CONFESSIONS OF AN ADDICTED BALL CARD COLLECTOR: Okay, I'll come clean: I'm a well-aged sports card junkie! It all started when I was about six years old and a rabid Yankee fan. I bought and traded for every possible Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra, and Whitey Ford that I could get my hands on. And yes, like many other kids growing up in the '50s, I used some of the cards in the spokes of my bike. I stopped collecting for awhile in the mid-60s when I became "too cool" for such trivial pursuits. Fortunately, my dear, wise mother held on to them for me, complete in the same old, tattered shoe box in which I left them.

During the early '80s — just about as soon as my oldest son could throw a ball — I began to buy cards again, this time in complete sets. By the early '90s, however, both my own and my son's interest in the same, old paper trading cards had begun to wane. Enter phone cards — specifically, sports-related phone cards. Now this is something that I can really get into — something that looks great, is useful, sturdy, and not everybody has...yet!

Among collectibles in the U.S., prepaid phone cards have been described as a "sleeping giant" ready to explode. The cards have been around Europe and Asia for almost 20 years now, and collecting them has become a huge hobby in those areas. In Japan alone, there are an estimated one million phone card collectors. Though admittedly still in its infancy in the U.S., international analysts are drooling over the hobby's potential here.

With more than one million hobbyists already in the fold, sports trading card collectors are a real key to the success of the phone card collecting hobby in the U.S.

It didn't take long for some of the biggest names in the business to take notice of the new regime. Traditional sports trading card manufacturers like Topps, Upper Deck, Score Board, Finish Line and Collector's Edge have already entered the competitive arena. Other companies such as Fleer and Donruss are preparing to diversify their traditional product lines soon.

Why collect phone sports-related phone cards? Here are some of the best reasons phone cards are quickly gaining acceptance among sports card collectors and dealers:

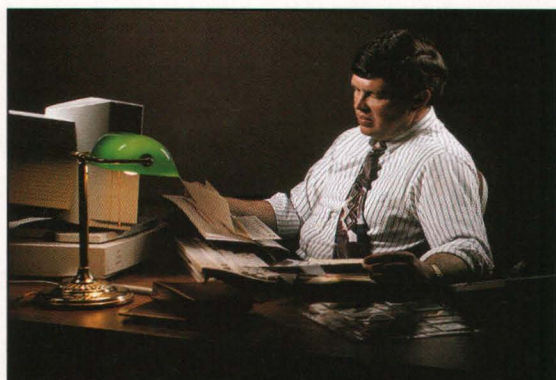

- All the same attraction and benefits as sports/trading cards plus the value of phone time
- Clearer image with increased longevity
- Quantities greatly limited compared to trading cards
- Sturdier than trading cards
- Tremendous growth factor predicted
- Cards still affordable; values are appreciating
- Cards have material value; after using phone time, it is still collectible
- Hobby recognized around the world
- Wider variety of subject matter on cards
- Popular chase or premium cards
- Great opportunity for an entrepreneur.

The argument gets even stronger when you compare the benefits of prepaid phone cards with traditional telephone credit cards. Phone cards are:

- More economical than telephone credit cards
- Security from theft is much greater
- Easier to pay than monthly long distance bill
- Popular gifts for friends, family, fans
- Great promotional tool for products/services
- Can be used any time, any place, to anywhere
- Enhanced features offer services beyond long distance calling.

As for me, I think I'll hang on to my paper trading cards; but, I probably won't invest any more money in them. Those resources will go towards the hobby of the 21st century — prepaid phone cards. My three kids are now collecting phone cards. I have just one unwritten rule for them — all the Mickey Mantles and Yogi Berras are mine!

Dial M for Marilyn

I am a new subscriber to your magazine and must tell you how happy I am that you have begun to publish a magazine dedicated to phone cards. I am, and have been for more than 35 years, a collector of Marilyn Monroe memorabilia. Recently I have been turned on to the new phone cards and am glad that I have a publication through which to watch for new issues.

I have already contacted several of your advertisers, and have ordered some existing sets of cards. I have noted in your Price Guide that there are only a few cards listed. My request is for someone there to tell me where I might obtain a complete list of Marilyn Monroe cards issued to date. Or better yet, why don't you do a feature (hopefully, a cover, too) on her phone cards. I think it would be one classy issue. But then I am prejudiced!

In any case, I would appreciate any help you can give me in keeping my collection of "absolutely everything" up to date. Many thanks.

Joseph Klinsky, Brooklyn, NY

You're in luck! The October issue of Moneycard Collector will feature a definitive piece on all of the Marilyn Monroe cards to date. Though we can't promise a cover shot, you can be assured that we'll bring you some new and interesting tidbits about the sexy telecard siren.

Guarantee authenticity

It was with great interest that I read the excellent article on Phone Card Fraud by Nancy Blackburn. Certainly, fraud is a cause for concern for all of us who produce and collect.

Please allow me to inform you and your readers that for collectors, POP Communications, Inc. has always taken steps to protect collectors from inadvertently purchasing a "knock off" of the original POPCARD. Our Collector's Edition POPCARD, available only from our corporate offices, includes a Certificate of Authenticity and Provenance. Short of the prohibitively expensive measures noted by Ms. Blackburn, we feel obligated to provide this guarantee to our customers who are serious about collecting. It is our opinion that the serious collector should be able to depend on the authenticity of his or her POPCARD, as well as the service we provide.

Michael R. Nyden, President, POP Communications, Inc.,

About the DNC...

I thought it would be instructive for new and old collectors to hear about my experience with the New York Telephone $1

Democratic Convention card. I started trying to locate one in the spring of 1993. There were none to be had! No dealers in the U.S. would quote a price, neither a high or low one. I finally found one from an employee of a dealer who absolutely would not part with it for less than $1,000. I tried to negotiate, but she was adamant. I finally paid the $1,000, so I could have a complete set to display at the A.N.A. show in Baltimore.

Later in 1993, a few cards appeared; some from people who had been at the convention, one from a reporter, one from a delegate. I paid much less than $1,000 for those. Then in early 1994, prices seemed to be hot again. I think collectors and dealers in places as far away as the U.K., Germany and New Zealand decided that they positively wanted a Democratic Convention card. I was selling cards to "dealers" overseas for $1,200 - $1,400. They were happy to get whatever they could, and there was still very little supply. I really believe that some collectors overseas paid as much as the often quoted $1,700.

The San Francisco Phair (March 1994) seems to be the high-water mark for this card. At the show I paid $1,200 for one card, not in its holder. Prices stayed high for a few months. By this fall (1994), however, additional supplies had appeared and were offered to dealers. I think the Newsweek article and the Business Week mention made people aware that somewhere in their attics or basements they had a valuable card that they had received for free. When many such people offered these cards to dealers, the market could not absorb the supply, so the price came down from $1,500 to $1,200 to $1,000.

No one knows how much this card is worth. Obviously many were thrown out. I truly believe that it will be the bellwether of the industry. If I had lots of money to invest for the long term, I'd buy this card from time to time, sort of like dollar cost averaging in a stock. By the way, I happen to think the $5.25 Democratic card is much better looking, but of course it doesn't have the romantic story of the $1 card. On the other hand, only 12,000 were made, and that really isn't very much for a card that is collected around the world.

I hope this history is helpful. Supply and demand really do determine prices in the long run. And if prices seem too high or too low, who's to say what the "right" price is for a collectible that is rare, but that few people can afford?

