Striking Appeal

Some moneycards attract collectors and also live up to their names by featuring images of coins and currency.

Collecting AT&T

Serious collectors should consider some of the many affordable AT&T TeleTicket designs for their collections, senior contributing writer Art Becker notes.

36

A Blizzard of Cards

Although the weather was cold and U.S. issuers were quiet, Canadian and Japanese issuers generated a variety of hot phonecards commemorating the 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan.

Looking Super

Sprint is the official telecommunications provider for the National Football League, and it's little surprise that the telco came up with some crowd-pleasers for Super Bowl XXXII.

It's a new breed of moneycard. Available exclusively from the U.S. Postal Service: LibertyCash™ Special Edition Cards, featuring the Kwanzaa and First Supersonic Flight Stamps.

INTRODUCING THE LATEST IN MONEYCARDS. WE PUT OUR STAMP ON IT.

The LibertyCash
Special Edition
Kwanzaa Card.

What makes these cards so special? It's simple. LibertyCash Cards are the only moneycards issued by the U.S. Postal Service. And these Special Edition cards are produced in limited quantities. They also feature what are destined to become some of our most popular stamp designs. Like the First Supersonic Flight Stamp, in tribute to the Bell X-1 flight which broke the sound barrier in 1947. And the Kwanzaa Stamp, honoring the proud cultural heritage of African Americans.

A unique collectible. LibertyCash is a pre-paid card that makes it easier to pay for things at the post office and is now being test-marketed at select areas around the country.* This series is a novel way to enhance your moneycard collection, even if you can't yet use them at your local post office.

Only 5,000 produced. Every card is sequentially numbered for authenticity. You can give it as a gift. Or save it for yourself. LibertyCash Special Edition Cards are a fascinating way to expand your hobby. To order yours, call 1-800-782-6724. And put a unique stamp on your own collection.

Specially designed LibertyCash Card
display carriers.
Free with every card purchase.

Special Edition Series. Cards numbered 1 to 100 will be accompanied by the official Kwanzaa or First Supersonic Flight Stamp first day of issue covers. Orders accepted by phone only. Call before they're sold out. (Kwanzaa Item #931011, $20. Supersonic Item #931021, $20.)

To order, call 1-800-782-6724.

ON THE MONEY

"Moneycard Collector is dedicated to developing and supporting the collector market for telephone and other types of prepaid cards by providing entertainment, news and information for prepaid debit card collectors, dealers, issuers, manufacturers and users."

Even though you are holding the first edition published in Moneycard Collector's new format, don't expect that simple 35-word mission statement to change. This month's new look promises exciting changes, and many additional ways for us to live up to that statement. Some of those new practices were outlined in a letter from the publisher that was mailed with our February edition.

If you missed it, here is what is said: Beginning with this issue, the magazine will look and feel different. It will be printed in a bigger format, which will allow more room for stories and card images. It will be printed on a different stock of paper, which means that advertising will be substantially cheaper. And a new classified ad policy means that every Moneycard Collector subscriber will be entitled to a free classified ad every month — you can't get much cheaper than that!

Readers should take the opportunity to participate in our new "Trading Post" card-swap section as well as having a chance to sound off in the new "Guest Commentary" column. We also are revamping "New Issues," returning contact information so that readers will have a starting point from which to find their favorite moneycards.

We're spreading the word in other ways, too. Our Amos Press sister publication Coin World is running a weekly column called "Moneycard Collector," focusing on providing news and tips for beginning collectors.

The hobbies of coin-collecting and moneycard-collecting complement each other well. Many collectors enjoy both, and there is no need to choose between them.

If you are a reader who has been away for awhile but are revisiting our pages, look for other recent changes that celebrate the new look of moneycard collecting.

We've added "Getting Started," a regular monthly column that offers tips to beginning collectors and the long-popular "America's Most Wanted" has been expanded to include not only the most desirable stored-value cards but also spotlights on older and foreign cards.

Also new this year are "Promos & Offers," a column that looks at some of the card offers available at the grassroots level, and "The Scoop on Chips," which features the latest news about collectible chip cards.

Last, but not least, we have also added a monthly reader survey, so that readers can let us know what they like or don't like. All who participate will be entered in a monthly prize drawing.

We're excited about these changes, and hope that you will be excited about them as well. While others might talk about how important it is for the hobby to grow, we are committed to making changes that will help ensure that growth.

Welcome aboard, and hold on to your seats. It should be a fun ride!

