of each month for it to be included in the rankings.

HOW MUCH ARE YOU ACTUALLY PAYING? Did you ever wonder why the long distance calling rates are so different from issuer to issuer, and sometimes even from card to card? How do ACMI and GTI, for example, charge just $.25 per minute on most of their prepaids, while Sprint's standard rate is $.60?

Most of us realize that Candace Bergen's commercials plugging Sprint's $.10 per minute rate is not an accurate or fair comparison to most prepaid phone cards. But how do issuers establish cost per minute? And do phone card users really understand what they are paying for?

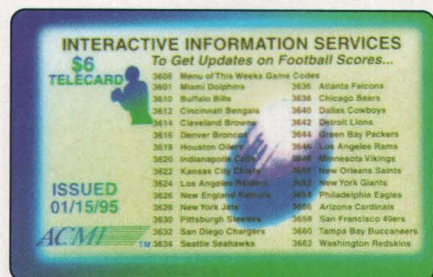

For the sake of simplicity, when it comes to producing a remote memory card, here is a synopsis of what you're paying for:

- The 800 service is the 800 access number that begins the process of placing the call.
- Voice prompts provide the call instructions (often in different languages), how much time is remaining, what the remaining balance on the card is, etc.

- Switches are the physical equipment that route the calls.
- Customer service is the feature that companies should have if the user has questions or problems concerning their card.
- Materials are items such as scratch-off panels, plastic, printing costs, shipping, etc. One note of interest here is that the lower the production run of cards, the higher the production costs. So, if a card has a low mintage, it is good for the collector but probably not for the user.
- Licenses are for cards featuring athletes, artwork, logos, etc. Officially-licensed products can increase the cost per minute, with the costs being passed on to the end-user.
- Enhanced services beyond the normal voice prompts, switching and customer service bureaus include information services, speed dialing and voice messaging.

GTI consistently offers one of the lowest rates ($.25 per minute) in the phone card industry. The images are quite enticing and the high quantities allow economy of scale.

ACMI was one of the first in the industry to offer such enhanced services as phone-in information lines.

Although Sprint calling rates are relatively high at $.60 per minute, the cards are still among the most collectible with hobbyists today.

- State/federal taxes are the financial responsibility of the card issuer. Usually, taxes are included in the rate but some issuers price their cards exclusive of taxes and then treat them as an additional charge.
- Air time is arranged by the card issuer. Don't be misled by the name of a well-known carrier appearing on the card. The issuer and not the underlying carrier bears the primary responsibility for the performance of a card.
- Marketing overhead includes the costs of advertising, distributing and selling the product.
- Activation fees are one-time charges sometimes added by the issuer in order for the card to be used.

Depending on the company that issues the cards, these components will vary. For example, a highly-collectible product such as a Coca-Cola or NFL card will usually include licensing fees, thus increasing the cost per minute. But, that isn't always the case, either.

"Licensing will generally increase the cost per minute," says James Robinson, Vice President of Marketing for The Score Board, Inc. "We have to pay for the license because we're using another entity's trademark or likeness. But in the long run, it gives market differential."

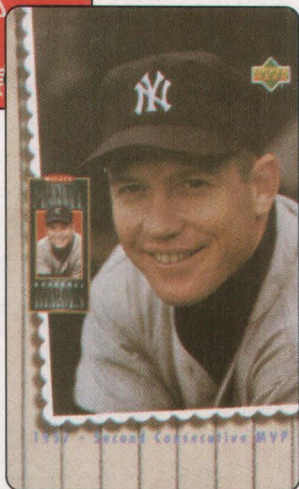

"However, depending on the size of the run, distribution channels, and so on, the costs can drop," says Robinson. "We can justify a lower margin by making it up in volume."

One recent example of how licensing fees can affect calling rates is LCI's Joe Montana series of cards, featured on page 43 of this month's "New Sports Issues" column. While the true long distance time on the cards is rated at $.30 per minute, the buyer actually pays a whopping $2.50 per minute due to —

AmeriVox cards are rated at a relatively low $.299 per minute ($.33 including tax), but users must pay a one-time $10 activation fee on recharge of many of the cards.

Licensed images for sports and music stars don't come cheap, and buyers often foot the bill.

you guessed it — licensing fees.

These are just a few of the variables that determine a card's cost per minute of phone time. What's the best card? It depends on how the card will be used. If it is simply to be collected with the phone time never used, the rate per minute shouldn't be much of a factor.