Roger Streit, International Phonecard Exchange, Montclair, N.J.

Congratulations

I have just had a chance to glance through the most recent issue of Moneycard Collector. Congratulations to your entire staff. It is an informative and fun to read chronicle of our industry. I am especially impressed with the Price Guide.

Again, congratulations on a fantastic publication.

THE READERS ALWAYS WRITE

Lower those eyes

In the April issue of Moneycard Collector, Steve Fritz gave us a fun tour of New York City while searching for places to buy phone cards.

Might I suggest that Steve was focusing his eyes in the wrong direction. Rather than scanning the phone book (very straining on the eyes), or looking over store fronts at busy signs in several languages (very straining on the neck), Steve should have been directing his gaze downward.

On my latest trip to the Big Apple, while walking from 47th Street to 6th Street to meet a friend for lunch, I found a phone card on the ground. It was a dirty, beat up, laminated paper card that had been out in the rain and stepped upon. It's yellow with blue printing, called The Instant Calling Card, with a $5 denomination. A graphic of a telephone handset is vertically positioned at the far right. It's issued by Vocall Communications Corp., carries their logo in the lower left corner and it's rechargeable with a credit card. The reverse has instructions in English and Spanish.

I had to pick it up — as beat up as it was. On a lark, I tried the numbers and got to use the last three minutes still available on the card! Now it's in my collection. It's not the prettiest card I own, and it certainly isn't in "mint" condition, but it's the only one with a story attached.

So Steve, look down. Maybe "...finding prepaid phone cards...in a supposedly advanced metropolis like New York City" is easier than you think.

John Scatturro, Binghamton, N.Y.

Include fax numbers

I like your journal very much, but I think there is a little problem for European collectors. In your stories, you list telephone numbers which do not work from Europe. Could you please include addresses and fax numbers so that we can order the cards ourselves from the phone card companies? I would like the addresses of Star Trek, Vista United, Cable & Wireless (USA), LDDS and Puerto Rico Telecom.

Steve Lasar, Luxembourg

Sorry, Steve; we sometimes forget that certain phone numbers may not work from all locations of our readers. Moneycard Collector initiated the practice of including phone numbers with new releases so that readers could call direct and order cards. We'll try to start including fax numbers, whenever possible.

The addresses you requested are Future Call (Star Trek), 1888 Century Park East, Suite 1900, Los Angeles, CA 90067; Vista United, 3100 Bonnet Creek Road, Lake Buena Vista, FL 32830; Cable & Wireless, 1919 Gallows Road, Vienna, VA 22182; LDDS, 515 Amite, Jackson, MS 39201. We currently have no address on Puerto Rico Telecom.

To use, or not to use

I have collected stamps for 27 years and recently began collecting prepaid telephone cards. I am rather confused and perhaps you can help me. I understand that to retain the collectibility and value of a card, one should keep them in unused, mint condition. Some of the cards I purchased come wrapped in cellophane; some do not. Most all of them carry an expiration date. Shall I go ahead and use up the phone time before they expire?

The cards still in the wrapper, are they still as valuable after the expiration date, if they haven't been unwrapped? How about if you use them before they expire?

Bill Sowers, South Bend, Ind.

The issues that you bring up are, indeed, very confusing because there are no definite answers at this point. Generally, collectibles kept in their original, mint condition will retain a higher resale value. But phone cards transcend the boundaries of most other collectibles. They have intrinsic or utilitarian value that many other collectibles do not have. Therefore, many believe that if there are no other over-riding reasons not to, they should be used.

Scott du Pont, highly respected collector and co-owner of Keep the Change phone card stores, recently revealed that he uses the phone time on most of the cards in his personal collection. He does, however, distinguish between regular cards and the rare, highly desirable collector cards with a small amount of phone time. Those he keeps in original, unwrapped condition, with PINs and scratch-offs intact, and phone time unused.

Searching rural America

As I read about the journey Steve Fritz had looking for phone cards in Manhattan, I thought about what could be found in rural America where I live. Living in Michigan I called Ameritech to see if anyone had their phone cards in my small town.

First of all, we have no public transportation in our community. Ten minutes from my house is the party store which I had been told had the cards. To my delight, they had the CoinSaver set. I got $2, $5, $10, and $20 cards.

That was it — no more cards in rural America for now. Flash! I just got a call from a friend — he's spreading a rumor that a Citgo Gas Station 30 miles from my house has the Ameritech sports series with $2 and $5 values, but not the $10 cards. At least two out of three isn't bad. I'm running to my car. Maybe later I can find the $10, and if not, I can always use the phone time.

Bye for now. Lost somewhere in rural America chasing phone cards!!!

Cam Wolff, Brighton, Mich.

Sounds like you enjoy the chase, but if not, there are sometimes easier ways to buy phone cards. Check out the ads in each issue of Moneycard Collector and call to order the cards. Or you can buy cards through the "New Issues" section of the magazine, where we list phone numbers of each issuer. If you want the cards immediately, try looking for Sprint cards in specially marked packages of Gillette disposable razors. You can find them at your local drug store or discount house. Another good place to find them is at 7-Eleven convenience stores. Keep looking... they're out there.

ALL THE NEWS FOR COLLECTORS

HT Technologies Announces Fine Art Cards Now Available To Collectors

'Alexander's World' Features San Francisco

©1995 Alexander's World

From first release, collectors have avidly sought the spectacular phone cards featuring the art of Alexander Chen. According to Dawn Glanz of MoneyCard Collector, "Given the artist's popularity, we hope to see more of Chen's cityscapes appearing on phone cards in the future." HT Technologies has taken heed and is announcing new Chen releases—this time featuring images of San Francisco. Following a 2-card panorama of SF's

Waterfront comes a 3-card depiction of Union Square, filled with fascinating detail and brilliant color, and capturing the spirit of San Francisco in a way only Alexander Chen can do.

This new part of "Alexander's World" will make a worthy addition to any phone card collection. And for the collector who already has Chen's New York cards, this release will be a necessary part of what may become the industry's most valued series.

New Release For Sports Series

HT Technologies and LDDS WorldCom find another collector's treasure with the issue of a phone card image of the legendary—and infamous—Chicago White Sox great, Shoeless Joe Jackson. The "Calling On History PhonePass™" series from LDDS WorldCom, Champion Sports and Premier Marketing Group continues HT's tradition of offering limited edition, and very rare, images of sports legends to phone card collectors. Given that these cards (such as the previously released Honus Wagner) utilize images which in their original formats have sold for over $600,000 the cards may represent the collector's only opportunity to possess one of these powerful sports portraits at an affordable price.

Shoeless Joe Jackson

Nature Comes To Phone Cards In New Releases

Busacca's Calla Lily

Art collectors have always responded to images of nature and collectors of phone card art are not exceptions. With this in mind, HT Technologies has announced the release of phone cards featuring nature—by artists Larry Taugher and Mark Busacca—elevating phone card art to a new level and leaving others playing "catch-up" once again.

Larry Taugher's work captures the beauty of nature so often overlooked by modern man, conveying nature's feeling of peace and serenity. The artist's meticulous attention to detail is captured in this 5-card series by HT showing animals in natural environments.

Mark Busacca's contribution, featuring elegant and graceful images of plants, presents the viewer with intricate and evocative works which are beautifully reproduced in this limited edition set featuring the bold colors and visual illusions for which Busacca is famous.

