The background of the advertisement is a photograph of the Statue of Liberty. The statue is shown from the waist up, holding a large, rectangular object in its left hand. This object is a STS Prepaid Calling Card, which has the STS logo and the words 'PREPAID CALLING CARD' on it. The statue's right arm is raised, holding a torch. The background behind the statue is a sky with soft, pinkish clouds. The overall color palette is dominated by the green of the statue, the blue of the sky, and the pink of the clouds.

May you live in interesting times." That line from a recent movie applies to moneycard collecting. Boy, does it ever apply. One of the most interesting developments is the booming field of network marketing companies, or NMCs. Recent Internet and America Online excursions turned up more than three dozen NMCs with some phonecard involvements.

Network marketing companies by their sheer size and growth rates are likely to have a profound impact on the hobby. From the start, we have adopted the stance that as the number of people who know about phonecards and other kinds of prepaid cards grows, the hobby portion of the industry will grow as well. What better way to stimulate growth in the industry than to have thousands of network marketing representatives selling, using, collecting and promoting the collectability of prepaid phonecards?

In response to the NMC boom, we introduce this month a new regular feature, "Tapping the Networks," Page 8. Our first article looks at Strategic Telecom Systems, one of the fastest-growing network marketing companies. Representatives of Destiny, AmeriVox and other networks shouldn't feel left out — we will strive to cover worthy events for these and other companies as well. In fact, we have been doing so — the "Quik Takes" section of our November issue reported on the launch of AmeriVox's CanaVox operation, as well as the start-up of Dynamic Technologies Inc.

To new NMC representatives or those discovering Moneycard Collector for the first time, welcome!

If you want to see an example of a superb way to serve the collectors' market, check out NationsBank's new policy on issuing stored value cards, described on Page 5. The bank has adopted new plans to make basic card information readily available to collectors and has formulated guidelines which spell out clearly how the issues of loaded, unloaded and expired cards will be handled. While we applaud NationsBank's decisions and strongly encourage others to follow suit, we must again voice our opinion on having expiration dates on moneycards, especially stored value cards. People who buy such cards are exchanging one form of currency for another. Currency should not expire.

If you want to see an example of how to hinder the collectors' market, turn to the report on the U.S. Mint Olympic Telecoin Phone Pass cards, Page 38. Cataloguer Tori Stone initially tipped off readers to the situation in December's "Words on Numbers" update. Anytime that a large number of cards — in this case, probably tens of thousands — is unloaded in discount stores for a fraction of the face value, it poses a problem. Collectors who paid face value for the cards should be upset.

A possible bright spot is that as the cards are snapped up and used (they expire Dec. 31 and the fire-sale prices make the phone time a real bargain), they help create a used-card market, and they reduce the number of mint cards. A better course would have been to retrieve and destroy excess cards, thus rewarding the loyalty and patronage of collectors, and ensuring the cards' continued value as collectibles.

MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

NationsBank has taken steps to ease any collector qualms about how it plans to issue stored value cards.

The bank has announced the establishment of a collector service "to support an open, free and knowledgeable marketplace for buying, selling and trading new and used NationsBank stored value cards." The bank also has established a set of "Stored Value Card Principles" (see box) that it plans to follow in producing and distributing its stored value cards.

"Many of our customers have told us that they wanted to collect our stored value cards," said Richard F. Shaffner, NationsBank senior vice president. "We want to respond by providing a professional service that our customers and the marketplace can count on for accurate information regarding the production and availability of new and used NationsBank cards."

The NationsBank Collector Service will provide a variety of services to collectors: information about NationsBank cards and designs; card reproductions; and information about how and where new and used cards may be purchased. The service also will promote the sale of new and expired NationsBank cards to dealers and collectors.

NationsBank SVCs include the first VISA Cash card, the series of commemorative VISA Cash cards from the 1996 Summer Olympic Games and the FANCash cards introduced at the 1996 Carolina Panthers home games.

NationsBank, headquartered in Charlotte, N.C., is the fifth-largest banking company in the U.S. Its Card Services division, with more than $8.3 billion in outstanding loans, is the 11th largest issuer of VISA and Mastercard credit cards.

NationsBank Stored Value Card Principles

Card availability

- 1) Prior to the expiration of any card design, NationsBank will sell only cards of that design that are loaded with their full face value.*
- 2) After the expiration of any card design, NationsBank will sell only cards of that design that are not fully loaded.* (These cards may be empty or partially used.)
- 3) Prior to the expiration of any card design, NationsBank may keep various card types in inventory, including: new fully loaded cards, redeemed cards, damaged cards and empty or partially used cards.
- 4) NationsBank will not maintain an inventory of fully loaded cards after expiration, except for very limited internal purposes. Fully loaded cards remaining in inventory after expiration will be emptied or destroyed.*
- 5) Expired empty cards may be sold by NationsBank through individual or bulk sales processes that may vary from time to time.
- 6) At any time before or after the expiration of a particular design, the Bank may decide to destroy unsold cards. In those cases, the Bank will disclose to the marketplace the number of cards destroyed.

Card production

- 7) NationsBank will take the steps it deems necessary to ensure that no cards of any given design are produced or distributed in excess of the number disclosed by the Bank for that design. (Any card production errors or overruns will be destroyed by the Bank or by the manufacturer at the factory.)
- 8) NationsBank never will reprint a disposable card design for which a stated production quantity has been declared.
- 9) Unless otherwise stated, NationsBank will not intentionally release any proof cards or damaged cards to the public — they will either be retained for internal purposes or destroyed.

Card information

- 10) For each card design, NationsBank will make available to the public the following information:
  - Quantity of cards produced
  - Information about design and series (if applicable)
  - Expiration date
  - Card distribution information (where, when and how the card was sold)
- 11) NationsBank will take the steps it deems necessary to ensure that the information provided to the marketplace is up-to-date and accurate.

* An exception was made for the $20 pilot cards that expired Sept. 30, 1996. The Bank gave dealers and collectors until Nov. 8, 1996 to buy fully loaded cards, while supplies lasted. Remaining unloaded cards were to be made available to the market only after Nov. 8, 1996.

That's the Ticket

A second look at collecting transit system cards

by Art Becker

Since last we visited rapid transit moneycards ("That's The Ticket," May 1995), technology has taken off like a speeding train, and the number of collectible cards has grown. Smart cards are in use on at least two U.S. transit systems, while others here and abroad continue to use magnetic-stripe technology.

Rapid transit moneycards are a great collectible. A tremendous number of exciting designs and varieties abound, and keeping your eye out for cards is one way to make commuting a bit more pleasant. Finding a lost card with a few dollars left on it is a lot of fun, too.