Tom Williams, Editor

More participation means more FUN

The 43rd annual convention of the Florida United Numismatists (FUN 1998) was a success. As one of the largest coin shows in the United States each year, FUN is an important show, setting the pace for the hobby's entire year. Held every January in Orlando, Fla., this show continues to attract large numbers of dealers and attendees from all over the country. The number of registrants this year topped 10,000.

We have had a booth at FUN for the past three years. Visits at the booth, overall interest and sales have increased annually. More and more people stopping by the booth are already familiar with phonecards and stored-value cards, many looking for specific cards to fill spaces in their collections. Five phonecard dealers manned booths this year, in addition to numerous coin dealers with phonecards available. A limited edition FUN 98 phonecard was issued (contact Selby Ungar, the Carson City King, for details and orders). All in all, the show was worthwhile. But that's not my main message here.

Our hobby has seen the number of viable phonecard shows for collectors dwindle. TeleCard World (especially the Jacob Javits show in NYC) and Intele-Card News do not cater to the collector. In fact, these shows have leaned more and more toward pure industry shows of late. We need a place for collectors to gather and enjoy phonecard and stored-value card collecting.

There has been much talk within the hobby to try new venues. It has been suggested that we "piggyback" onto established and successful organizations like the ANA (American Numismatic Association).

Moneycards (phonecards, stored value cards, transit cards, etc.) already are officially recognized by the ANA as a numismatic specialty. "Moneycard Collector" now a weekly column written by Tom Williams and published in Coin World (the most widely read coin collecting publication).

It makes good sense to me to utilize a friendly, established venue. A busier bourse, cross-over between hobbies and a FUN place to visit would be beneficial to all concerned. Preliminary contact with one of FUN's officers to discuss the possibility of a Phonecard Section at FUN 1999 was very positive. If enough phonecard dealers apply for booths and if enough collectors attend, we could have a really FUN time next winter. I know of three phonecard dealers who already have committed to attend.

So, consider making plans to attend the 44th Annual FUN Show; Jan. 7-10, 1999; Orange County Convention Center in Orlando, Fla. (only minutes from Sea World, Universal Studios and Disney World). Admission is free; all you have to do is register.

Please contact me, (800) 750-3506, or Moneycard Collector or your favorite dealer and let us know if you are even slightly interested. The more interest generated, the more serious the plans will be. Make your voice heard to support your hobby.

Besides the allure of the cards, who can resist the temptation of visiting Florida in January?

READERS ALWAYS WRITE

ITA has limited interested in collectors

This letter was sent to International Telecard Association Executive Director Howard Segermark, who was offered a chance to respond, but had not done so by our deadline.

Dear Mr. Segermark, ITA Executive Director:

This note is a public follow-up to my calls to you, my e-mails, my fax of Sept. 29, and our personal conversation in Miami where you implied that my problem with Finish Line was unimportant to you, and that you didn't care about me as an ITA member or as a consumer.

a) Based on your recommendation on Sept. 29 for my immediate written explanation and complaint regarding the Finish Line bankruptcy, and how they cheated the consumer by turning off the PIN numbers of unexpired cards, even though they are currently owned by Global TeleMedia International Inc. an active corporation, and

b) based on your unfulfilled promise to formulate an immediate reply to me along with a letter from the ITA to the Florida Public Service Commission regarding the Finish Line problem, and

c) based on my longtime membership in the ITA from the beginning, as well as being a Florida consumer hurt by Finish Line Collectibles (a Florida corporation), and

d) having provided you with all of the information you wanted regarding the Finish Line situation, including the bankruptcy trustee's name and telephone number, and

e) based on my continued assistance including an official letter written upon your request to the Chairman of the Public Service Commission regarding another matter ...

f) based upon the complete inefficiency and problems with the handling of phonecards that I had donated to your auctions in the past, and

g) based upon the ITA's lack of interest of the prepaid collectibles market, and

h) based upon the FCC ruling establishing a 28- to 35-cent charge for "toll-free" calls from a payphone (where most phonecard companies - including ITA member companies are now debiting the consumer two minutes per call from a payphone, thereby greatly hurting the consumer;

therefore: I have good reasons to believe that the International Telecard Association has only a limited interest in helping the consumer or the collector ... I'm asking you to please remove my name and company name from the membership rolls of the ITA; I do not need to be a member to be ignored by the International Telecard Association.

Stephen L. Schwartz, Sears Phone Card Department, Orlando, Fla.