The success of these releases reflects the explosive growth of interest in fine art phone cards. They are a "must-have" for any serious collector.

Manilow Fans Call For Info.

HT Technologies pushes the limits of phone card collecting again by issuing the Barry Manilow International Fan Club card with BMIC and Stiletto Entertainment. Fans can receive concert and personal information about Barry Manilow when using the card to make calls. The first card, featuring a picture of Barry Manilow goes to the 2,000 most active club members. Other cards and other clubs will follow.

The official phone card of the USTA Dinner was this AT&T "Lucy" card; 10 minutes of phone time; 250 issued, April 1995, manufactured by Brilliant Color Cards.

SHOW SCORES HIGH, EXCEPT ON ATTENDANCE The International Phonecard Expo, held April 28-30 in San Francisco, attracted plenty of issuers and dealers, but few collectors and curiosity-seekers from the local community. Held at the beautiful Moscone Center in the "City by the Bay," the show featured more than 150 organizations with both new and older U.S. phone cards.

The Gala Dinner sponsored by the U.S. Telecard Association (USTA), drew more than 200 enthusiastic phone card collectors to the San Francisco Marriott on May 28. Each of the dinner guests received a very limited edition AT&T phone card commemorating the occasion.

Cable & Wireless, Cable Car (USTA Dinner), $3 face value, 500 issued, printed by Brilliant Color Cards, April 1995.

AmeriVox, USTA commemorative, 5 units, 500 issued, April 1995.

More than 100 rare and collectible phone cards and memorabilia were auctioned off to spirited bidders following the dinner. Among the most notable sales included three NYNEX internal remote memory test cards, $3,600; card number 1 of the USTA dinner, $2,000; a strip of 10 photographic proofs of the Jumbo Snoopy Christmas Card, $2,700; a four-card set of NYNEX laboratory test cards, $1,300; and a rare copy of AmeriVox's first card, America's Cup, $1,000. A total of $33,005 was raised "for the association."

In light of the modest public attendance at the most recent three industry shows this past spring, many are suggesting fewer industry-type (issuer) shows per year, with dealers supporting collector shows that offer phone card sections.

Moneycard Collector will continue to update readers as changes develop.

NEVER TOO YOUNG

Eight-year-old David Bryan made quite an impression as perhaps the youngest collector at the International Phone Card Expo in San Francisco.

A MINI MONEYCARD COLLECTOR. As eight-year-old David Bryan of Santa Clara, Calif., solemnly shook my hand, he reached into his shirt pocket and handed me his business card with the motto, "Never too young to start collecting prepaid phone cards."

His reputation had proceeded him as several exhibitors had already warned me of this distinguished young man at Moscone Center that I had to meet. The grandson of phone card collectors, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Frishcosy of Phoenix, Ariz., David was attending his first phone card show, The International Phone Card Conference and Exposition in San Francisco. Responding to the invitation for youngsters to attend free of charge on Children's Day, David's grandparents took the opportunity to introduce him to the fascinating world of phone cards.

Armed with a charming smile, business card and attache case, David's enthusiasm was a message that reflected the positive combination of today's youth and the modern technology of phone cards. According to David's mother, he is familiar with sportscard collecting, was enthralled with phone cards and had a ball at the show with Grandpa. Looks like this neophyte collector is a smart kid.

When asked about his favorite card, David thought for a moment, opened his attache case, and quickly sorted through a huge stack of cards to identify his two "best" cards – the California Sea Otter by HT Technologies and the Harp Seal, part of the Natural Selections photography collection of Mark J. Thomas and issued by ITC. His other favorites were several cards printed by ColorFast.

A quick glance through his briefcase confirmed the horrible truth – his collection of newly acquired show cards put my puny assortment of a few cards to shame. Of course, his favorite magazine is the one with Bart Simpson recently on the front cover – Moneycard Collector.

David is in second grade and his favorite subject is math. He has a four-year-old sister named Samantha. His mother assured us that grandpa had shown David how to take proper care of his cards and only under David's supervision and protective admonitions are adults allowed to examine his collection: "Just look... do not take them out of the holders... you cannot touch... you are holding them wrong." He is especially wary of his little sister right now because "you can't play with these cards."

Grandma and Grandpa, thank you for bringing David with you. David, we welcome you to the world of moneycard collecting.

COMIC RELIEF

Public Access Telephone (Telephone Express), Phoenix Con II, art by Todd McFarlane, 3 minutes of phone time, 1,500 issued, May 1995.

PATCO PUSHING COMIC CARDS TO NEW LIMITS Public Access Telephone Co. (PATCO) and Entity Comics have taken the next step in comic-related phone cards. The May issue of Entity's Zen Intergalactic Ninja had two different versions printed. The first version is the standard comic of the interstellar warrior. The second "collector," version of the title included a PATCO phone card inserted as part of the package.

"To my knowledge, this is the only time that a phone card has been included with a comic," says PATCO's Stephen Saunders.

Thirty-six hundred of these collector editions of Zen have been printed, and pre-orders from the comic community virtually assured a sellout. The premium product was priced at $4.95, or two dollars more than the cardless version.

Designed by hot artist Joel Orbeta, the Zen prepaid card is actually an interactive contest card. In exchange for information, callers were eligible to win a variety of prizes, according to Saunders.

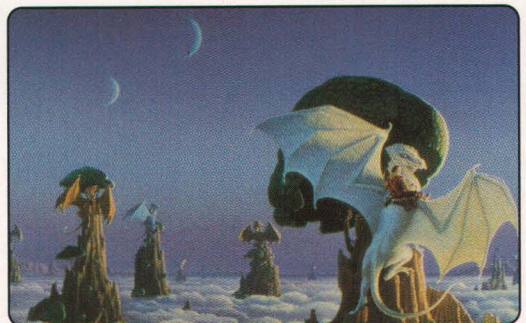

Currently, the only other comic publishers who are issuing phone cards are Marvel (through GTS Inc.) and Tekno Comix (with Frontier Communications). Most other comic book-licensed phone cards are being done by individual artists.

"Many comic publishers aim for a younger demographic than the average phone card collector, so they don't yet see much of a market there," Saunders explained. "And there are still publishers out there who don't believe the market is large enough yet."

Still, business is picking up, according to the issuer. "Last year at this time, I was getting several calls a week. Now I get about a half-dozen calls a day for comic-based phone cards. The comic industry is finally waking up and realizing this is something they should pursue."

Saunders is currently working on some projects that he says will "really knock your socks off." PATCO has produced comic cards featuring the work of fantasy artists Michael Whelan, Boris Valejo and Julie Bell, the Hildebrandt brothers, and the world-famous Olivia. Saunders has also just secured a deal with top artist Todd McFarlane and his hot-selling character, Spawn.

CORE BOARD LANDS 'MAJOR' PHONE CARD

SLICENSE It's been quite a year for Score Board/Classic. Following on the heels of three consecutive card pack sell-outs with Assets, Assets II and Assets Racing, the trading card giant produced its first non-sports card release – "Springtime in Atlanta" – which just happened to be the first card officially issued by Coca-Cola.