Transit systems operate on a flat-rate or mileage-based basis, or on a combination of the two, and the debate over which is best probably will outlast the transit systems themselves.

New York City, which boasts America's largest subway system, uses a flat-rate fare — as do Chicago, Boston and Atlanta. A rider buys either a token, or a single- or multi-ride disposable plastic card and can travel to any destination. Mileage-based systems require complicated vending machines, computerized faregates or adjustment windows. The San Diego trolley is an example of a mileage-based variation that is barrier-free, eliminating the expense of faregates. It is based on the honor system and assumes that riders have paid. Roving ticket inspectors keep patrons honest.

New York City magnetic-stripe moneycards, or MetroCards, were first used by the Metropolitan Transport Authority in 1993. The intention was that they could eventually be used to make telephone calls, too, though this never happened. The plastic card has a wide magnetic stripe, and generally can be purchased in $3, $6 and $9 denominations. All cards appear identical: no actual denomination is printed on them. Every station has readers available so passengers can check remaining value, and, a boon to collectors, these cards are not captured when the value expires.

This NYC MetroCard was given unloaded to tourists, who had to charge it at a fare booth. The reverse says "NY96 FUNPASS New York Convention & Visitors Bureau."

New York's metro has issued several commemorative tickets, with New York scenes, artwork, and the New York Rangers hockey team as themes. An interesting MetroCard recently was given away to tourists along with a guide to the city. The only catch was that the new owner had to take the card to a ticket booth in order to get it charged. Magnetic-stripe MetroCards, swiped through a reader, are valid for bus riders.

Across the nation, San Francisco's Bay Area Rapid Transit system used the same ticket design for decades. Recently, a few new designs have been spotted, including one with featuring a Golden Gate Bridge pillar.

Japan's many transit system moneycards first were described in a Moneycard Collector article in the December 1994 issue, and again in May 1995. Here are a few additional bits of information. Japan has both flat-fare and mileage-based systems, and all stations have ticket vending machines. Most tickets, whether subway or bus, are computer printed onto basic cardstock. Some plastic moneycards can be purchased from a machine, and then are used to buy the actual ticket, while other moneycards are the tickets.

Japanese rapid transit cards share traits with their phonecards — both have an all-over magnetic backing and are among the most beautiful in the world. The cards usually are punched to indicate remaining value.

Singapore's MRT plastic subway ticket probably wins the award for the most languages use — four. Hong Kong's MTR system uses plastic farecards, and then captures the ticket at the end of the journey. Tourists complained, so a special ticket, which was returned after the journey, was made available.

D.C.'s complexity means more cards

The Washington, D.C. Area Metropolitan Transit Authority — WMATA — popularly known as Metro — has the most complex fare system and highest number of different tickets and passes outside of Japan.

D.C. Metro's Uncle Sam farecard.

D.C. Metro's over-the-counter Short Trip Pass.

There are bus passes good in Virginia only, in D.C. only, and in Maryland only. Some Virginia and Maryland passes are good in D.C., too. Some bus passes also are valid for use on the subway; others aren't. Sometimes the bus fare is free with a transfer, sometimes it isn't. Rail fares are mileage based. There are rush-hour fares, non-rush hour fares, and senior citizen and disabled fares— and on and on it goes.

There is a bus/rail super pass, a senior/disabled pass, a one-day rail pass, a short-trip pass, a two-week pass, and a 28-day, rail-only pass, made of thicker cardboard, with some plastic reinforcement.

There are cards with rounded corners and cards with square corners. The original vending machines issued individual tickets with rounded corners. All current Metro machines, in use for about 10 years, hold rolls of uncut tickets, vended with square corners.

Some round-corner cards are still sold over the counter — at the Metro Center sales office, the Pentagon concourse, and from mobile vans. Round-corner tickets also are issued as replacements for damaged magnetic-stripe cards. Metro sends out about 600 a day.

Vending machines installed recently in many stations sell three versions of passes, using the same square-corner stock as ordinary tickets. All three pass options are printed on it. When vended, invalid options are crossed out.

Within the past year or so, all Metro faregates have been upgraded. New computerized faregates capture all used cards and they are subsequently destroyed. To collect them, a collector can buy a ticket for five cents more than needed, so that the machine returns the ticket.

The thousands of different D.C. Metro cards issued since the rail system opened in 1976 make collecting a challenge. Basic card designs might stay the same for years, or change within a few months. More than one design often is available, though there is no indication which machine is selling a particular design. Even the same design often had both the round- and square-corner varieties, different magnetic stripes, different shades of ink, and different type fonts on the reverse.

Of the multitude of Metro moneycards, several have been interesting commemoratives — the latest a Metro farecard issued for the 1996 Olympic events held in Washington. While Atlanta hosted the games, the soccer competition was held in D.C. from July 20-25. Metro issued commemorative tickets, which were sold for a few weeks surrounding the events. Other cards were issued for the World Soccer Championships in 1994, President Clinton's inauguration in 1993 and Metro's 10th anniversary in 1986.

Stored-value cards, including the D.C. Metro's GO CARD, are being used on some systems. The GO CARD might be the thickest and heaviest transit moneycard ever. It is 3/8 of an inch thick, and weighs a full ounce. This reloadable card is of the inductance type — an embedded coil of wire communicates with an on-board computer. This pilot card, good only between select stations and on certain bus routes is a "contactless" or "proximity" type, requiring riders to hold the card near the computer on entry and exit. Because it required passengers to exit only from the front of the bus and rough street conditions could cause the computer to reset and invalidate a card, Metro issued a new style in November. Metro also has a $50 chip card, good only for use in parking meters at a specific lot.

VISA Cash cards can be used to enter the flat-fare MARTA rapid transit system in Atlanta. In fact, NationsBank issued a $20 co-branded VISA Cash card with MARTA. The design featured a rapid transit train car. MARTA was the official Olympic Games Spectator Transportation System. MARTA also packaged its 12 monthly passes from September 1995 through August 1996 in a set offered to employees only. Each of the 12 cards had a $45 face value; 5,000 sets were made.

Two other VISA Cash smart cards feature rapid transit. The $20 Universal Studios Florida card, which can't actually be used at Universal Studios Florida, shows a BART train or two being destroyed by an earthquake, while Canada's VanCity VISA Cash card shows the monorail system in Vancouver.

The author is an attorney and collector from Washington, D.C.

D.C. Metro's inductance-type GO CARD may be the heaviest and thickest transit card ever.

D.C. Metro issued this commemorative card for the World Soccer Championships in 1994.

This NationsBank VISA Cash card, co-branded with MARTA, can be used on the transit system.