However, if the calling time is to be used and recharged repeatedly, check to see if there is a sliding scale for each recharge. Some resellers, like AmeriVox, reward their repeat customers with lower rates at different levels of usage. In that case, the customary $10 activation fee would soon be recovered with the sliding scale rate, which can go as low as $.18 per minute.

Currently, the United States Telecard Association is attempting to establish a standard that would require the cost-per-minute to be disclosed to the consumer prior to purchase. When that happens, both users and collectors will be better equipped to make wise buying decisions.

TELEFONKARTEN IN DEUTSCHLAND

German phone card market recovering nicely

By Ulf Helmke

Unlike the U.S., Germany has only one telephone company – Deutsche Telekom. The German telco was state-owned until 1995 and holds the monopoly on the country's telecommunication.

Telekom has test-marketed nearly every existing phone card system in the world, which makes for interesting collecting: Landis & Gyr optical cards (Frankfurt/Main, 1983-86), smart chip cards (Aachen/Bonn, 1984-89), plastic magnetic stripe cards (Goslar, 1984-89), and paper cards with a magnetic stripe (Bamberg, 1985-89).

Like most other European countries, phone cards were introduced in Germany to satisfy the need for a safer and more convenient method of placing a call from public payphones. In late 1986, smart chip cards were adopted nationally as the best system for Telekom's purposes.

German phone cards are produced as either public or private issues. Public cards can advertise one of Telekom's services or include another company's ad. In the latter case, the advertising company decides if the card is to be sold nationwide or regionally.

Private cards are delivered directly to the customer, who then decides how the cards will be distributed (i.e., given away to customers as incentives or sold to collectors).

Telekom also issues cards to be handed out to customers for advertising purposes. The "Gruss aus Hamburg" card is a good example; Telekom gave away a number of these cards as a welcome gift to the first group of U.S. students visiting Hamburg with the Chicago-Hamburg Student Exchange program.

German test sites 1983-89

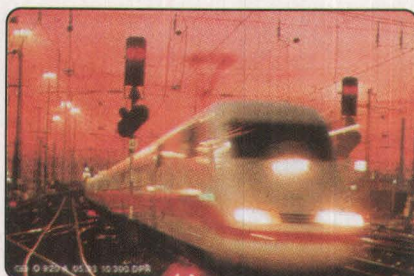

"Business card" prepaids were issued in Germany from 1989 through 1993. Limited to customers with private card orders, the cards were actually low-mintage phone cards (about 200 per run) that were used like regular business cards, but with bonus phone time.

German phone cards are used in special card-phones found almost everywhere – even in Deutsche Bahn's ICE (Inter-City Express) high-speed trains. Nearly half of the public phones in Germany now accept phone cards, and most Germans carry at least one card with them at all times. This makes advertising on public cards a valuable tool, since company logos and slogans are seen every time a call is made with the card.

Some cards targeted specifically at collectors have Kiel Hauscat; DM 12; public issue; 300,000 cards; November 1989.

Deutsche Bahn Intercity Express (ICE); DM 6; private issue; 10,300 cards; May 1993.

Marvel Superheroes #1; DM 12; public issue (cards #2-5 were private issues); 300,000 cards; May 1993.

Munich Art, Culture and Love of Life '94; DM 6; private issue; 10,000 cards; August 1994.

"For foreigners, hate has no place among us"; DM 12; public issue; 300,000 cards; March 1993.

"That is the peak!"; DM 12; public issue; 500,000 cards; November 1992.

been issued in sets, with one card an easily available public issue, and the other cards private issues. The idea behind this concept is that someone purchasing the card to make a call might like the design and decide to buy the private issue cards for their collection.

In 1993, for example, a set of five Marvel Comics phone cards was issued. The first card was a public card with a mintage of 300,000; cards two through five were released as private cards with limited mintages of 3,000.

The German collector market has undergone quite a few changes in recent years. The first rush on phone cards started in the early '90s when the press reported some of the cards' escalating values.

Many Germans were just hearing about phone cards and how to use them, or found out that those cards they had been using during their holidays in Italy or France were now available at home, too.

More and more Germans started to collect the cards, and sometimes bought two or more of each card to save and sell later at higher prices. These people soon realized, however, that there was not an endless supply of new collectors each month to buy up the older cards. Of course, they quickly began to sell off these extra cards, but since nearly everybody else had extras of the same card, there was little demand.

Prices soon dropped and even other cards were affected. Common cards could be found for less than their face value. Many "investors" had to realize that phone cards were not a foolproof way to make easy money and a lot of people stopped collecting.