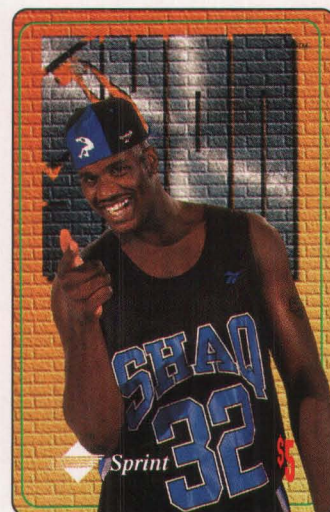

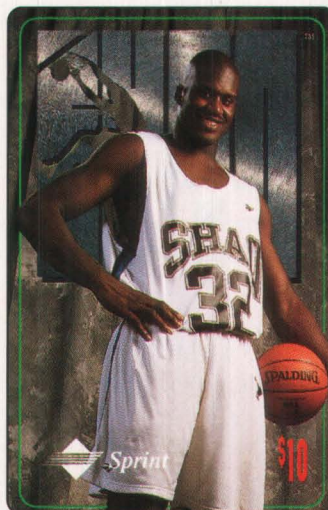

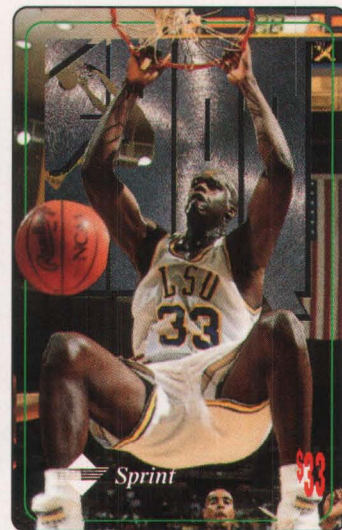

Far from resting on its laurels, Score Board has come up with two more blockbuster announcements – a stand-alone set of cards featuring Orlando Magic's hoop superstar Shaquille O'Neal, and a new licensing agreement with the Major League Baseball Players Association (MLBPA) and Major League Baseball Properties (MLBP).

The new Shaq set will be comprised of five cards with $2, $5, $10, $25 and $33 denominations. The suggested retail price of the complete set will be $75, with each card having a phone rate of $.60 per minute. Production will be limited to 5,000 sets, with release date set for July.

The new licensing agreement will allow Score Board/Classic to become only the second company to legally manufacture, distribute, promote and sell prepaid telephone cards in the U.S. featuring players, team logos and uniforms from Major League Baseball. No details of individual cards were available at press time.

"We believe memorabilia collectors and baseball enthusiasts will be attracted to phone cards that feature Major League Baseball players and bear the MLBPA and MLBP logos, as well as official team and league logos," said Score Board Chairman and CEO, Ken Goldin. "These licenses should enable us to build upon our presence in the phone card market, while creating a very valuable phone card franchise based on Major League Baseball.

"We entered the phone card business with the expectation we would make our money solely from Sprint's sales of Foncards (Sprint's brand name) featuring our athletes," he continued. "This was expected to be marginal during the first 18 months of the agreement and would expand as their phone card business expanded."

But collectors had other ideas. Classic Games sold a whopping $3.5 million of their products during April, accomplishing the feat with just two product lines – Assets II and Assets Racing.

"We're looking at phone cards as a major growth area for our company and have been very encouraged by our results to date," Goldin said. "Our goal is to expand phone cards into a significant revenue base for the company in the future."

"The phone card market in Europe is a billion-dollar industry. As we enter the information super highway, phone cards will be a big part of the picture. From a utility point of view, as well as a collectibles point of view, phone cards are here to stay."

Score Board/Classic has always been known as a sports trading card company. But if phone card collectors have anything to say about it, that perception could be altered with the speed of an NBA fast break.

Score Board/Classic, Shaquille O'Neal five-card set, $2/$5/$10/$25/$33 denominations, $.60 per minute, 5,000 sets, July 1995.

BIG HIT!

GTS 'SPORTS' NEW SUMMER PRODUCTS The "Boys of Summer" are back and so is GTS with three new baseball-related sets of phone and entertainment cards. Among the latest sports issues from the New York-based issuer are the Major League Baseball (MLB) FanFest card, a complete 30-team set of MLB team logo cards, and a three-card set commemorating the first game at the Colorado Rockies' new Coors Field.

The 1995 FanFest card features the red, white and blue official logo of the MLB '95 All-Star Game, held July 11 at The Ballpark in Arlington, Texas. Last year's counterpart, the GTS/Upper Deck Red Stockings card, became one of the most sought-after cards of the year among sports card collectors.

Most of this year's cards were distributed free to ticketholders at the FanFest show, the annual extravaganza held prior to the all-star game.

The remaining quantities were allocated to dealers, or included free with the purchase of 15 of the MLB Logo cards.

The FanFest card is packaged in an envelope and will be considered an MLB commemorative. Each of the 15,000 cards include three minutes of actual long distance phone time.

"These cards will be the equivalent of the Super Bowl cards this year," said Paul Silverstein of GTS. "They're the first cards officially issued by Major League Baseball. The giveaway is important in the fact that Major League Baseball chose to take a chance with a relatively unknown product,"

GTS, Baseball FanFest card, three minutes of phone time, 15,000 issued, July 1995.

Silverstein added.

"They could have given away hats, balls, or virtually any baseball-related product, but they decided on phone cards. It's a significant opportunity for us to introduce new people to phone cards and show them how they work."

There will be 30 of the new team logo cards — one for each of the existing Major League Baseball franchises, along with the two recently awarded franchises in Phoenix and Tampa. The artwork features team logos prominently displayed over a screened version of the emblem. Three thousand cards of each team have been produced, with each card including five minutes of actual phone time and priced at $6.

Both sets of cards were available at the FanFest, and GTS will be marketing and promoting the cards at the 16th annual National Sports Collectors Convention in St. Louis, July 24-30.

"What we're trying to do is move the phone cards to the mass consumer market through low-cost products," Silverstein explained. "We wanted a $6 card so that consumers will want to try one out."

The Coors Field set may well be the most heavily licensed cards ever produced in the U.S. Issued in conjunction with Alliance Telecom International (ATI), the cards were the first ever to receive the blessing of both the league (Major League Baseball) and the player's association (Major League Baseball Player's Association). In addition to those two licenses, the cards were approved by the Coors Brewing Company and Phoenix Communications. A portion of the proceeds will help support a local Colorado Little League program.

GTS/Alliance Telecom, Coors Field set, each with two audio replays (no long distance time), 2,000 issued in initial run, June 1995 release.

The three cards feature an aerial view of Opening Day at the new Coors Field, along with images of the first pitch and Dante Bichette's dramatic game-winning 14th inning home run. Each of the cards offers no phone time but instead includes two audio replays from the historic contest.

The cards have been offered locally over Denver television stations through ATI for a package price of $19.95 (plus shipping & handling), which includes the three cards and a beautiful poster from Brad Geller. The cards can be ordered by calling (800)861-6156.

And there is still more baseball in the works at GTS. The company is now preparing a new release of authorized MLB and MLBPA phone cards. The new cards, produced along with Upper Deck, are expected to include some of today's hottest rookies. As of press time, GTS was still deciding on the player list, but it is anticipated that the cards will be priced individually at about $12 each.

Though the lengthy labor dispute between Major League Baseball and the Major League Baseball Players Association may have damaged the sales of some card products, GTS never seemed to skip a beat.