TAPPING THE NETWORKS

In the early days of the US pre-paid phonecard market, AmeriVox was a true pioneer and stood virtually alone as an example of a successful company selling cards through a network marketing structure. In the two years we have published Moneycard Collector, AmeriVox cards have been featured prominently in ads and in articles and thus developed a strong collector following.

Recently, however, AmeriVox has come to find itself part of a quickly changing marketplace in which there are many new telecommunications network marketing companies (NMCs), some of which have already eclipsed the Mountain View, Calif.-based firm in size and sales volume.

At last check, there were about 40 network marketing companies involved with prepaid phonecards. Such rapid expansion in an already booming field promises to have an impact for years to come.

For collectors, the arrival of these new issuers is an important development. Already they have proven themselves capable of creating appealing card programs. What's more, many issues of some of these companies have risen dramatically in value, thanks to small mintages released to much larger numbers of people within these organizations who are eager to have the cards to sell, use and collect.

For our readers the emergence of NMCs as issuers raises several obvious questions. Who are these new players? How big are they and at what rate are they growing? What cards have they produced to date and what kind of track record do they have, and so on.

Over time we hope to answer many of these questions. But at the outset there are several important points Moneycard readers need to know. First of all, apart from being NMCs, these companies collectively display more differences than similarities: differences in levels of activity, rates of growth, types and level of commission structures, and so on. Secondly, they vary greatly, size, strength and potential to be around for the long term.

We strongly advise any of our readers considering joining an NMC to first of all contact the International Telecard Association (202-544-4448) and request a copy of "Is It a Pyramid Scheme or Legitimate Multi-level Marketing?" Additional sources of information might include the state attorney general's office and the local Better Business Bureau. Educated collectors are more successful collectors, and reputable firms have nothing to hide.

STS SKYROCKETS

One of the largest and most active network marketing organizations issuing pre-paid phonecards is Strategic Telecom Systems of Knoxville, Tenn.

To say that STS has experienced rapid growth would be more than an understatement. In the space of 17 months it has grown from four headquarters employees and a handful of independent representatives to more than 250 headquarters staff and a field team numbering in excess of 200,000 people.

A brand new modern office building purchased by STS and a large, leased warehouse give the firm a total of 80,000 square feet of space, more than 10 times the size of the original accommodations. In the past 12 months STS product sales totaled more than $160 million and the rate of increase in the size of the field sales force has surpassed 5,000 per month.

STS is led by an executive management team comprised of: CEO Rick Catinella, Bert Schlegel, senior vice president of sales; David Hultquist, chief financial officer and Bobby Simpson, the recently appointed vice president of sales and marketing. While the four men have many years of collective experience in network marketing, Catinella also personally has a strong recent background in telecommunications, having been a major reseller of Sprint services to the business and industrial market.

Face-to-face, Catinella comes across as a bright, sincere individual totally committed to ensuring a strong future for STS. "Our growth strategy is to create and market excellent phonecards and diversify the products we offer," says Catinella. "That's why we've teamed with Cable & Wireless, MCI, Athena and Zenex for our pre-paid phonecards and why we are marketing direct broadcast satellite television. And we'll be announcing another new communications product shortly."

In the past NMCs have also been termed "multi-level marketing companies," or MLMs, or in earlier days, pyramid marketing systems. "Many firms of our type have failed, or experienced regulatory difficulties, or just got a bad name," says Catinella. "That's because they didn't focus on selling products. Instead they often put the greatest emphasis on recruiting people. It's got to be the other way around. You've got to place the emphasis on product and product marketing. That's the secret to long term success. By doing that we'll be known first as a quality provider of telecommunications products and services and second as a network marketing organization."

Whatever success STS may enjoy in the long term, there's no arguing with what's been happening to some of its phonecard issues. Catinella notes "We want to create good looking durable cards that work and because they're collectible we've consciously tried to under produce, especially our corporate issues."

Values of many STS cards have climbed rapidly. "Don't Mess With Texas," for example, is now listed in the Moneycard Collector Price Guide at $900 and advertisements offering STS cards for sale have begun to appear in the magazine. If STS continues to grow at the current rate, its cards may turn out to be among the fastest appreciating issues of recent times. Stay tuned. It's going to be fun to watch.

CORPORATE CORNER

If you've got an appetite for phonecards featuring food and candy, then sink your teeth into the first Corporate Corner for 1997.

Tell-One Inc. recently issued a tasty-looking 10-minute card for a Subway franchise in the Northeast. The card commemorates an anniversary with a total of 1,000 cards produced. A percentage of the cards went to the franchisee and the rest are available to collectors.

If you're thirsty, Telenova can quench your thirst with a new Dairy Queen Misty Slush card. A small percentage of the 1,000 individually numbered cards are available from dealers. The 5-minute cards feature time carried by AT&T. See this colorful card in "America's Most Wanted," Page 46.

Deltacom is at it again. Hot on the heels of their very popular Ice Breaker gum card comes a Nabisco SnackWell's candy card. Only 500 cards were issued with most going to Nabisco. The cards have 15 minutes of time and there's no scratch-off, making it a nice card to use and still keep in mint condition. See "America's Most Wanted," Page 46.

Image Telecards, a name that most people don't know but one with which collectors could become familiar, has issued one of the nicest sets of cards I have ever seen. It's a three-card anniversary set for one of the most popular brands of candy of all time. Tootsie Roll is 100 years old. Along with Tootsie Roll, Dots candy, also made by Tootsie Roll, is 50 years old. The third card while not an anniversary card, represents Junior Mints. The Tootsie Roll card has 10 minutes, Dots has 5 minutes and Junior Mints has 3 minutes of time and the sets come attached to a small carrier.

There were 3,500 matched numbered sets produced with 2,500 available to collectors. In addition, 500 Tootsie Roll and 500 Dots cards are available individually.

The Junior Mints card is available only with the set. Long distance time is carried by MCI and I'm told this is the first of an ongoing series from Image Telecards.

An interesting promotional card I've come across is a 1-minute card that not only promotes a non-phonecard business but also a phonecard show. It might also be the first one of its kind. SSI Custom Data issued a card in September for the Telecard World '96 show held in New York. That in itself doesn't put it into the Corporate Corner but it also promotes the Carnegie Deli, one of the more famous delis in New York.

The cards are individually numbered to 500 and Zenex carries the phone time. A remarkable card if you can find it. See this card in this month's "Show Stoppers," Page 44.

GAF Telecommunications recently issued a super-looking Budweiser card. There were 2,000 cards with 5 minutes of time issued with the help of Double Eagle Distributing, the South Florida Budweiser Distributor. Bars and restaurants that participated had their names and logos overprinted on the back. Out of the 2,000 there were 300 cards available to dealers without any overprinting.