A perspective on AIDS cards

I am not only a phonecard collector, I also am a person living with AIDS. Last year, because of my illness, I was only able to buy a few phonecards, but I am happy with those.

The main point of this letter is the importance of buying AIDS cards. Whether it is an AmeriVox "Names Project" card or Ken Streetman's Capital Communications Group "Aids International Research Foundation" card, these cards are very important to persons like me.

Moneys from these cards trickle down to local organizations that help us on a one-to-one basis. They help us get to the doctor, put food on our table, keep our lights and heat on, they even have put clothes on my back. But most of all, they give us hope and a chance to live life with quality and dignity.

Research is very, very important. The media have gone to great lengths to inform us that the combination of drugs, commonly called "cocktails," are winning the war on AIDS. What they didn't say is those drugs only work for two-thirds of the HIV population. They also have dangerous side effects. After that, even the federal government's guidelines admit that doctors and patients are on their own. Why, you ask? No research. Once you become resistant to the new inhibitors, like me, the chances are that none will work. So my friends are dying, and I still get sick.

When you see an AIDS-related phonecard, whether you are a dealer or collector, dig deep in your pocket and buy it. It will not only complement your collection, but it directly helps someone like me.

My sincere thanks to Moneycard Collector for the coverage you gave AmeriVox's "Names Project" cards, as well as Ken Streetman's "AIDS International Research Foundation" cards. Mr. Streetman and I have spent many hours discussing the hope and help his cards will provide. He is extremely dedicated to do as much as possible to help end this pandemic. Buy the cards!

Mario G. Moceri, Houston, Texas

Changes foster mixed feelings

Thank you very much for the February 1998 issue of Moneycard Collector. I'm always excited when I find your magazine in my mailbox; I read it from front to back with great interest and I also enjoy the colorful images of some of the phonecards.

I am very disappointed to read in your special insert in the February issue that you will change the size of future issues to a much-larger tabloid format.

Up until now, I found Moneycard Collector a very collectible item in itself, mainly because of its current size, type of paper, etc. This no doubt will no longer be the case. I will treat your future issues just like your sister publication, Linn's Stamp News, to which I subscribe. After reading it, I always cut out what interests me the most and the rest is discarded. I am really sorry to see this happen to such a great magazine as Moneycard Collector.

I look forward, however, to your other changes which will begin in the March issue, such as free classifieds, free "Trading Post," more information on new issues, etc. Thank you for understanding my point of view on your change.

Franz Schwartz Jr., Wilmington, N.C.

Few changes are easy, and we didn't make these without a lot of thought. We believe the trade-off for some glossy images will be more information and a chance to get more collectors, dealers and issuers involved in this great hobby.

PROMOS & OFFERS

The store aisles and restaurants are alive with phonecard offers, if you take the time to look. There was an MCI Coca-Cola 5-minute telecard Christmas promotion that came as a peel-off on a special large-sized "Happy Holidays, Enjoy Coca-Cola" cup, the fountain Coke you can get at fast-food places.

It is like a six-page booklet, with the back cover pasted firmly to the cup. The cover detaches, and is paper and has the script Coca-Cola Classic on it, along with MCI and some other words. Inside the front cover is the reverse of the standard-size telecard. The other pages in the booklet promote MCI's Social Expressions line of retail phonecards and give redemption rules and other information.

Fox Lorber / Winstar Home Entertainment included a phonecard offer inside packages of certain of their videotapes, such as the very well done "The Unknown Marx Brothers." Those purchasing the tapes received a post card, and, when you sent it back, you received an exposed-PIN card, along with a catalog detailing their many foreign and American-independent videos. The front of the $5/20-unit no-graphics card (with services by Winstar) says, "Always On Call With Great Home Entertainment!"

There are two current promotions featuring Sprint Ore-Ida 20-minute phonecards.

The first card has the same image from last year's phonecards. It is available through mailing in the form from specially marked packages of Ore-Ida products and three UPCs per card (limit two cards per household). This offer expires Feb. 28. The second promotion has a new image and is available by sending in the form from specially marked packages of Ore-Ida mashed potatoes (not just any Ore-Ida product), and three UPCs per card. This offer expires July 1998.

Sprint Dow Household Cleaners; 10-minute phonecard; Send in form (mailed to people who previously sent away for other Dow offers) with proofs of purchase and receive up to six phonecards. The offer expires March 31. So the only way to get this form was to have done a previous Dow phonecard rebate.