"The baseball strike certainly affected the trading card industry, but we need the support of the collector community to enrich the hobby," the GTS official said.

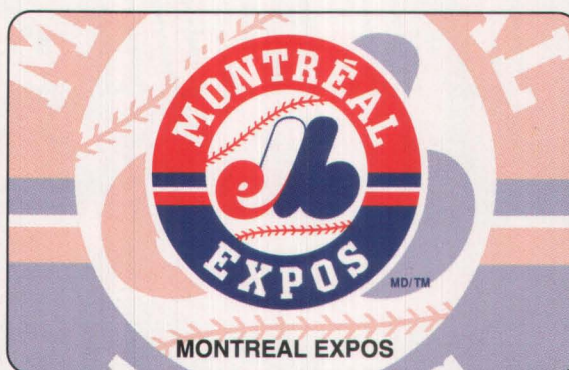

"Right now, we're producing very limited quantities of phone cards, as compared to trading cards. Our products are still very new to the marketplace, which means we're not ready to produce anywhere near the numbers available to the baseball card market."

The end result is GTS cards have done quite well in the primary, as well as in the secondary market. The issuer's first Major League Baseball series (April 1995 Moneycard Collector) sold out in a matter of weeks — long before the strike was settled.

"It simply proved that in the phone card market there was strong interest in certain players. And once the strike was over, we saw the sales volume get even stronger."

Strike or no strike, collectors can pretty much expect GTS to continue its role as a leader in sports-licensed cards. Right now, they're playing hardball in the big leagues, and they're having a lot of fun doing it.

USComNet and Kroger Food and Drug have produced and marketed one of the first sets of golf celebrity phone cards with two of the biggest names in the sport - Jack Nicklaus and the Memorial Tournament.

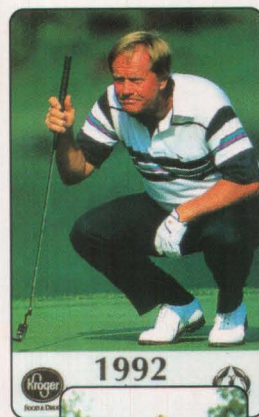

Working in conjunction with USComNet and Golden Bear International (GBI), Kroger tied the promotion to the world-famous Memorial Tournament held at Muirfield Village Golf Club during early June. Kroger made the four-card set available to its Columbus, Ohio area customers for just $7.99, which also included grocery coupons.

In addition to tournament shots of the "Golden Bear," each card included five minutes of long distance telephone time.

The entire production of 25,000 sets was sold out at the 60 local grocery stores. An additional autographed collector series was also produced in limited quantities.

AMERICA'S MOST WANTED

This month's listings and those that didn't make the final list read like a "who's who" in collectible corporate America – McDonald's, Coca-Cola, Dunkin' Donuts, Star Trek, Nike, Red Dog Beer, Kathy Smith (Who?) Exercises, A&W Root Beer, Ford, Disney, Union 76, Hallmark. Whew!

What happened to all the classic cards – the old, traditional ones? Well, I suppose the oldsters need a little rest. There sure aren't enough of the classic cards to go around, and the brash upstarts need to take over for awhile to give the oldies a time to rest.

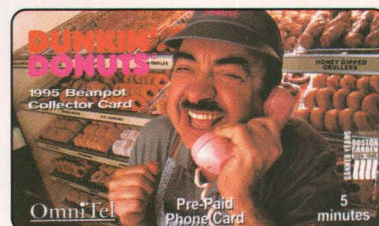

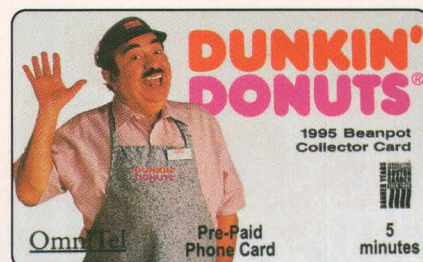

3 NAT HAWAII PACIFIC NATIONAL SPORTS CARD EXPO North

American Telephone (NAT) makes frequent appearances on our list because of its excellent user cards for tourists. They surprised everyone, however, with the 2,500-card issue at this year's Hawaii Pacific National Sports Card Exposition. Featuring Kauai's McDonald's logo on the front, the card completely outsold Sprint's entry for the Expo – a card that merely promised a donation to the Ronald McDonald House without showing the Golden Arches. The image makes all the difference.

4 OMNITEL DUNKIN' DONUTS SET

OmniTel's entry into America's Most Wanted is the unusual 2 x 5-minute 1995 Dunkin' Donuts Boston Gardens Beanpot shootout cards reported by two of our Florida dealers. I suspect a corporate overage, but the cards are quite interesting.

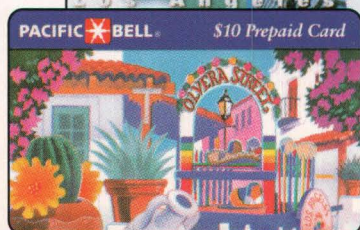

1 SCORE BOARD WORLD OF COCA-COLA "SPRINGTIME IN ATLANTA"

The price has quickly risen beyond the $100 level on this 10-minute card, and the calls still continue. The problem is that the current international and U.S. markets can absorb 5,000 to 10,000 cards or sets near issue price and only 2,500 were issued. The action was like a classic land grab.

2 PACIFIC BELL INAUGURAL SET OF 3

More orderly was PacBell's set of $5, $10, and $20 issues of late 1994 – Olvera Street, Numbers, and Los Angeles Scenes. This set will endure the test of time since it is from an RBOC. Soon it and future issues will be available by mail order. Telcos seem to forget collectors in their tariff filings and get bombarded with requests they cannot fulfill, both here and in Canada.

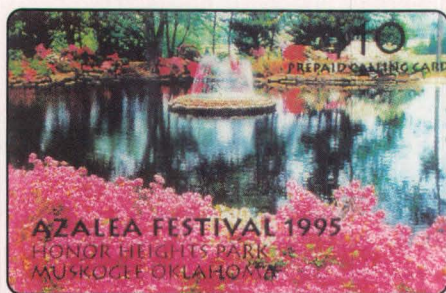

5 FUTURE CALL 10-UNIT STARFLEET ACADEMY

A splendid card in support of the recent International Phone Card Expo in San Francisco. This 10-unit Star Trek Starfleet Academy card may have convinced everyone that in order to be classified as a telephone card, it must be capable of making an actual telephone call.

6 HT TECHNOLOGIES AZALEA

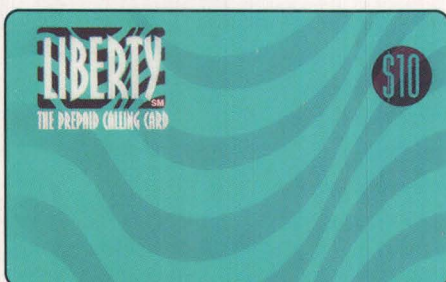

FESTIVAL HT and LDDS quietly issued a set of two notable phone cards for the Azalea Festival in Muskogee, Okla. Only 1,000 sets were available with just 600 retained for the collector community.

The 10-unit card is readily available because the mintage is 5,000, but all the five-unit cards ended up in Oklahoma. There are no less than five corporate sponsors' logos printed in color on the back of the card, one of which just happened to be McDonald's. This one should go far.