Ilene Kaminsky, director of marketing for ITS, informs us that the Huggies prepaid phonecard mentioned in October's "Corporate Corner" was never released publicly by Kimberly-Clark, makers of the disposable diapers. The cards are not available, and there is no word whether or not the cards will be used for a Huggies promotion, Kaminsky reports.

That's it for this month. Keep looking in your Sunday coupon section and prowling those supermarket aisles — you never know when a phonecard offer will pop up.

Image Telecards; Tootsie Rolls, Dots & Junior Mints three-card set; 10 minutes (Tootsie Rolls), 5 minutes (Dots), and 3 minutes (Junior Mints); 3,500 matched sets, additional 500 each of Tootsie Roll and Dots; November 1996.

Huggies Card, issued by ITS, has not been released by Huggies manufacturer Kimberly-Clark.

WORDS ON NUMBERS

Network marketing companies. Everyone's talking about the biggest small phonecard collector market in the industry. What are they and what do they mean to our hobby?

NMCs are a collecting environment unlike any other. While general phonecard collectors might not find NMC cards to their taste, NMC independent representatives seem willing enough to pay the prices. This illustrates the golden rule of collecting: Buy what you like, but what is meaningful to you.

Essentially, upon joining an telecommunications NMC, you have the opportunity to buy and to sell prepaid long distance phone time and other services. The cards themselves can have a lot or little time on them, and depending on how the cards are marketed, the price per minute may or may not make the card suitable for utilitarian purposes.

Gathering information about NMCs is labor intensive. New cards surface daily, and the prices? Well, members are willing to pay a lot or little ... so the prices must be set somewhere in between.

And without a doubt, the prices for their collectible cards are high.

Regardless of a phonecard's origin, who issued it and its purpose, I still believe that new cards that hit the market running with a price of more than $1 a minute are ridiculous. However, demand governs prices and overrules my opinion - a function of our economy. So, if a 10-minute card debuts in our price guide for $50, it's because there are collectors who have paid that much.

The NMC environment is, essentially, one where many people who are very excited about this industry are collecting cards made by their company. Their enthusiasm for their products dictates the ebb and flow of card prices ... but within their circle of collecting. I'd liken it to stranding 200 phonecard collectors on a desert island with 20 phonecards. The question won't be who is eaten first, but who's got the cards and how much they want for them!

Despite the fervor these companies have caused, truly valuable cards still are and will always be valuable for a handful of reasons: historical importance, who issued them, what they are used for and how many were made, among others.

And remember: what your card is worth to someone else is what they are willing to pay for it. What your card is worth to you may be immeasurable.

U.S. MINT TELECOIN CONFUSION. Confusion continues to reign over the mintage of U.S. Mint Olympic Telecoin phonecards and the number that were dumped in discount stores, with the parties involved providing different figures or none at all.

John Tucker, president of J Cubed, the master distributor for the program, said he doesn't know how many cards were produced, although he had heard reports of 200,000 total. Paige Arnhof-Fenn, who directed the Olympic phonecard program for the Mint, said that sales reports from New Media Telecommunications, the card manufacturer, indicated "more than a couple of hundred thousand phone passes" had been sold.

Jonathan Weisz, president of New Media, refused to comment on the program other than to agree with the Mint's figures, saying that it was J Cubed's program. Yet a letter sent by New Media to collector Christina Castro of Brentwood, Tenn., in mid-October put the total mintage at 110,000 — 20,000 each of the $10 basketball and baseball cards, 55,000 of the $20 track and field cards; 14,000 of the $50 Olympic cauldron cards; and 1,000 of the $100 Olympic cauldron obverse and reverse cards. In the October edition of Moneycard Collector, J Cubed's Tucker said that 100,000 five-card sets had been produced, then an additional 10,000 each of the basketball, baseball and track and field cards were subsequently issued in a second run.

All the parties involved said they did not know or refused comment on how many cards ended up in discount outlets such as Odd Lots or Big Lots. All five versions could be purchased in such stores, typically at prices that were 20 percent of face value. A large offer of the phonecards made by New Media to a major distributor of telecards, who asked to remain anonymous, said that "thousands of cards" were offered. The deal was declined on the basis that it would hurt the collector market.

"If that's the channel where customers are buying them, then the more exposure the better," Arnhof-Fenn said of the cards' appearance in the discount stores. "We will continue minting Olympic coins until the end of the year, and will continue to sell the cards as well." But when New Media was contacted about the availability of cards in late October, they said no cards were available.

ACCESS TO HOLOGRAMS. Access, a unit of Graphic Results Corp. of Miami, Fla., has announced its new partner in phonecard innovation, 3-D Worldwide Holograms. "By combining two of the latest technological trends, prepaid phonecards and holograms, we have created a dynamic new package geared for both promotional and retail applications," says Michael Williams, president of Access. 3-D President and Creative Director Mark Diamond's original holographic works are exhibited in the Museum of Holography at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a museum of which he was a founding member.

NEW MEDIA'S RETAIL PRODUCT. New Media Telecommunications Inc. of La Jolla, Calif., has announced a series of low-cost phonecards tailored for sale via retailers and mass merchants. Called the New Media International Phone Card, the new calling cards are available in $5, $10, $20 and $50 increments and offer discounted domestic and international long distance calling. The cards are NMTI's first large scale venture into the consumer retail market.

STS BUYS 50 MILLION MINUTES. Strategic Telecom Systems has made the largest single purchase of long distance telephone time for prepaid calling cards in industry history with its purchase of 50 million minutes of long distance time from major long distance carrier MCI. Under the terms of the multi-million dollar agreement, MCI will provide STS a complete range of advanced network services. The $5 million purchase amounts to more than 95 years of continuous long distance time. STS markets and distributes prepaid long distance telephone cards through a nationwide network of more than 200,000 independent distributors.

LET THE PRESSES ROLL. Worldwide Digital has purchased a second $1 million digital color off-set press. The Woodstock, Ill.-based phonecard printer will target short-run digital printing, said President Mark Demarest, citing a dramatic increase in the customer base. Worldwide pledges cost-effective short runs and delivery in 10 days or less.

POINTS OF ACTIVATION. GTS Canada, CIBC and Manitoba Telephone Systems have teamed up to develop a point-of-sale activation system for prepaid long-distance phonecards sold in Canada. That means consumers can buy a long-distance phonecard and activate it with any amount they desire at the time of purchase, using the cards to call more than 240 countries from anywhere in Canada or the U.S. The cards, carrying no initial value, will be activated by retailers using a CIBC point-of-sale terminal. CIBC is Canada's second largest financial institution. Manitoba Telephone will provide and maintain the prepaid service platform; Stentor member companies will provide and maintain the network services. A pilot program is scheduled for 12 retail stores in Winnipeg, Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Thunder Bay, Ottawa, Moncton and Halifax.