As difficult as this period has been for our hobby and for collectors, most experts believe that this is when the wheat was separated from the chaff. During the past three or four years, the majority of collectors have been collecting phone cards for the fun of it and not simply as a "get-rich quick" scheme. Naturally, nobody objects to selling cards for a little profit, but today's collectors know what they want and are pretty realistic about potential increases in value.

The 1992-93 period also coincided with the big hype for "collectible" phone cards. Collectors were buying every card in sight, so nearly every business, store, restaurant, pub, club, team, church, political party, etc., issued their own "limited run" card and marketed them at inflated prices. Collectors quickly discovered that they couldn't possibly assemble a complete collection of every German card and became frustrated. After all, even if a private card with a mintage of 1,000 is originally sold for DM 50, it still has only DM 6 worth of calls stored in the chip.

Collectors became very selective, often specializing in a few topics, and now spend their money more carefully. Sadly enough, not only did collectors lose money on hyped cards, but some producers who couldn't sell their "limited edition" cards went bankrupt.

During the past year, collecting German phone cards has picked up momentum again, yet collectors still are very careful about what they buy. Not as naive as they might have been a few years ago, they now know what they want and what is available.

Once again, German cards have begun to dominate the market, though the market has not fully recovered. Although some very negative stories have been written about German phone cards and their value, the media has not been successful with their attempt to destroy the collector's market. One clear indication of this is that you rarely find a used phone card in a German phone booth. The public knows about the collectible value of a phone card, and almost everybody knows a collector who will gladly accept used cards.

It will be interesting to see what will happen when Telekom's monopoly is lifted in 1998 and other companies are allowed to offer their services.

Presents

Make sure all you folks look at our ad this month with Kars Unlimited announcing the premiere of the new Visa cash cards from Wachovia Bank with Olympic themes. Think of these cards as you would a $1 Democratic National Convention Card of first Nynex, these are the first of their kind in the United States, what more could the collector want. Call today to reserve your sets.

Regarding our SoCal Collector Expo, we now have a firm date of August 23-25 at the Disneyland Hotel Convention Center in Anaheim, California. This will be the greatest show ever for the phone card collector. In attendance, we will have the leading Phone card dealers, Disney collectible dealers, Sports memorabilia dealers and Trading card dealers. We will have nationally known sports figures offering free autographs, including major players from the Dodgers, Kings and Lakers, free admission and free parking (with certain restrictions) will also be available, plus major phone card manufacturers. We will also be giving away free Expo phone cards to the first 1000 people daily. More details next month, stay tuned...Dealers, we are completely sold out, but if you would like to be put on our wait list, please call. This month's selections and remember, we will match any dealer's legitimate published prices. We are the only dealer in the world who offers a guarantee buyback or trade-in.

TRADING CARDS

THEY CAME, THEY SAW IN '95; NOW THEY'RE LOOKING TO CONQUER

Like the general telecard industry itself, 1995 was a year of growth in the sports-related phone card market. Though some issuers were not 100 percent satisfied with their products' sales performance during the initial year, only one indicated plans for "abandoning ship."

The year 1995 was highlighted by the entry of Score Board Inc./Classic Marketing into the phone card industry. Though Score Board is one of the largest manufacturers and distributors of sports memorabilia in the business and is making a serious effort to develop this new hobby sector, Topps, Upper Deck, Finish Line and Signature Rookies also came to the party, with only Signature (Auto-Phonex) dropping out.

A number of other trading card companies — Fleer/SkyBox, Pinnacle/Action Packed and Donruss — remain "wallflowers," perhaps just waiting for their opportunity to join the fun. Industry experts are predicting that when the market accelerates, those issuers will also enter the action.

Several telecard-only companies also contributed to the supply of sports-related telecards. OmniTel and Race Call unveiled their first products in '95, while SmarTel and Sports Call only recently entered the game. HT Technologies teamed up with Champion Sports to produce some memorable baseball legends on the new plastic medium.

One common thread with all sports issuers is their unwillingness to rely solely on sales from either the sports memorabilia hobby stores or hobby-oriented phone card dealers. Overall, many of these companies expressed disappointment in the sales they garnered through these types of retail outlets.

The general public, through outlets such as sports arenas, convenience stores and general retail stores, did better than most issuers initially expected. Most issuing companies expect to expand in those areas.

The final remaining major sports league, the National Basketball Association, seems very near to announcing a licensing deal for NBA-related phone cards. The NBA is traditionally the last league to hand out a license, but it is also one of the most treasured, along with the NFL (which is generally the first).