7 LIBERTY/QUEST $10 WAVES

As customary each month, at least one low-rate-per-minute "use" card makes our Most Wanted list. This month's top seller is Quest's $10 Waves cards, which show tremendous popularity in the Florida tourist market.

8 SPRINT MCDONALD'S 40TH ANNIVERSARY SET

We are just recovering from the long series of telephone calls requesting the highly controlled Sprint McDonald's two-card set, commemorating the 40th anniversary of the original McDonald's in Illinois. The cards carry 50 minutes of phone time, and only 1,000 were produced. Why, I don't know, unless emus rule the corporate McDonald's roost. Can we say "sand dune," boys and girls? Five thousand to 10,000 cards would have given a lasting McDonald's advertisement. Now, we'll have 1,000 mini-ads carefully locked away in a bank vault, too valuable ever to be seen!

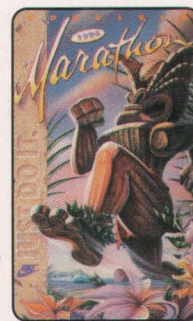

Well that's it, and the amazing thing among all the respondents is the lack of overlap between their reports. It is still imperative to receive all the lists and read all the ads to obtain the full complement of cards. Thanks to Acme Telecards (800)405-2263; B&B Collectibles, (909)466-1666; Steve Eyer (217)864-4321; International Phone Card Exchange (201)857-2121; Keep the Change (407) 629-3273; North Americards (206) 641-6057; and Sears Phone Card Department (813) 791-7535.

9-10 There's a big traffic jam near the end of the ratings this month, so we'll just list them and let readers sniff at the ones they think don't belong. Attack!

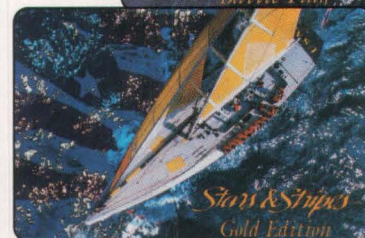

LDDS NIKE HONOLULU

MARATHON Many of these 10-unit cards were taken to Japan by the Japanese runners, and ignored by the U.S. runners; so we have an overage and the dealers are quick to spot a good deal for their collectors. I've seen one other Nike card, but only in specimen form, not in issued form. So we may have a first here.

LDDS AMERICA'S CUP

Set of 6; 75 units; 1995. This may not be the coffee table bragging set of 1995, but I'll bet that plenty of New Zealanders took them home. A lovely race to watch and a lovely set of cards.

SPRINT/ASSETS ANFERNEE HARDAWAY

These one-minute cards are making big headway in Florida. In case you are a functional illiterate regarding basketball, "Penny" Hardaway is Orlando Magic's outstanding point guard. And yes, I had to ask!

TELECOMM USA $6 COCA-COLA 600 New from Collector's Advantage and TeleComm USA, this is the latest Winston Cup stock car race card. This year, the Coca-Cola logo grew, but the best one is last year's original, and it is still the company's best card.

PROMOTIONS

Welcome to the first installment of a new feature in Moneycard Collector which focuses exclusively on promotional phone cards. As the number of these cards continues to grow, more and more hobbyists are starting to focus on these types of cards. The reasons are simple: many of these products or companies are household names that everyone can relate to, and in the years to come they will be viewed as collectible Americana. This column will inform readers about some of the more popular selling cards, as well as upcoming promotional cards and how to get them.

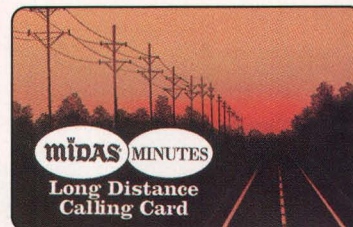

The big news this month concerns two major companies preparing major promotions. The first concerns a major cereal manufacturer which has teamed up with Sprint to produce five to 10 million phone cards. Details were sketchy at press time and the name of the cereal company was still under wraps. With the success of Kellogg's phone cards overseas, however, don't be surprised if it turns out to be that company. No further information was available other than the promotion was scheduled to begin by mid-summer.

The other big news concerns one of the largest manufacturers of stereo speakers in the world, BOSE. Recently at a national sales meeting in Canada, the company handed out 2,000 cards, each with 45 minutes of time supplied by OmniTel.

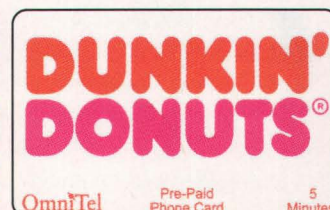

Due to the overwhelmingly positive response from employees, BOSE has purchased two million minutes of phone time from OmniTel to be used for Sprint, Midas Minutes calling card, five minutes of phone time, quantity unknown, March 1994.

CDG, A&W Root Beer card, $20 denomination, 600 issued, February 1995.

OmniTel, Dunkin' Donuts employee card, five minutes of phone time, 17,000 issued, March 1995.

an upcoming phone card promotion utilizing a totally different card. The BOSE card currently sells for $35.

A few other promotional cards that are selling well include the Sprint Midas Muffler card which recently expired. The card was available in the Northeast last year and could be picked up at selected Midas Muffler shops when certain services were performed on your car. The card currently retails in the $10-$12 range.

One of the best looking cards recently has been the big-selling $20 A&W Root Beer card produced by CDG. Only 600 of these were produced and were only available to A&W personnel. Price-wise, this card has started to move and now goes for approximately $35.

Finally this month, we take a look at the latest Dunkin' Donuts card produced by OmniTel. This is a five-minute card produced internally for Dunkin' Donuts employees and is not for sale to the general public. A whopping 17,000 were produced, and the card now sells for $10-$12.

That's it for this month. Good luck as you continue in your search for new promotional cards, and remember to keep looking in your Sunday paper coupon section.

Patriotic images popular on American phone cards

By Susan McDonald

What's one of the most popular themes on American phone cards? Automobiles, comics and sports are all popular in their own right, but you just can't beat patriotic themes for a sure-fire collectible.

Few images of our nation's history evoke the American spirit as powerfully as the bald eagle. The nation's bird is a symbol of strength and freedom recognized around the world. And that makes this majestic creature a popular subject for telecard designers.

An eagle is prominently featured on most AmeriVox cards as the highlight of the company logo — the proud raptor's head emblazoned on a red, white and blue map of the United States.

But AmeriVox doesn't stop there. Illustrations of eagles provide the artistic theme for several of the company's telecards. One of the most stunning is the portrayal of an eagle's head and a bright rainbow-striped map of the world on a black background created by artist Dana Nyson.

"It's a very well known card," explained Chris Garibaldi of North Americards in Seattle. "It still gets a lot of attention, especially overseas, because of the artwork. It's a really nice-looking card and there are not that many of them around."

AmeriVox, Nyson 1 World Eagle, $10 face value, 11,111 issued, August 1993.

AmeriVox issued 11,111 of the Nyson 1 — World Eagle cards in August 1993. Face value on the cards is $10, and they're now fetching about $42.

AmeriVox's "Wind Beneath Your Wings" also features an eagle — this one soaring over an amber desert landscape with brown hills and a red sun in the background. Two thousand of these attractive cards were issued Oct. 1, 1993, with a denomination of $20. They currently sell for around $240.