In the U.S., San Francisco-based HT Technologies, Inc. has introduced the point-of-sale activation phonecard. Deke Sinclair, HT's vice president of sales, said because these cards are activated only when the consumer makes a purchase, they can be displayed in highly visible areas. Images on these new phonecards include a San Francisco collage and an Americana series, which includes Mount Rushmore, the Statue of Liberty and the White House. The point-of-sale activation phonecards are available in several different dollar increments.

Collector Clubs

Groups provide valuable service to many hobbyists

by Bob Brill

As more and more collectors come to the phonecard collecting table, collector clubs are growing as well. Participating in such clubs may be a way to give a boost to the hobby and to the individual collector.

A look at moneycard collector clubs shows that their growth in many ways mirrors the hobby itself: overseas clubs, benefitting by longer exposure to the hobby, seem to be further developed, and, little surprise, there are many foreign members in U.S. collector clubs. Organizers of collector clubs in the United States report mixed results from their efforts, but are universal in their agreement that the hobby needs more time to grow.

There are three basic types of collector clubs in the U.S. and Canada — those set up by card issuers, clubs established by dealers or ones organized by collectors themselves. Whether they are a success depends on to whom you talk.

One club that got off to a quick start is that of KARS Unlimited, an Ormond Beach, Fla. dealership. Kathy Shapiro of KARS Unlimited started a club and is working with the International Telecard Association on its future involvement in such arenas. Her latest effort deals with collectors of stored value cards.

"As an authorized VISA Cash card distributor for the Olympics we built a large following of those who are interested in stored value cards, which are pricy," said Shapiro. "Enough people wanted to purchase them, so we started a club."

Within two weeks, almost 100 people had joined the club. Many are from Europe.

U S WEST / Bell Canada / GTE / PTT Telecom (Netherlands); Joint Global Card Series (4 cards); $5 denomination each; 8,000 issued; October 1996. This set was unveiled at CardEx '96 in Maastricht, the Netherlands, and is offered to U S WEST collector club members in a September newsletter.

For a $79.95 charter membership ($10 annual renewal fee) members get a quarterly newsletter, an album, six sleeves and an introductory packet including six cards with a total value of about $90. They also get discount prices. The discounts amount to about 10 percent or more with higher dollar cards. Layaway plans also are available.

"We might sell a $45 card for $40 to a club member but as the prices go up the discounts may be larger," said Shapiro. "Some of these cards are hard to get into stock and will only be offered to club members. At $500 per card, there may only be four or five available."

U S WEST is happy with its club, which connects to 1,600 members, many from Asia and Europe.

"The reception has been terrific and we have built a data base where we mail worldwide," said Randy Tada, the marketing manager for U S WEST. "We have some people who have a standing order on their Visa or MasterCard for every U S WEST card which comes out." U S WEST doesn't require a fee, but you must order $50 or more annually to be a member in good standing. The club offers several promotions, a quarterly newsletter, free shipping and up to 25 percent discounts on cards.

Two other successful clubs are backed by phone companies — NYNEX and Bell Canada. Started in 1994, the NYNEX club is the oldest of the clubs operated by the Baby Bells.

"The purpose of our club is to accommodate the collectors of NYNEX change cards which are inserted into pay phones," said Jerry Epping, the club's director. Of the 1,000 members in the club, 40 percent are outside the U.S., 33 percent are NYNEX employees and the balance are mainly new American-based collectors, dealers and distributors.

Epping says the club charges an annual fee of $15 ($10 for employees). For that they get a quarterly newsletter and occasionally special cards are offered to club members first. As for clubs themselves, Epping says they are not the issue.

"The question is more of what is the future of collecting phonecards in the U.S.?" He said. "In 1994 there was a tremendous amount of enthusiasm and it's now settled down. There is some expansion but not as rapidly as there was three years ago." He feels the future is solid but it will not skyrocket — steady growth should occur and it's possible for clubs to help ensure that growth.

Diane Godin runs the collectors club for Bell Canada. The key difference between this club and the others is the cost. There isn't one. Members receive a catalog of Bell Canada cards. Launched about a year ago at a show in the Netherlands, Godin claims 4,000 members worldwide.

"It is going pretty well and we have members everywhere except for Africa," said Godin. "We have a lot of collectors in Quebec and Ontario as well." She says while there are no promotional cards being offered currently, the future may hold something different, though she was mum on 1997 plans. For now, the catalog serves as the newsletter detailing new offerings. The club does offer an Internet site where collectors can exchange and sell cards. Among the most popular Bell Canada cards was the Coca Cola Santa Claus.

Other phone companies have clubs as well, including Pacific Bell and Southwestern Bell, and network marketing companies such as Seamless Technologies ("The Telergist Society") and Dynamic Technologies ("Diamond Phone Club") and Destiny Telecomm also offer collectors' clubs.

HT Technologies began a club in August but it's been a slow process. For $1, HT sends club members 10 cards to get started, and they get a newsletter. Based on a commitment of three months, HT sends out four cards each month for $19.95. Response has not been overwhelming. "When we first started it we were thinking of membership in the thousands and maybe that was too much right away, too hopeful," said Heather Olson, the public relations and event coordinator.

"So far, we've gotten quite a few responses, but not as many as we'd hoped for," Olson said. She says the company is now inserting club membership applications into magazines around the world, including one in Germany.

Not all clubs get off the ground. Both Jim Silva in California and Roger Streit in New Jersey, have tried their hand at the club offering.

"I did put a message on CompuServe but never got a response," said Streit of International Phonecard Exchange. "I might have had more than a minimal response if I'd have pushed it harder." Silva had a similar experience and admitted time was a big factor.

Both pointed to The Washington, D.C. Phonecard Collectors Group as probably the most successful of the "grass roots" clubs. Tom Zelinski, who co-founded the group with his wife, Susan, described the club as a loosely knit group, but one of dedicated collectors.

The group's original eight members include Moneycard Collector senior contributing writer Art Becker, whom Zelinski credited as a major force. The club claims title to being the oldest and largest independent phonecard collectors group in the United States. Its first anniversary was Nov. 9.

Becker pushes the fun angle. "Don't start off having any rules and forget about by-laws," he tells anyone interested in starting a club. "It's not that difficult if you find some collectors. Just agree to get together."

The lack of formal structure is seen as a key element to the group's success. "Why hit them with $20 or $50 dues when they are all just interested in trying to get the hobby going?" Zelinski asked. He lauded Grapevine Telecards for providing the company hundreds of dollars worth of free cards.