In alphabetical order, here is a capsulized report on some of the most active issuers of sports-related phone cards:

FINISH LINE

Finish Line was the first company to produce racing-related phone cards, and was also one of the first to make major inroads with both the general racing public and the serious racing collector.

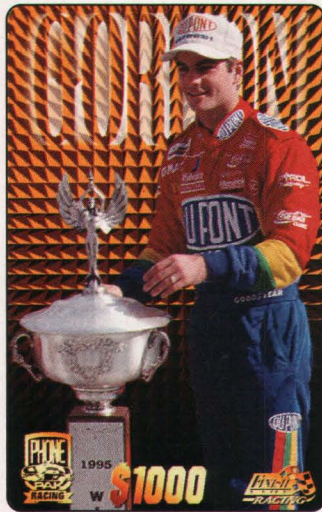

Finish Line worked in conjunction with Score Board Inc. during 1995, but recently this relationship ended. Now on its own, Finish Line kicked off '96 with the ambitious Phone Pak racing product line. For $6, collectors get a pack of three phone cards with a minimum of $6 phone time (see March 1996 Moneycard Collector).

According to Finish Line President Art West, the issuer will produce more stand-alone NASCAR licensed phone cards, as well as enter the rapidly growing Super Truck arena.

GTE

GTE was generally satisfied with its NFL-licensed phone card products in 1995, according to spokesman Tim Carroll. Their Helmet Series was a major success with general retail outlets throughout the Southeast. Plans are underway to increase sales strength in other regions during 1996.

For Super Bowl XXX this past January, GTE again placed phone cards in every seat. Expect more NFL-licensed cards from GTE in the near future.

Finish Line; Phone Pak; Jeff Gordon; $1,000 denomination; 25 cards issued; January 1996.

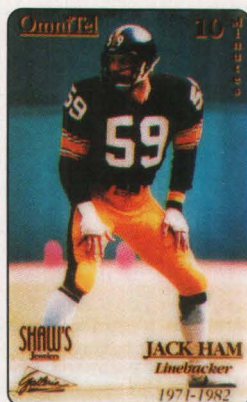

GTE, Helmet Series; 30-card set; 25 units per card; 10,000 cards issued; July 1994.

OMNITEL

OmniTel's first year in the telecard business generally was a good one, according to President Shawn Canada. The Boston-based company primarily focused its attention on company and event-sponsored phone cards, such as the Drew Bledsoe/Anderson Little promotion and the Jack Ham/Shaw's Jewelers issues. OmniTel also produced stand-alone issues, such as the recently released Mo Vaughn card.

With the exception of the Ham and Phil Rizutto cards, the company confined its efforts to Boston-area athletes, such as the Patriots' Bledsoe and Vincent Brown, the Red Sox' Vaughn and the Bruins' Cam Neely and Ray Bourque.

In 1996, OmniTel hopes to penetrate New York, Pittsburgh and other nearby markets. OmniTel will also expand its presence in sports arenas and sports merchandise stores, where demand for the cards has been stronger than in the hobby areas.

OmniTel; Jack Ham/Shaw's Jewelers; 10 minutes; 1,500 issued (250 signed); August 1995.

Race Call; Jimmy Spencer; $3 denomination; 5,000 cards issued; May 1995.

RACE CALL

Like OmniTel, Race Call's rookie season of business was excellent, according to company president Tony Cloninger. Relying primarily on NASCAR racing events as his main source of distribution, Cloninger encountered some sales resistance from those not familiar with phone cards. To address the problem, Race Call developed informative racing updates by ESPN racing analyst, Dr. Jerry Punch, as part of his card platform. Expect Race Call to continue the weekly racing info service during 1996.

In order to get more phone cards into the hands of users, Race Call will be giving away phone cards at major races this year. The issuer is counting on the weekly news updates to lure people into using the cards.

SCORE BOARD/CLASSIC

Score Board Vice President James Robinson was more than satisfied with his company's results last year. Score Board achieved its primary goal of building a network of general retail, national and international distributors for its licensed National Football League (NFL) and Major League Baseball (MLB) phone cards. They achieved the results through the combined trading card/phone card Assets product line, as well as the recently released Pro Line series and stand-alone cards, such as the 50-plus MLB player set.

Score Board will produce a new Assets series in 1996, along with another new product line with clear trading cards. Score Board is also working on sponsorships with major sporting events this year.

Classic; 1996 Assets; $1,000 denomination; quantity unavailable; January 1996.