AT&T's Americana series of TeleTickets issued May 1992, includes the American Bald Eagle card, along with such U.S. landmarks as the Statue of Liberty, Grand Canyon and New York City Skyline. The eagle cards feature a full-frame shot of the bird's regal profile, its yellow eye fiercely staring ahead.

The message of Sprint's Bald Eagle instant FONCARD is as plain as the nose-on-your-face — patriotism. The eagle's head is front and center, with Old Glory filling the background. Sprint issued 46,000 of these cards in September 1992, each with a face value of $10. They're selling now for around $20.

Another well-known patriotic symbol is the Statue of Liberty. And like the bald eagle, Lady Liberty has been portrayed in many ways by Sprint, Bald Eagle, $20 face value, 46,000 issued, September 1992.

AmeriVox, Lincoln Memorial, $10 face value, 5,000 issued, July 1993.

many different issuers. Worldlink's very first telecard features a golden, glowing straight-ahead shot of the statue bathed in a shower of fireworks. "Because it's a first issue, that makes it a collectible card," Garibaldi said.

Released June 1992, there were 38,000 cards with face value of 10 units, and 2,000 cards each of the 25 and 50-unit varieties. Just 300 50-unit cards were issued with folders, and those are worth $170.

Worldlink stayed with the theme, producing other Statue of Liberty cards, including a distant silhouette with the Stars and Stripes in the foreground in January 1994, and a February 1994, version looking up at the Lady's face.

Also very collectible because it's very rare is the Liberty from the Air card by GPT. A Plessey payphone card issued in 1987, it provides an aerial view of the famed monument. There were 1,500 of the 1,000-unit cards issued, with the current value at just over $1,000.

ACMI produced an even different view — a backlit silhouette, all gold and orange, facing away from the viewer. And the Lady with the Lamp is a featured player in the NYNEX four-card Ellis Island series, as well as in the lives of many American families.

Between 1892 and 1954, 90 percent of all U.S. immigrants came through Ellis Island, located one mile off the southern tip of Manhattan. And for most of those 20 million people, the Statue of Liberty was their first glimpse of this new homeland.

The NYNEX cards offer four different colorful illustrations of the immigrants' seaside port of entry, including ships, buildings and, of course, the Statue of Liberty. Portions of an American flag border the tops of each card, and they all fit together to form one picture.

There were 50,000 sets originally issued during May 1993, but NYNEX ended up shredding around 2,000. The cards are now priced at $50 a set.

Other prominent U.S. monuments also have found their place in telecard history. Garibaldi calls the AmeriVox autograph series "a classic." The eight-card series features historic sites like the Lincoln Memorial, with the former president's signature scrawled across it. "There is extra interest in these cards because of the autographs." The monument series was issued in 1993 and can be purchased for about $25.

But America's symbols aren't limited to eagles and monuments. Patriotism is in the eye of the beholder. Take the Elvis Presley Army card by AmeriVox. The "King" is pictured in his Army uniform with the Stars and Stripes behind him. Four-thousand of the cards were issued in 1993, with face value $11.

How about the ACI Man on the Moon card commemorating NASA's 25th anniversary? Or the Sprint Baseball and Apple Pie card as a slice of Americana?

And finally there's the America's Cup card, the first-ever AT&T telecard. "An absolutely wonderful, very sought-after card," according to Garibaldi. Issued in 1992, these cards were given only to the sailing crews and syndicates racing that year for the America's Cup prize. "It was a gift, and a way to introduce the card," the West Coast dealer explained. No one is quite certain exactly how many were issued, but best estimates are approximately 250 in English and 70 each in French, Japanese and Italian.

"They came in an envelope and were handed out very quickly," Garibaldi said. The current value is $1,800 for the English versions and $2,500 for the others.

"I don't know how many collectors out there specialize in patriotic cards," Garibaldi concluded, "but many of them are very popular." The Statue of Liberty and others are popular symbols of the U.S. They symbolize freedom and therefore will always be highly collectible."

God bless America and Happy Independence Day!

SERVICE BUREAUS HELPING COLLECTORS ACQUIRE CARDS A continuing frustration for many collectors may be on its way to being eliminated with the growth of businesses specializing in fulfilling phone card orders.

One such firm is INET Telecommunications of San Luis Obispo, Calif. Card issuers which work with INET can specify whether they want live operators or a computerized order-taking system. The firm also offers full packaging services, including matching card data to the packaging, tipping cards onto paper carriers, stuffing/inserting and shipping via virtually any carrier the issuer chooses. Also, INET can arrange for establishing standing orders from collectors and processing credit card information.

BABY BELL NOTES

Ameritech

There's a little-known Coin$aver card that's still being sold in stores. It is a $20 card, with a red background. On May 6th, a Frank Thomas card was given away to the first 20,000 fans at a Chicago White Sox game. An entirely new line of cards is in the works, and trials are being planned for Chicago and Grand Rapids. Inserting complimentary cards in billing statements is one possible scenario under consideration. A big promotion is also possible later this year. A good bet would be something great for the Democratic National Convention, to be held in Chicago in 1996.

Bell Atlantic

The James Earl Jones cards (see story on page 46) include the same artwork as the Premier Edition set – but with variations. There are subtle differences in the degree of shading on the $5 cards, as well as color differences between the $10 cards. The blue background design is also inverted on the $20 Jones card.

BellSouth

A set of three remote memory cards has been placed on sale in Atlanta, Ga. The trial cards will be active during a six-month period and can only be used in the Atlanta calling zone. The set includes the $5 Georgia Dome (30,000 produced); $10 Children Painting a Mural (60,000 produced); and $20 Atlanta Skyline at Night (30,000 produced) cards. Also unveiled was a $2 High Museum complimentary card, which is not for sale but given away to prospective customers. It may become a very difficult card for collectors to obtain, since only 4,000 were printed.

To further entice collectors, a specially-designed "Welcome South" set was issued, consisting of a $5 and $10 card. The 5,000 sets were only available for those who stood in line at the Atlanta Welcome South Visitor Center in downtown Atlanta. Cards are planned to coincide with the upcoming 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. Since Atlanta is the headquarters for Coca-Cola, we can only hope there will be a tie-in with this popular theme. Collectors and dealers may order any of the cards at (800)349-7481.

NYNEX

Busy as beavers, NYNEX will soon issue its first private cards. The $5 and $10 cards have been ordered by New York University, for sale on its campus, where the special yellow payphones are being installed. Ten thousand cards will be printed, with a portion reserved for automatic shipment to NYNEX Collector Club members. NYNEX is absolutely the most collector-friendly of the Baby Bells.

The $15 annual membership fee has repaid itself perhaps as much as four-fold in less than six months. For example, a new $1 comp card was included with the first newsletter. This card is similar to the $1 comp card included in the Inaugural Series set, except the lettering at the bottom is blue on white, rather than white on blue. Another complimentary card is in the works, and will feature the simple pictorial equation CARD + PHONE =

GLOBE. An exclusive Collector Club telephone card has been designed, and will shortly be printed. Call (800)70-NYNEX to join the club. The yellow payphones that accept NYNEX's magnetic cards are now being installed at a rate of about 50 per week. Look for advertising on phone cards soon, which will be marketed by Transportation Displays, Inc., who sell advertising in and on various transit systems.

A different business unit at NYNEX is working on remote memory cards, and is looking into other technology as well. These products will eventually be made available to the rest of the areas served by NYNEX.