Here are some other offers we have seen recently:

Phonecard Express Vaseline Intensive Care Anti-Bacterial Lotion; 15 minutes; die-cut. Promotion is now over. It was available by mailing in form and proof of purchase.

MCI Duracell/Batman; 10 minutes; three-card set. Promotion is now over. It was available by mailing in form and proofs of purchase. Purchases had to be made at Walmart.

WorldCom Coke/Sundblom Santa Hotline card. (Not good for phone time.) Promotion is now over. Cards were given out free with the purchase of a Happy Meal from McDonalds located inside of Walmart stores. Reverse side has McDonalds and Walmart logos.

PhoneCard Express Senokot 10-minute keychain phonecard. Available by mailing in form (found inside of specially marked packages) and receipt showing purchase. Offer expires in 2002 or while supplies last.

Legendary Concepts Nail Fetish ChatCard; 5 minutes. Promotion is now over. This was available by mailing in form and proofs of purchase.

Those purchasing a deluxe copy of the Miramax Home Entertainment (Disney) surprise-hit video "Scream" were treated to an added bonus: one of four possible trading cards, plus a striking 10-minute phonecard. Network services are provided by CTC Communications Corp.

Here's a tip from collector Maria Rost Rublee: "I was in Kohl's the other day (a department store similar to Upton's or JC Penney's), and noticed they had gift cards for sale. They had a sign prominently displayed saying 'Gift cards have no value until scanned at register' (to deter thieves I presume). Well, since they have no value, I asked if I could have one unscanned (with no value on it). The customer service rep looked at me like I was crazy, but I explained that some people collect them. She smiled and said I couldn't have one but why didn't I just buy one, and then use it to purchase the items I was going to buy anyway? If people are collecting these cards, this is one way to get them!"

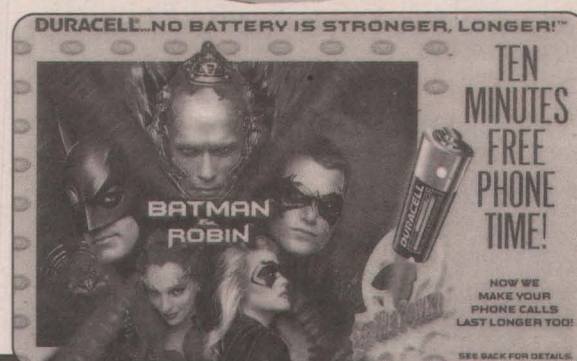

Maria Rost Rublee and Jim Chudnow contributed to this month's column.

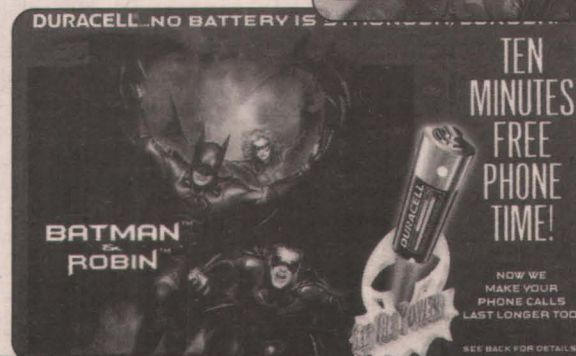

WorldCom; Coke/Sundblom Santa Hotline; no long-distance time; quantity unavailable; December 1997.

Phonecard Express; Vaseline Intensive Care die-cut; 15 minutes; quantity unavailable; 1997.

MCI; Duracell/Batman three-card set; 10 minutes each; quantity unavailable; 1997.

GETTING STARTED

Beginning collectors usually try to define exactly what they want to collect. They are worried that their collection will go off on a tangent, and that "they are doing it wrong." Well, it's not true! For a while, while you are investigating the various areas that your collection will settle into, collect what appeals to you. As you handle some of the cards, your ideas will begin to come together, and a grand plan will begin to form in your mind. The plan generally falls into one of several areas of interest. That's what we'll discuss today.

Topical collections

One of the most popular ways to collect is to select one topic or theme and concentrate on it no matter if it crosses country or company lines. The most popular topic is Coca-Cola, followed by Disney, McDonald's, Marilyn Monroe, and so on. In this mode of collecting you will seek to put together a collection of one selected topic, say, for example, all the Disney cards that have been made. This will encompass some from the USA, some from France, some from South America, some from New Zealand, and lots and lots from Japan. Other countries like Germany and England and Singapore also have nice examples. Altogether, more than a dozen countries contribute to this topic. Some are expensive; some are less than $5 in mint condition. There is a wide area. You may want to set a maximum per card for a while as you get comfortable. And remember your budget. The cards you want this month probably will be there next month, too!