TOPPS

Topps, the oldest existing trading card manufacturer, took a different path from its competitors, primarily using phone cards as chase/contest cards for its 1995 Stadium Club baseball set. In addition to the common three-minute phone cards, there were three prize winners inserted into the mix that entitled the holder to an authentic Major League All-Star Ring. According to Topps spokesperson Marty Appel, the promotion was one of the company's most successful campaigns of the year.

The conservative Topps probably will not expand its phone card programs in 1996, but it is likely that they will repeat a similar promotion in the near future.

MCI/Topps; Stadium Club Baseball Series; 3 units; quantities unavailable; February 1995.

LESS IS MORE

CALLING ALL SPORTS FANS

As a former die-hard sports card collector and dealer, as well as a telecard dealer for the past several years, I have witnessed a tremendous phenomenon. Many traditional sports card collectors are discovering a brand new collectible and are buying up non-sports, as well as sports-related phone cards.

Many of these collectors have totally switched from trading cards to telecards. Why? Low issue quantities.

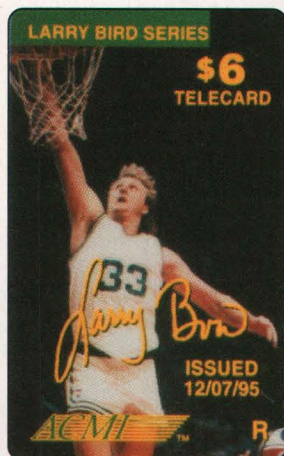

With most phone card issues currently at 5,000 or fewer, the long-term outlook should be one of substantial appreciation, since those quantities will probably not be enough to satisfy the long-term appetite for this collectible.

The second reason for the interest is intrinsic value. Collectors can use them to make domestic and international phone calls, thus providing built-in value. Though some may argue that using the phone time leaves the card in less than mint condition, no one will be concerned with the actual phone time five to 10 years down the road. Rather, the collector will just be happy to find one for his or her collection.

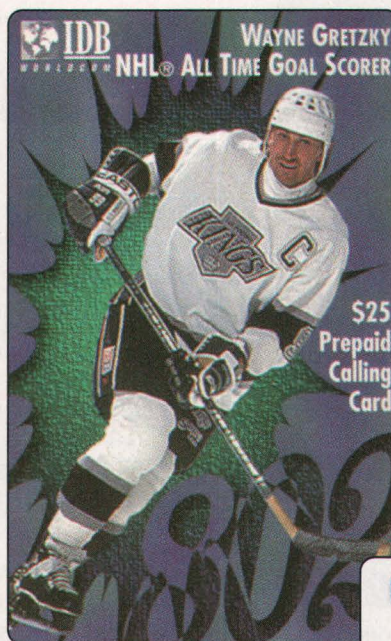

Unless the card is physically altered — with excessive scratches, cracking, fading or removal of the scratch-off — the card should still be considered in mint condition.

As a mint condition phone card increases in value, it is likely that a used, or less than mint-condition example will also appreciate. Remember, if 2,500 to 5,000 cards are produced now, there will never be more than that quantity available, even though the number of collectors might increase.

The final and probably most important reason why sports card collectors are now adding telecards to their list of collectibles is due to the market malaise in the trading card

ACMI, Larry Bird series, "R" card, $6 denomination, cards issued, $6 (5,000 cards issued), December 1995.

IDB Worldcom, Wayne Gretzky, $25 denomination, 5,000 cards issued, May 1994.

industry. The situation has been caused by too many products that are too expensive, and some that have no long-term value.

Baseball, basketball and hockey strikes, as well as tarnished athletes' images have aggravated the situation even further. Just ask yourself this question: Would you rather have another Cal Ripken Jr. insert from the hoards of baseball trading card issues, or one of the 2,500 Upper Deck phone cards of baseball's new Iron Man produced during early 1995?

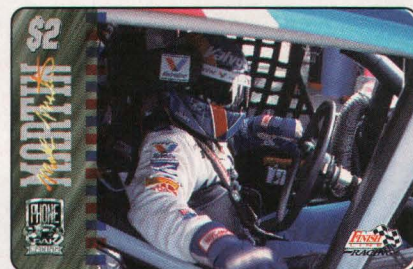

Next month, we'll look at a few of the most notable issues in the sports telecard collectibles market.

Bob Gourd (Bobby G)

The author is a former sports trading card dealer who currently operates "Bobby G's," a Florida-based phone card dealership.

GTE, Super Bowl XXIX, 5 units, 80,000 cards issued, January 1995.

Finish Line, Phone Pak, Mark Martin, $2 denomination, 10,000 cards issued, January 1996.