Pacific Telesis

The long-promised quantity information for the first card issues will soon be provided. In the meantime, an "approximate maximum" figure has been provided for the Jolly cards, but not information on how many cards were printed, how many were sold, how many were destroyed, and how many might still be in storage. Similarly, information on the first edition cards has yet to be made public. Let's hope all of this data will soon be in print.

PacBell emphatically denies that its new ethnic card will feature San Francisco's Chinatown, though one of their retail dealers claims to have seen the card's design. A new tariff was scheduled for June 1, allowing card sales throughout the entire state of California. The new ethnic card series was scheduled for introduction at that time. Even though the editorial deadline for this issue of Moneycard Collector was May 31st, PacBell wouldn't budge about giving us detailed information that will be made public the following day. All that was revealed was that a new California series will be introduced, and a $50 card will be issued, as apparently their trials have indicated this is a necessary denomination. The company will attempt to sell a commemorative version of the $50 card, apparently aimed at collectors. Ten thousand will be issued.

U S WEST

Plans continue for U S WEST to install 16,000 chip card style payphones in selected cities within the company's 14 state region. Cities getting phones include Seattle, Portland, Phoenix, Denver and Minneapolis. U S WEST has hinted that new card designs will be used, that the cards will be reflective of the cities, and that related complimentary cards will be issued. U S WEST is also collector-friendly, and said all cards will be available from its permanent collector sales number of (800)739-3339. The telco is currently experimenting with an Internet Home Page.

AS THE BELL TOLLS

BELL ATLANTIC SPOTLIGHTS JAMES EARL JONES Bell Atlantic has become the first Baby Bell to issue a series of phone cards bearing the photograph of a Hollywood star. James Earl Jones has long been featured in Bell Atlantic's creative and original TV commercials, one of which involved a half-dozen Elvis impersonators. His voice is the first you hear when you call directory assistance. Now Jones has signed an exclusive contract restricting his endorsements solely to Bell Atlantic.

The regular James Earl Jones phone card set includes $2, $5, $10 and $20 cards. A special $5 DC-Only card will also be available in limited quantities. The color and background on each card is the same as those in what Bell Atlantic now refers to as their "Premier Card 1994 Version set."

The James Earl Jones cards were issued in quantities of 25,000, 20,000, 25,000 and 25,000 for the regular $2, $5, $10 and $20 denominations, with 5,000 of the $5 DC-Only cards. There are no future plans to reprint any of the cards.

One dramatic departure from the Premier Card 1994 set is a serial number and quantity printed on the obverse (front) of the new cards. The serial number also appears on the reverse, and on the instruction sheet insert. One hundred $2 cards were autographed by Jones, 10 of which will be sold at a fund-raiser sometime in the future. While the cards were officially issued in May 1995, they have a 1994 copyright on the reverse.

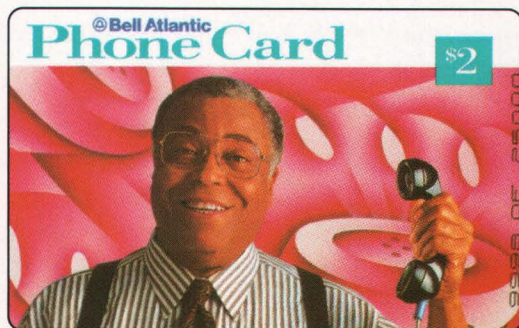

Along with the James Earl Jones set, Bell Atlantic has issued a Premier Card 1995 Version set, and a Premier Card Washington, DC Only set. These cards have identical obverses as the 1994 set, though with different dialing instructions on the reverse.

The Premier Card 1995 Version set contains a $2, $5, $10, and $20 card, while the DC-Only version of this set contains a $5, $10, and $20 card. The 1995 cards were issued in quantities from 25,000 to 220,000, while the 1995 DC Only cards were issued in quantities of from 15,000 to 25,000.

Dealers and others buying in quantity, can call Estelle Minor at (800)555-5865. She will be happy to fill your order at face value. Most credit cards are accepted.

Bell Atlantic serves telephone customers in Washington DC, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and West Virginia. The telco owns an interest in Telecom Corporation of New Zealand, and Grupo Iusacell SA de CV, Mexico's largest independent cellular company.

DOBRES 'POSTS' VINTAGE CARDS

DS. Dobres Postcards has teamed up with International Telecom Communications to issue a new set of phone cards depicting vintage postcards. The Vintage Tele-Post Series depicts Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas postcards. The picturesque phone cards were produced from early 1900's postcards, with a photographic process used to retain the period look.

Each of the $5 phone cards includes 10 minutes of domestic phone time. The initial set has been limited to just 350 consecutively numbered cards of each design. The sets are included in custom die-cut envelopes. Suggested retail price on the three-card matched-numbered set is $29.95.

All Dobres phone cards include overseas calling rates, and Canadian calls are charged at the same rate as domestic U.S. originated calls. To order, call (800)342-5983 or fax (410)837-7430.

AMERITEL RELEASES 'FLASHY'

CARDS One of the oldest and least-known issuers of prepaid phone cards – Ameritel – has made a grand re-entry into the market.

The largest alternative telephone company in the U.S., Ameritel focuses its card marketing on providing local service to customers who have had their phones disconnected by their Local Exchange Carrier (LEC). The company issued its first prepaid card to the public in 1992, and has since concentrated on the low-profile retail market.

Ameritel's new corporate card series is dependable, affordable and flashy. The five-card set includes brightly colored cards in denominations ranging from 30 to 240 units. The very competitive rate per minute ranges from $.25 to $.33 per long distance minute, with issue quantities varying from 575 to 1,725. The cards are rechargeable, have message delivery, and both domestic and international calling capability. Long distance service is provided by ConQuest.

Those interested can order by calling (800)275-8223.

OMNITEL TOASTS BELL IN HAND An innovative application for a phone card was OmniTel's Bell In Hand. One-thousand of the cards were mailed out to invite the public to attend the 200th birthday of the Boston-based tavern. Callers who responded to the RSVP through the 800 number on the back of the card were greeted by singer Bobby Hebb, who asked guests to join him in the 200th birthday celebration.

The front of the nostalgic-looking card claims, "The last time we had a party like this, we served Sam Adams. Literally." After responding to the invitation, callers were provided with five free minutes of long distance service. Call OmniTel at (617)893-5900, or fax (617)891-8976.

A BRILLIANT COLLECTION!

Brilliant Color Cards (BCC) is the leading telephone card manufacturer in the U.S.

BCC means quality
BCC means collectable
BCC means value
BCC means security

BCC is the card manufacturer "behind the scenes" for the leading telephone companies in the US with the highest quality, photodigital printing process using the best recyclable materials.

BCC is the home of industry "firsts":

- first photodigitally produced cards
- first polyester cards
- first scratch off
- first Jumbo sized cards (TeleCard Man)
- first silver cards
- first environmentally conscious phone card. We urge collectors to avoid PVC cards and to look into our recycling program (an alliance between Kodak and Brilliant Color Cards)
- first cards printed full color on both sides
- and now - we introduce a lower priced, but still high quality collectible for the mass market; color cards printed on styrene.

With so many phone companies and so many designs, how can the hobbyist decide what to collect? An increasing number of careful collectors collect only BCC cards.

How does a collector know the card is printed by Brilliant Color Cards?

- the quality will tell you
- the BCC on the back will confirm it!