If you pick a topic like Coca-Cola, you will have the advantage of a book on just that subject. That is helpful, because it tells you at a glance what you're missing. With other topics, you will need to forge ahead without knowing your exact destination, and "scan the horizon" on your own to find available cards. A fantastic "find" may be around the next corner!

A friendly collector or dealer can guide you in the right direction. Many of the leading dealers can produce a mini-list for you with just the topic you chose on it. Such are the marvels of modern computers. If you have collected some price lists, like our previous articles suggested, then you have noticed that some dealers list the popular topics and the cards available. If your chosen topic is aardvarks, don't look for a specialized listing very often though. You'd be on your own here! Your "fabulous find" may be many termite mounds away!

One company

In the beginning, in the Dark Ages of U.S. collecting (five years ago!), the predominant way of collecting was by company, especially NY Tel (NYNEX), AT&T, ACMI, and Amerivox. Many complete, or near complete collections of NY Tel were put together, while others were seeking the AT&T Teletickets. ACMI created a whole culture of Endangered Species collectors, especially in the Far East with their instantly popular Panda. Amerivox promoted collecting their cards and a large body of Amerivox collectors sprang up among their representatives and others who admired the pioneering aspects and handsome designs of their cards.

Moneycard Collector T-Shirts

One country

Many collectors also collect one country, for various reasons. Either they are from there, visited there, or are intrigued by the country. I like small countries which have nice designs and a small number of cards. Andorra fits nicely here. Also Brunei. Or Egypt. What about Iceland or Aaland Islands, or Norfolk Island? Just a few cards to complete. One of the most popular is Ireland because of strong historical ties and the reasonable prices on most cards. You may need to develop contacts overseas to keep up-to-date. Luckily, many countries such as Ireland and Aaland have very active Collector Services, which provide a common meeting point for collectors.

Also, the Internet can provide correspondents and information. Keep in mind that while we are just beginning here in the USA, other collectors have many years of experience under their belts. Feel free to plunge in. Everyone was a beginner once, not too long ago.

Chip cards

Another way to collect is by type of card. Worldwide there are about nine major types of cards. Some collect only chip cards, others specialize in Autelca, or Urmet cards. There are books on the latter two types. Others collect only jumbo cards, or cards with special shapes (usually called die-cut cards) or they specialize in proofs or specimen cards. The newest category is stored-value cards, also blessed with a book.

Topics

I will close with a list of topics — don't be afraid to add more — and this thought: Never lose sight of the most basic rule in forming a collection: Collect what appeals to you. Have fun!

Striking Appeal

Moneycards live up to names with desirable images

by Jim Chudnow

As the 102nd American Numismatic Association convention approached, Luis Vigdor of New York's Powell Associates saw a chance to do some cross-marketing. By creating a commemorative phonecard for the event, he could create a dual collectible that stressed the relationship between prepaid cards and money and featured historic coin images designed to stimulate the interest of both coin and phonecard collectors.

Accordingly, Vigdor worked with AmeriVox and printer Brilliant Color Cards to produce two designs for the July 1993 show: a $5-denomination card showing an 1860 Indian Head $3 gold coin and a $20-denomination card picturing the Oregon Trail half dollar (AVX Pr81a). Both originally were printed in quantities of 500 and the Indian Head card was so popular that 5,000 more subsequently were issued. The difference between the two (AVX Pr80, Pr80-2) can be detected by the printing date on the reverse.