About a dozen of the club's 20 or so members show up every six weeks at the food court of the Pentagon City Mall in Arlington, Va., to discuss prices, trends and Internet gossip, Zelinski says. "It's never a boring meeting."

Another club, founded in April, has a more formal structure and is designed for dealers and collectors. The International Phonecard Collectors club is intended to give collectors a way to reach other collectors. Bruce Harmon of Acme Telecards Inc. and a columnist for Moneycard Collector, is the IPC president. Plans include a newsletter, a website and sponsorship of a phonecard show. Membership is $15 a year and includes a commemorative IPC phonecard.

Finding collectors to form a club may be a challenge, because the hobby is still relatively small. The International Telecard Association has looked into building a club through a brochure and newsletter but the project has taken a back seat to more pressing needs.

NYNEX; Collector's Club; $1 denomination; 3,000 issued; September 1995.

Washington, D.C. Phonecard Collectors Group; Capital Dome; 5 units; 50 cards issued; May 1996.

"We are facing more important things right now, such as dealing with regulations," said Sam Karides, the ITA's director of development. "We've done some basic research and we will do the newsletter and will help develop clubs to be affiliated with the ITA. Funding is a major challenge."

Karides said the ITA is not interested in using the club as a database. A database is at the heart of most clubs in any collector field. The general purpose is two-fold: First, companies and dealers want to help bring more collectors into the field and expand the industry. Second, building a club data base provides opportunities to sell upcoming as well as old issues.

One interesting club is run by Gary Lindberg, part-time dealer and owner of J&G Cards in Deforest, Wis. It isn't backed by Ameritech but deals only with Ameritech phonecards.

"We serve as a clearing house for information on Ameritech prepaid cards and we basically put out a newsletter," said Lindberg. "Ameritech is not interested in having a club, but a lot of people do collect their cards." The club has no membership fee but Lindberg says if the mailing list grows too big he may have to charge to cover the postage.

As far as a database for collectors, he says he won't let anybody have access to it. He does use it to sell his own cards. "I don't expect to make anything on this club," he said. "For me, it's just a hobby."

Internationally, as expected, clubs meet somewhat more frequently and there are many more shows for collectors to attend. The World Wide Web lists several clubs in Europe, Israel and winding down to Freemantle, Australia where a club meets at a fast-food place called "Captain Munchies."

Those who are thinking about starting a club domestically may want to take a page from that club, the Phonecard Collectors Group of Western Australia. Founded in 1992 by George Crafter of Nedlands and given a boost by Lionel Richards of Captain Munchies in Freemantle, the club is highly organized and growing.

The group boasts more than 100 people with attendance at monthly meetings running between 30 and 50. With a $15 membership fee ($20 for members outside the continent) the club offers a 20-page monthly journal. The journal lays out more of a social agenda and monthly meetings often take place in homes under the guise of a pot luck. Members bring food and participate in a social atmosphere.

The group is designed for fun, all based in the phonecard-collecting hobby. They've even worked on putting together an annual card show. Richards is a promotion-minded businessman who has produced a "Captain Munchies" phonecard.

"It just goes to show what can be done with a bit of enthusiasm and commitment," said Crafter. "It's been rather exciting."

Crafter can be reached at PO Box 58, Nedlands, Western Australia 6009.

Your comments are welcome!

We report on some phonecard collector clubs beginning on Page 41 of this month's edition, but realize that there are more groups out there.

We also would like to know more about collectors who collect comic book, comic strip and cartoon images.

Please share your experiences and opinions on either or both topics by filling out the brief questionnaire, below.

Fax (937) 498-0876 or mail your responses to Moneycard Collector, P.O. Box 783, Sidney, OH 45365 by Dec. 24. We will use the information in future articles on those topics. To compensate you for your time, we'll send you a coupon for $5 off the upcoming Moneycard catalog (Sorry! If you have filled out a previous survey, you can only claim one coupon).

SHOW STOPPERS

The show cards were out in force for the TeleCard World East '96 show, held in late September at the Jacob K. Javits Center in New York City.

Organizers said that they anticipated attendance would be down from 1995, and it was. An estimated 8,500 showed up, compared to 11,000 last year.

Leading the multitude of new show cards was Continental Plastic Card's "Statue of Liberty Centennial," which featured both standard and jumbo cards packaged in a eye-catching folder. Runners-up included entries by NACT; TotalTel; Mercury Marketing; Caulastics Inc.; PowerTel Communications Inc.; and GST Net.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

A variety of issuers have unwrapped their holiday cards, a collection as bright and different as the decorations on a Christmas tree. From die-cut snowflakes to a surfing Santa, most collectors might be tempted to proclaim "ho ho ho" when they see these Yule treasures.

Bell Canada; Santa Claus Hello! Phone Pass; $20 denomination; quantity unavailable; October 1996;

Bell Canada's A.E. "Al" Page (pictured), Stentor national marketing manager of prepaid LD card services, is the man behind the Santa Claus whiskers in the Hello! phonecard. In addition to modeling for the card, Page performs Santa duties in Ottawa, Canada, parades and visits hospitals, parties and malls.

NYNEX; Snowman; $10 denomination; 20,000 issued, 2,000 with 1996 overlay; October 1996.

USA Card; Cracker Jack Christmas; 10-, 12- and 15-units; 2,500 issued (1,893 10-unit; 500 12-unit and 107 15-unit); December 1996.

A scratch-off reveals the denomination.

Hannibal Commuications; 'Twas the Night; variable denominations; 1,500 issued; November 1996.

AT&T; Snowflake Ornament; 10 minutes; quantity unavailable; October 1996.

AT&T; Holiday Prepaid four-card series; 15 minutes each; quantity unavailable; October 1996.

One Snowflake Ornament phonecard was offered free for every two AT&T prepaid cards that were purchased. The deadline for the Snowflake offer is Dec. 31.

Pacific Bell; Surfing Santa; $5 denomination; quantity unavailable; October 1996.

Pac Bell also has $10 Mountain Pine and $20 Christmas Ornament phonecards (not shown) as part of its three-card holiday-themed releases.

U S WEST; Holiday Trees; $5 denomination; 5,000 issued; November 1996.

The U S WEST design was a result of a contest among art schools in Seattle, Portland, Denver, Phoenix and Minneapolis. George Streeter, a senior art student in Phoenix, created the design.

THE KING'S 'WINDOWS OF THE SOUL'

An Elvis package of phonecards and music is sure to be a prized holiday gift for the phonecard collector, Elvis fan and rock 'n' roll historian.

AmeriVox boasts seven Elvis Presley "firsts" on its "Windows of the Soul" combo phonecard CD and Elvis-shaped picture disc package, featuring a never-before-approved-and-released Elvis interview and set of concert extracts.