GTS/Upper Deck, Major League Baseball, Cal Ripken Jr., 15 minutes, 2,500 cards issued, April 1995.

CORPORATE CORNER

Companies continue to jump on the promotional phone card bandwagon with some very interesting cards. Phonecard Express recently hooked up with Tropicana Orange Juice to launch a promotion called "Blast into Breakfast." Consumers who purchased the orange juice at Meijer stores in Indiana, Michigan and Ohio could call a phone number on the carton and provide the UPC number. Winners received one of the 3,900 13-minute cards produced for the promotion.

OmniTel recently issued 750 colorful five-minute cards for Xerox. Produced exclusively for Mailboxes Etc. in Massachusetts, the cards were used as an incentive to try Xerox color copiers.

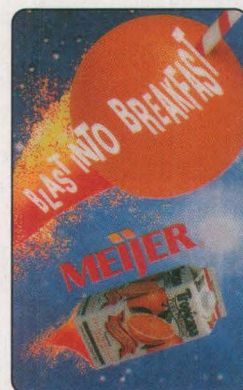

Global Key recently produced a five-minute Captain Morgan Spiced Rum card. I discovered the card while visiting a liquor store during the holidays, proving once again that if you keep your eyes open, you'll find phone cards just about anywhere. Boxes containing 750-mil. bottles bear a designation that a free five-minute phone card is inside. The card is extremely attractive... if you can find it.

SmarTel has produced a nice telecard for the popular Chex cereal brand of cereals. Every specially marked box of Multi-Bran Chex cereal includes either a reproduction or a real 10-minute phone card. The card was produced on thin paper, with lamination on one side.

Cornerstone Communications; NFL Quarterback Club 96; 5 minutes; December 1995.

Phonecard Express; Tropicana Orange Juice "Blast into Breakfast"; 13 minutes; 3,900 cards issued; November 1995.

OmniTel; Xerox/Mailboxes Etc.; 5 minutes; 750 cards issued; December 1995.

Global Key; Captain Morgan Spiced Rum; 5 minutes; November 1995.

ATS; Cleo "It's a Wonderful Life," 10 minutes; 1,500 cards issued; December 1995.

SmarTel; Multi-Bran Chex Cereal; 10 minutes; 300,000 cards issued; January 1996.

Sprint; Pizza Hut "Come Together," two-card set; 20 minutes each; quantity unavailable; January 1996.

Chances of winning a real card was one in five.

Sprint and Pizza Hut have teamed up for a great looking two-card set called "Come Together." The 20-minute cards feature the Norman Rockwell paintings, "Reunion" and "Gossip." The premiums were available at Pizza Huts in Tucson and Knoxville for only $2 each, with the purchase of any pizza. Hats off to Pizza Hut and Sprint for a very nice promotion at a great price.

Cornerstone Communications scored big with a five-minute card promoting the video game, "NFL Quarterback Club 96." The card was produced exclusively for K-Mart and is available with the game when purchased at the discount stores. Network services on the cards are provided by GTE.

ATS Network just wrapped up another great issue promoting Cleo (the largest producer of wrapping paper in the U.S.) and the movie classic, "It's a Wonderful Life." Fifteen hundred of the cards were produced, each with five minutes of time. The cards feature a scene from the movie and were available as part of a Gift Pack sent to wholesale buyers of wrapping paper.

That's it for this month. Keep checking the stores and your Sunday newspaper for phone card promotions, and above all, have fun collecting.

BABY BELL NOTES

Ameritech; Monument Circle, Indianapolis; 5 units; 10,000 issued; December 1995.

AMERITECH

The Midwest Baby Bell sent an attractive greeting card to special customers during the recent holiday season. The card captures the lighting of the "tree" on the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Circle in Indianapolis. The annual event is billed as the "largest Christmas tree in the U.S." Ten thousand of the telecards were produced and attached inside a matching greeting card.

BELL ATLANTIC

The possibility exists that the remaining unsold Bell Atlantic phone cards will be destroyed shortly. During late December, I was permitted to inspect the inventory of leftover cards. The bulk of the cards had been destroyed earlier, with the remaining inventory saved for sale to collectors by National Communications Consultants (NCC).

BELLSOUTH

Although BellSouth logos are already printed on the reverse of some Visa Cash cards, a formal announcement is anticipated next month about the chip cards that will be used in payphones during the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta. Visa Cash cards issued by three Atlanta banks (see story in March 1996 issue) will also be valid for use in special BellSouth payphones.