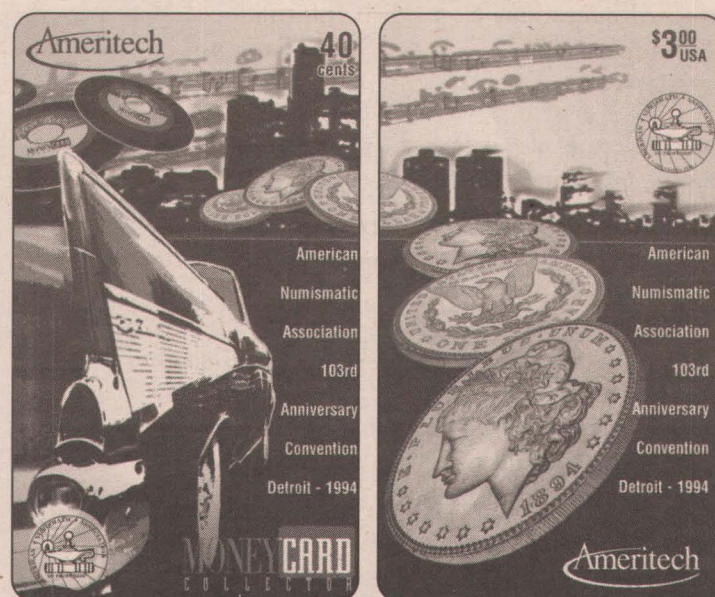

The phonecard industry in the U.S. was new at that time, and thus, as a promotional effort, Vigdor happily gave away the 25 to 50 samples, tests and proofs of those cards — which now are valued at more than the "live" cards, due to their scarcity.

Moneycard collectors who want to complement coin collections or those who simply want to build a topical collection around one of man's oldest fascinations will find plenty to choose from. Dozens of rare coins and notes, as well as many of the most common — too numerous to mention here — have been pictured on prepaid cards.

Another early example was an phonecard issued in August 1993 to mark Pope John Paul II's visit to Denver. The event was marked by the issuance of a silver medallion, and Klaus Degler (now co-owner of USACard) was instrumental in having that image put on an AmeriVox phonecard. The card (AVX Pr96) was issued in a quantity of 500 and proved so popular that an additional 1,500 were printed (AVX Pr96-2). USACard has gone on to produce many cards with coin and currency images for a variety of shows.

Commemorating shows

Rivalling USACard is Selby Unger's Carson City King, the undisputed king of low-mintage phonecards commemorating various U.S. numismatic shows and promoting coin dealers — well over 100 to date. Like others, Unger started out working with AmeriVox on his early cards (which tended to have black scratch-offs rather than the silver-colored ones now common). By late 1996, he was having cards produced for him and his clients by Tell One Inc. Unless stated otherwise, Carson City King's Tell One cards usually were issued in a quantity of 100 live — usually for 5 minutes, 24 samples, and eight proofs.

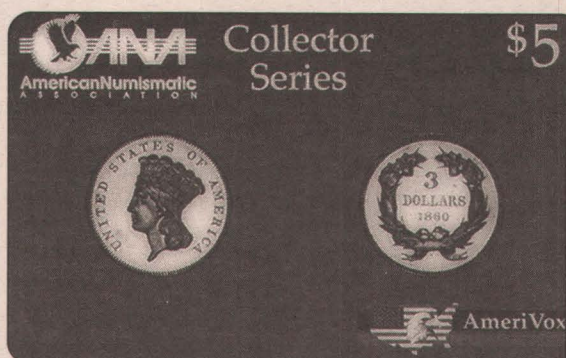

Ameritech; ANA Detroit 1994-Moneycard Collector launch two-card set; 40-cent and $3 denominations, respectively; 19,000 and 6,000 issued, respectively; July 1994.

Unger notes that when coin shows and dealers first contact him, they know little about phonecards or what they want — outside of the fact that they wish to have cards done as promotional tools. Usually, they leave the design up to him and he normally picks historical coin or paper money images that correspond to the type of items likely to be found at the shows. His philosophy is to keep the quantities generally low (up to 500), as that tends to make the items of more potential value to collectors.

A number of different companies have used money as an attention-getting thematic since the cards mentioned above. One of the more historically significant cards, according to Vigdor, is the July 27, 1994, ANA Convention set done by Ameritech for the Detroit show. Not only was the issuer a Baby Bell, but the card (AMT Pr2) was part of a two-card puzzle set. The companion card (AMT Pr1) promoted the launch of Moneycard Collector.

For that same show, AmeriVox issued a three-card set: the $ 2.50 one, AVX Pr280, showed an 1870 Proof $2.50 quarter eagle, known as The Coronet. The $5 version, issued in conjunction with Powell Associates, portrayed an extremely rare Liberty Head V nickel owned by the ANA World Money Museum (AVX Pr281) and the $10 card in two versions (AVX Pr282a and Pr282b) shows a 1933 Indian Head $10 gold eagle.

The first three phonecards USACard ever issued concerned coins, and that attention to the numismatic hobby continues to today. It is scarcely surprising that currency-related cards would be a favorite of USACard: The Denver-based company was founded by the merging in 1994 of AmeriVox; ANA '94 1860 $3 Gold Indian Head; $5 denomination; 500 issued; July 1993.