Each album offers two phonecards, one of Elvis eating cake at a charity event (compact disc/phonecard), the other a closeup of his eyes (picture disc/phonecard).

Each card has 5 minutes of domestic time, or 1 unit of international time and the mintage is open-ended. They are available only as part of the CD/LP album. The packages were available internationally Aug. 1 and widespread distribution in the U.S. began Nov. 1.

PHILIP MAKANNA'S 'GHOSTS.'

The six-card Series A is high-flying fun that will set the collector's spirits soaring. The packaging is almost as striking as the World War II fighter plane phonecards inside. In addition to a cover photograph that almost flies off the folder, it provides information about each plane's specifications and history. Each card has 5 minutes of phone time, and 1,600 sets were made. "Ghosts" is world-renowned for a variety of aviation-related products such as calendars, posters and books.

All Phonecards Great and Small

Collectors can cuddle up to animal themes

by Victoria Stone

When it comes to phonecards, the Animal Kingdom rules! Without a doubt, animals are the most popular subject for phonecards worldwide.

When I began collecting more than a year ago, it was an animal attraction: I never would have started to collect phonecards if I didn't like animals. Many people are brought into the hobby in such a manner — a certain theme catches their eye and they are hooked.

Arranging Your Animal Cards

With the wide variety of animals pictured on cards, arranging your collection could quickly become a zoo. Sorting them by species could work, but while it is a striking way to display a collection, it might become time consuming, and pricing or trading could be a chore. I suggest arranging your cards by country, then issuer. All major catalogs and price guides in the industry also arrange by issuer, so if you plan to spend an afternoon (or more, depending on how big your collection is!) valuing your own collection, you can save a lot of time by keeping cards by the same issuer together.

Animal art cards

Not all animal cards are photographs, of course; some are reproductions of paintings, sketches, sculptures or other mediums.

Artist renderings of animals can be breathtaking, and when purchasing or trading, in addition to normal considerations make certain you get a card with crisp color and a clear image.

Any work of art will lose something as it is miniaturized onto a phonecard, but some issuers have been particularly successful at maintaining the beauty of an original work. If you haven't seen the set of eight William J. Shimmel cards by Mercury Marketing, you are missing some spectacular collector phonecards. The reproduction quality is superb, and the cards have won several awards. The cards also are available in jumbo sizes.

On an international safari

A collector's experience is enhanced by trading with other collectors, especially those from other countries. For the animal theme collector, collecting foreign cards is a definite plus. U.S. companies make beautiful cards, but foreign issuers bring the benefit of years of experience and often offer top-notch design, imaging and quality.

Issuers in the U.S. have incorporated animals into their phonecard designs since the industry beginnings. As with many early cards, the American bald eagle is most widely used animal on U.S. phonecards.

Internationally, phone companies make many striking animal cards. Both Australia and New Zealand already have an evolutionary advantage over other countries in the first place, or at least Charles Darwin would think so. Everything from kangaroos and turtles to Antarctic species such as penguins and seals are "game" for phonecard subjects.

If I were forced to pick one card animal card above all others as the most precious image I've

AT&T; 101 Dalmatians; 5 minutes; 5,000 five card sets; October 1996.

Kembali Australia; Makulu's Kiss; 50-, 100- and 150-units; quantity unavailable; September 1996.

Bell Canada; Call Answer/Loon; CAN$5 denomination; 15,000 issued; October 1994.

seen, it would have to be "Makulu's Kiss" by Kembali Australia. Makulu, a Rothschild giraffe, was born more than a year ago in Perth Zoo in Western Australia, the first zoo birth of that rare species since 1938. The card depicts Makulu's mother, Misha, planting a smooch on her baby's head. More than 10,000 cards were released in 50-, 100- and 150-unit denominations.

Cards for the birds

Internationally, birds set themselves forth as being one of the more abundant animal themes.

There's no denying countries in tropical climates harbor bird species of unspeakable beauty. BaTelCo, the national phone company of the Bahamas, produced the chip-based "Bahama Parrot" phone card, an endangered species.

Canada also holds some exquisite fowl. Bell Canada captured a loon on one their early cards. This is a particularly lovely card because of the colors of the sunset reproduced nicely on the card; it's very warm.

Collector's best friend

If you don't have a dog, chances are you know someone who does. And if you don't have a phonecard with a dog on it, well, how can you call yourself a collector of animal cards?

Innovative Telecom Corp. recently produced a neat card for a neat dog. Kuma, a five-year-old Akita, lost his right hind leg when he was eight months old; he was hit by a truck. His owner, John Weaver of Oregon, refused to put him to sleep and instead, designed a prosthetic leg for Kuma. Kuma travels around the country and visits children's hospitals to give inspiration to children with physical impairments.

Aerowave Communications released a funny card in 1994: a dog with a bone phone on a background of adoring cats. According to the Hiscocks and Garibaldi catalog, a "bone" is slang for "phone" in the UK.

Disney recently released five AT&T phonecards for the new "101 Dalmatians" movie. They are available free from the Disney Catalog if you purchase a sweatshirt for about $50. Only 5,000 sets of the five-minute cards were produced. And they're just what you'd expect from Disney: so cute you gotta say "awwww!"

Save the animals

Without a doubt, I cannot imagine a better application for phonecards than as fundraising aids. I'm not alone in that opinion: there are plenty of charities who have looked toward this industry for help in raising needed funds.

After Hurricane Andrew inflicted damage upon the Metrozoo of South Miami, Fla. in 1992, the zoo created 1,000 five-card sets in conjunction with Teleworld International to raise money to fight damage to the zoo.

Of the billions of phonecards that have been generated worldwide in the last 20 years, many of them bear an animal image. That's one thing that's exciting about this theme: you won't likely run out of cards to collect and there's no way you'll ever get them all. But you'll have fun trying!

AMERICA'S MOST WANTED

This month you'll notice a big change in "America's Most Wanted." Recognizing that the difference between the first and last ranking is sometimes very small, our staff thought it would be less confusing to display the top cards each month without numbering them. Of course, all the other information and comments that our readers are used to seeing is still here. The change helps emphasize what collectors have known all along — every card here is a winner!

MICHAEL JORDAN SIGNATURE CARD & JUMBO. LDDS WorldCom, 10 minutes (Signature) and 50 minutes (Jumbo); 3,000 (Signature) and 2,500 (Jumbo) issued; October 1996. One of the most popular basketball players of all time is at it again, this one with a facsimile signature and multiple images. We recommend that collectors purchase these cards now.

BETTY BOOP AT

ANAHEIM. American National Phone Card; 3 minutes, 1,000 issued; August 1996. Betty welcomed her fan club to the Southern California Collector's Expo at the Disneyland Hotel.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION, SET OF 8.