NYNEX

More information has come in about the NYNEX World Peace card (pictured last month). The design was created by Kevin Charles, an advertising design major at the Fashion Institute of Technology in Manhattan, N.Y. There were 15,000 of the $5 magnetic cards issued — 600 signed by the 21-year-old artist. Only one other NYNEX card has been available as an autographed product.

NYNEX has created a second and third Imaginary Change Card. The cards were created for design studies only, and never have been issued. Since the designs are often illustrated on NYNEX sales materials, many collectors believe actual cards exist. NYNEX officials insist that the cards will not be issued, however. The first design is identical to the cover of the NYC Yellow Pages, and features a doughnut and a cup of coffee. The second Imaginary card, a $5 denomination, depicts one of the yellow pay phones, while the third shows a similar image, but without the yellow phone.

NYNEX now has a home page on the Internet, with illustrations of their cards. The address is <http://www.nynex.com>.

One thousand yellow payphones accepting NYNEX magnetic cards are now available in New York. The special phones have been installed from Lower Manhattan to the Upper East and West Sides, as well as in the Bronx at the Payment Center, on Staten Island at the Ferry Terminal, and at Cadman Plaza.

While searching for used phone cards at the Staten Island Ferry Terminal in Lower Manhattan, I found five $1 comp cards. Unfortunately, all were damaged beyond collectibility, but it was quite a thrill finally discovering used phone cards in the U.S.

SUPER MARKET CARDS

When "this little piggy goes to market..."

By Nancy Blackburn

Shoppers are finding much more than food and prescriptions at grocery and drug stores these days. Moneycard collectors are pleased with the recent proliferation of cards available from supermarket and drug store chains, as well as from some of the smaller local markets.

Some of the stores offer cards from well-known carriers for purchase in the check-out line, right along with postage stamps and lottery tickets. Others are offered as a free promotional item.

Private label cards are being imprinted with store logos for purchase by customers. And even in these stores, collectors should be on the lookout for stored value cards.

Foodland Supermarkets in Hawaii is generally credited for producing the first grocery-related store phone card in the U.S. There were 5,000 of the Talk 'N Toss cards issued in October 1993 for Foodland stores on the islands of Hawaii, Maui, Kauai and Oahu.

Four hundred 30-minute cards were given away free to customers, with the rest sold for $9.99 each. Services were provided by Bottom Line Telecommunications (BLT) of Vancouver, Wash.

Talk 'N Toss has produced an impressive roster of high-profile private label phone cards available throughout the U.S.: Longs Drug Stores, Albertson's Markets and Thrifty/Payless in the West; Revco Drug Stores in the Mid-Atlantic and South; and Ace Hardware, Circle K (2,000 stores) and 7-Eleven (1,800 stores) nationally. Generic Talk 'N Toss cards are also available through vending machines at Safeway Markets in Arizona and at more than 200 Truck Stops of America.

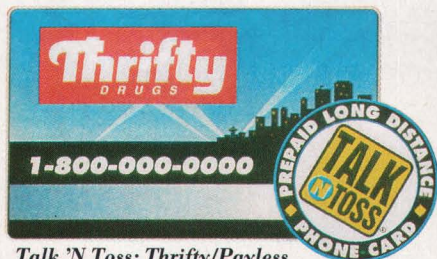

According to Jeffrey Penchina, vice president of sales/marketing of BLT, the Talk 'N Toss cards were recently part of "the largest promotion ever launched on a single day in the prepaid phone card industry."

On December 8, 1995, approximately 2,000 Circle K convenience stores across the country gave away more than 800,000 Talk 'N Toss limited-edition holiday-themed cards. The cards featured Santa Claus and his traditional Ho! Ho! Ho! "What better way to thank our customers for their patronage than to give them a free phone card during the holidays," explained Kristi Prior, Circle K category manager.

During the holiday season, customers who have film processed through Thrifty/Payless Drug Stores were offered free BLT five-minute cards for ordering three-inch prints, and 10-minute phone cards for four-inch prints. The Bottom Line Telecommunications; Circle K Phone Card; 30 minutes; quantity ongoing; October 1995.

30-minute cards normally retailed for $8.88, while the 100 minute version sold for $26.88.

During March 1995, Vons, California's largest supermarket chain, offered customers a free-with-purchase "Vons Is Value" three-minute phone card as part of its "Brand Month Celebration." Issued by USA Calling using Sprint's network systems, the cards were valid through June 15, with renewal available through credit card transactions.

Sprint Spree cards are currently available at the 400 Northern California Lucky Stores. Featuring attractive scenic views in denominations of $5, $10, $20 and $50, the phone cards have been advertised in weekly newspaper ads and at the checkout counter. Phone time is $.50 a minute.