AmeriVox; Pope's Visit to Denver; $5 denomination; 500 issued; August 1993.

phonecard operations from Mish International Monetary Inc. and Rocky Mountain Coin. And USACard's issues are even closer to cash than those of most issuers — the time on USACard issues never expires.

USACard's first issue was for the ANA show in Detroit, USA 1 is a complimentary $2.50 card featuring a 1994 gold American Eagle and an 1891 Liberty gold piece. They soon followed that card with cards featuring the $100 Benjamin Franklin and $20 Andrew Jackson bills, USA 2 and USA 3, respectively).

Klaus Degler and Paul Peeders of USACard note that customers like the way cards attract people to their show booths or tables. The dealers often tell them what type of designs they want, although when they are doing the official cards for numismatic shows, they are often given latitude to plan the basic designs.

One of the most memorable coin cards designed by USACard combines the coin-and-currency thematic with another popular theme. Issued for the June 1995 Long Beach Coin show, the card features a cameo of Marilyn Monroe surrounded by coins. The card, which says "Wish You Were Here!" has three versions: two $10 ones with printing in blue or red (USA 27 and USA 28) and a 100-unit VIP card (USA 29). A Marilyn Monroe look-alike appeared again on a card (AVX Pr754). The design features a mermaid, an Aladdin-style lamp and one of the 10 known pieces of the 1879 Coiled Hair Stella $4 gold patterns, designed by George T. Morgan.

Another early card of note was produced for the 104th ANA Convention held in August 1995 in Anaheim, Calif. AmeriVox issued 1,000 live and 200 samples (imprinted "test") of its "NumisMagic" $5

For those interested in regular listings of cards commemorating U.S. coin and currency shows, a list is available for $4 (for four quarterly issues) from Lee Quast, World Paper & Numismatics, P.O. Box 421002, Plymouth, Minn. 55442. Here's a sampling of some of the other show cards that have been produced:

There were two cards issued at the ANA's 105th Anniversary Convention, held in Denver in August 1996. The official show card (USA 83), 1,000 produced with 10 minutes of time, was Denver-based

Also at the show was an ill-starred card issued by GTS Canada for the Royal Canadian Mint, and designed to promote its new bi-metallic $2 Polar Bear coins. Five hundred cards were made, but most withdrawn and subsequently destroyed after two spelling errors were detected. The net issue is believed to be 102 cards, containing the errors "Colardo" for "Colorado" and "Numisimatic" for "Numismatic." Because no corrected cards were issued to replace it, this error-laden card is not considered an error card, but it has generated a lot of interest among collectors.

cards is the 1915-S Panama-Pacific Exposition $50 gold coin. It can be seen on January 1997 cards for the 42nd Annual FUN show in Orlando, Fla., the WESPNEC '97 show in New York, and the July 1997 New York City Coliseum Coin Show.

Coins and designs

A couple of other fascinating cards can be seen on Tell-One/Carson City cards issued for Carl Bombara U.S. Currency in New York: One (CCK Pr2) pictures an Indian chief in full headdress on a $5 bill, and the other (CCK Pr23) shows a mis-printed (mis-cut) $20 bill with the normal bottom of a bill at the top, and the top of another at the bottom.

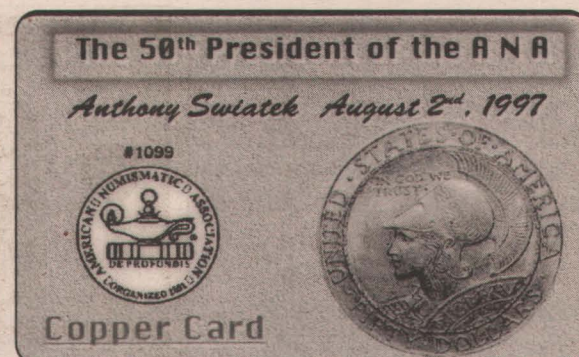

The comparatively short-lived Benjamin Franklin half-dollar coin is shown on a card Carson City King issued for the South Street Exchange. The front and back of the Oregon Trail coins are shown on a card they did for Dan Walker Rare Coins.

A three-card series was done by them for the installation of the 50th president of the ANA, Anthony Swiatek in August 1997. Carson City King also issued one of the funniest cards in March 1997, for Art Kagin's candidacy to be the vice president of the ANA. In addition to showing a 1793 Liberty coin, it also shows a coin stating that Kagin has been a member for 59 years, and his motto, "At 77 he can't afford to wait."