Ameritech; $337, 1,500 issued; August 1996. Although the face value of this set could scare some, fear not! Half of the set is for cellular use and already has expired, so the active portion of the set is only $37.00. Seven of the eight cards combine to make a puzzle. The mintages vary from 1,500 to 16,500. The lowest mintage, the $5 card, will become especially valuable.

THE ENCHANTED

FOREST. Mercury Marketing; 3 units; 1,000 issued; August 1996. This splendid card was issued for the Southern California Collector's Expo and is one of several popular cards that lucky attendees received.

NYNEX PIONEERS, AT&T;

11 Minute/$4.95; 5,000 issued; May 1996. Real telephone history on this one! The first telephone, with Mr. Bell and Mr. Watson. This card carries both the AT&T logo and the NYNEX logo (a first), and an unusual denomination.

CINDERELLA'S CASTLE SET OF 2.

Vista United; $10 & $20 denominations; 10,000 issued; May 1996.

Disney designed the Castle set, available on the grounds through vending machines, to test the buying habits of visitors to Disney World.

DAIRY QUEEN MISTY SLUSH.

Telenova; 5 minutes; 1,000 issued; April 1996. Telenova chose AT&T to host this tasty telecard. Sit back and enjoy!

NABISCO SNACKWELL'S.

DeltaCom; 15 minutes; 500 issued; September 1996. The low mintage makes this a nice addition to any corporate logo collection. See "Corporate Corner," Page 10.

GARFIELD THE

MAGICIAN. ACMI; 4 units; 425 issued; July 1996. The low mintage makes this one magic. The card was released at the Southern California Collector's Expo.

PINK PANTHER AT LONG BEACH.

USACard; 10 units, 1,000 issued; September 1996. This could be a treat for coin collectors, too! Inspector Closeau takes the Pink Panther into custody for possession of a 1933 gold Double Eagle. In 1933, a presidential order made it illegal for Americans to own gold bullion privately.

CRAYOLA II. KARS/

Telenova; 10 minutes; 1,500 issued; July 1996. This issue remains a best seller; the first Crayola topped the $60 mark.

America's Most Wanted is compiled monthly by Moneycard Collector and written by dealer Steve Eyer of Mount Zion, Ill. All dealers are encouraged fax a list of their company's top 10 best-selling cards before the 20th of each month.

NEW ISSUES

Bright idea for a card

Blue Ribbon; Thomas Alva Edison; 10 minutes; 1,000 issued; September 1996; (908) 725-4645.

Image is a night view of the famous inventor's Milan, Ohio, birthplace with a model of the first incandescent light superimposed. The card commemorates 1997 as the 150th anniversary of Edison's birth and is intended to raise funds for the birthplace museum.

Hearing the word

LGI Telecom Inc.; Bible Card Spanish Edition; 20 minutes; 5,000 issued; July 1996; call (818) 472-7360.

Callers using the phonecard can hear a series of Biblical promises. The first edition is in Spanish; an English version also is planned.

Up, up and away with ITS set

Interactive Telecard Services; Hot Air Balloon Championship four-card set; 5 minutes each; quantity unknown; September 1996.

Cards commemorating the hot air balloon event in Columbia, Mo., were designed as retail cards, but erroneously read "No resale value" on the reverse. Sales were stopped when the error was discovered. ITS declined to say how many were released.

KISS on cards

Creative Communications International, Inc.; KISS My Access five-card set plus two bonus cards; $25 each; 1,000 of each in first release; (281) 529-4750.

The flamboyant rock group's 1996-97 reunion tour — the quartet's first appearance together in concert in more than 17 years — is the topic of these phonecards. There five interactive KISS My Access cards, with two bonus cards, as well as nine images in blister packs called "KISS Collectibles," no mintage determined, and 6,000 "tour" cards.

Not just blowing smoke

TotalTel; Cigar Afficionado Demi Moore; 5 units; 1,000 issued; September 1996; (201) 812-1100.

Cards were distributed at private cigar party to benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation. Few are available to collectors.

Happy Pink Year!

USA Card; Pink Panther New Year; 10 units, 1997 issued; December 1996; (303) 777-3034 for referral.

Cards marking the new year are available from any USA Card dealer. The New Year's card is the seventh in the Pink Panther series, and the fourth holiday card — joining Halloween, Christmas and Valentine's Day. Plans for an Easter Pink Panther Easter card are in the works.

Promoting Colorado tourism

Interactive Telecard Services; Colorado Ski Country; 3 minutes; 5,000 issued; September 1996; (804) 644-6964.

The Colorado Ski Country organization used card to promote awareness, increase trade show traffic.

BellSouth's prepaid cellular cards

BellSouth Cellular Corp; South Florida Market four-card series; $10, $30, $60, $100 denominations; quantity unavailable; October 1996.

Prepaid cellular cards are aimed at budget-conscious customers in BellSouth's South Florida market and can only be purchased at BellSouth's Miami area offices, not over the phone.

Great pumpkin card

Telenova; Happy Halloween; 5 minutes; 550 issued; September 1996; (802) 457-9000.

Card, with time carried by Cable & Wireless, designed for collectors looking for a Halloween treat.

Tropicana telecard

Grapevine Telecards; Tropicana "Trop In & Chill Out"; 10 units; 500 issued; September 1996; (415) 331-1298.

Card was produced for a campus student-tasting program by Tropicana's advertising agency.

Eagle hologram card

Fast Light Inc.; Eagle Hologram; 5 minutes; 5,000 issued; September 1996; (913) 649-4666.

Company's first card was introduced at New York Telecard World East '96. Time is provided by ACML.

Slick as ice

Mountain America Technologies; Colorado Avalanche Puck; 5 minutes; 996 issued; November 1996; (719) 576-4644.

First of six monthly pucks containing telephone time. Pucks are being sold by the hockey team at its stadium and in various stores in Denver and Colorado Springs. Complete set available with hockey stick that mounts on the wall.

Wolverine telecard issued

Hannibal Communications; University of Michigan Stadium; 10 minutes; 1,500 issued; September 1996; (800) 462-5836.

Phonecard is offered by M-DEN of Ann Arbor, Mich., through its 1996-97 merchandising catalogue and five retail outlets around Ann Arbor.

Racing with Black Gold

Finish Line; Black Gold Jumbo four-card set; $25 denomination; 2,650 of each issued; October 1996; (800) 676-3226.

There are 2,650 each of phonecards featuring Terry Labonte, Jeff Gordon, Ernie Ervan and Bill Elliott. Each card carries 50 minutes of time and is gold foil stamped with the driver's signature in gold. There is one in every box of Black Gold trading cards.