Shaw's Supermarkets in New England include prepaid phone cards at store checkout stands. With the motto "Quality since 1860," the chain operates nearly 100 stores in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maine and Connecticut.

Phone Cards USA produced several cards for their 550 Thrift Drug/Treasury Drug stores on the eastern seaboard. In August 1994, Thrifty offered a $2 prepaid card with the purchase of three greeting cards. There were 50,000 of the $2 cards given away, and $10 and $20 denominations of the same design were available for retail sales.

In Thrifty's September 1995 "Back-to-School" promotion, customers who purchased $10 of school supplies received a special $5 phone card. More than 150,000 Thrift/Treasury cards were distributed during the past two years, with plans underway for three major promotions in 1996.

The San Diego-based retail marketing and promotions company has put together numerous distribution programs with several large retail chains. According to Alan Sklar, the company also supplies retail cards to more than one hundred "mom and pop" stores in Texas and California, and provides cards to half a dozen military bases, utilizing the artwork of well-known artists. Network time is carried through TelTrust.

One of the Phone Cards USA promotions offered a free $10 phone card if their North Carolina shoppers moved one of their prescriptions to a Super D drug store. A total of 20,000 cards were given out to new customers making the switch.

In another advertising campaign, newspaper customers in the South were invited to visit one of the 125 Harco Drug Stores and receive a free $5 phone card. Retail sales of their $4 (10 minutes) and $8 (20 minutes) prepaids have produced sales of almost 75,000 phone cards.

LLDS WorldCom issued 40 and 80-minute versions of the "Target Hotline Pre-Paid Calling Card." The cards have become popular staples in the Minneapolis-based store chain, and were mentioned by several respondents in last month's "Where to Find 'Em" survey.

Williams Consulting has produced custom phone cards for several stores in the Kansas/Nebraska region.

U.S. Long Distance; Shaw's Prepaid Calling Card; $10/$20 denominations; quantity unavailable.

MCI/J.D. Services; Checkers EZ Call; $5/ $10/ $20/ $50 denominations; $.33 per minute; quantity unavailable; 1995.

Checkers, a small chain of grocery stores in Wichita, advertises "All the best stuff is cheaper at Checkers." Their renewable cards are available from the cashier in $5, $10, $20 and $50 denominations, with time at $.33 per minute.

No Frills, a chain of 10 grocery stores in Omaha, offers telecards at a secured point-of-purchase rack located right at the check-out counter. Having the cards in front of the customer has been very effective, according to Bill Williams. The No Frills cards are rechargeable at $.285 per minute, with phone services provided by MCI.

Other food and drug stores using prepaid phone cards include Kroger, with a card featuring two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin; Walgreen's, with a 30-minute rechargeable Statue of Liberty card; Big Bear with an LCI card showing Ohio State battling Notre Dame during a classic 1935 football contest; Rite Aid, Revco and Eckerd drug stores; IGA, Loblaws, Meijer and Wawa supermarkets; and the mammoth 7-Eleven convenience store chain.

An innovative concept has been implemented by Comtel for Eastside Market in Providence, R.I. John Crawford, Comtel's vice president of marketing, describes the mag-striped Smart (Student Marketcard)

Card as a pure debit card that automatically interfaces at the point of sale, using existing swipe card readers.

Since Eastside Market is located near a college town, the concept of prepaying for food and sundry household items, as well as the option of blocking out purchases of certain items, has been well received by parents of the students. The stored-value card serves as both a prepaid debit card at the market and a phone card that can be recharged with store value.

According to Crawford, this is just the beginning of an endless technology horizon. And the benefits to the merchant are twofold: no checks or currency to be processed, and the payment is guaranteed.

A data base that includes customer purchase history can be used for inventory control, as well as incentive offers. Any consumer, regardless of credit history or age, can qualify for a debit card when pre-paying cash. Frequent-use customers are rewarded with free phone time or coupons.

A quick comparison of food store card calling rates indicate that cards purchased from grocery and drug stores vary from a high of $.50 to a low of $.25 a minute. Even though BLT's Talk 'N Toss cards range from $.25 to $.36 per minute, depending on the retailer's specific program (i.e., merchandising or couponing), the most important factor seems to be the amount of time on card — the larger the denomination, the cheaper the per minute price of the phone time.

So, if you think piggies still cry all the way home from the market...think again! These great cards serve to inform the public about the potential of moneycards — their uses, convenience and collectibility. That's not crying you hear — it's squeals of glee. Moneycards have arrived!