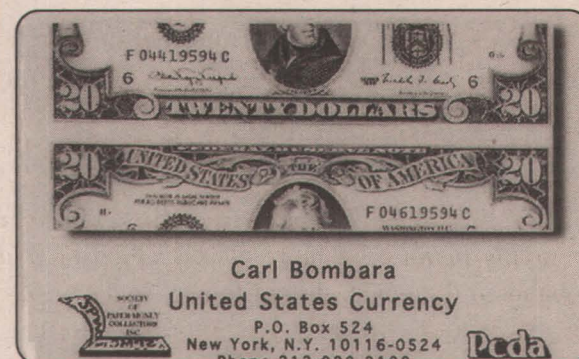

While Carson City King cards generally concentrate on a coin or note image for its own sake, USACard also has had fun using coins as design elements in its show cards. Thus, a card (USA 112) issued for the March 1997 ANA show in Cleveland commemorates that city's Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame by incorporating a guitar into the design, with coins forming parts of musical notes; an issue (USA 114) for the 58th Annual Central States Numismatic Society

Convention was memorialized in a $5 (10-unit) phonecard picturing the Statue of Liberty holding a Walking Liberty coin (rather than a tablet) in her left hand. USACard issued 1,000 standard, 50 jumbo and 50 standard-size sample cards.

In addition to the plentiful show cards, there have been many other numismatic-themed phonecards that would be appropriate in any collection.

Among those are the NYNEX Brasher Doubloon Series. These were the first remote-memory cards (NYN 74 through NYN 77) by the issuer, which has since merged with Bell Atlantic. Not only do they show the historic — and very valuable! — coins, but they also bear the now-vanished NYNEX logo.

Franklin on phonecards

The redesigned Benjamin Franklin $100 bill attracted attention from at least two phonecard issuers. In August 1996, USACard issued 2,000 cards portraying the new off-center portrait. This 10-unit card with no expiration date (USA 154) also was featured on 50 sequentially numbered samples. Another version was done by Grapevine Telecards in October 1996. There were only 100 of those 100-unit cards (GRP 12) issued on behalf of Strategic Telecom Systems.

Besides cards done for shows, a number of other cards with coin and currency themes have been released over the years.

IdealDial has specialized in promotional cards, particularly in what they call a "PHOLDables" brand, often die-cut in a circular shape which can be folded in half for ease in carrying in a wallet or purse. One ongoing $2.50 "demonstration" card issued in 1997 features an enlarged 1993 Washington quarter with no listed expiration time; it can access a long-distance call, or enhanced services such as stock quotes, sports information or psychic readings.

During the 1996 Olympics, there was a series of phonecards issued under exclusive license with U.S. Mint. Although the commemorative Olympic coins that were depicted were striking and Pictured above are the $5 denomination British Soldiers card (total of 50,000 issued) and the $10 denomination General Washington card (25,000 issued). Lower mintages of other cards in the set translates into a lower total number of sets.

Convention held in Indianapolis in April 1997, shows an Indy-style racing car with coins as wheels; and a Ferris wheel-sized coin under a fireworks-shot sky is pictured on the show card (USA 122) for Milwaukee's 16th Annual Mid-America Coin Convention, held in June 1997. Five hundred live and 25 samples of each of the $5 cards was issued. The 1997 ANA Show — "A World's Fair of Money" — was held in New York from July 30-Aug. 3. The 106th Anniversary the cards were well executed, the program was mired in controversy between the Mint, the issuer, J Cubed Inc., and the card manufacturer and time provider, New Media Technologies, which issued conflicting reports on the mintage. Many of those cards ended up being dumped at discount department store chains for a fraction of their original selling price (Moneycard Collector, "Quik Takes," January 1997).

Olympic coin images also appeared on stored-value Visa Cash-branded cards issued by NationsBank (NBC S16 through NBC S19) for the 1996 games in Atlanta. The four-card set featured the coins' obverses on the card fronts, while the back of the cards displayed the coins' reverses.

Powell Associates' Vigdor sees the moneycards of the future potentially being even more closely allied to traditional currency. Probably in the not-so-distant future, collectors are likely to see the U.S. Mint and similar governmental institutions (Canadian, Australian and other bullion issuers) and private mints directly issuing such moneycards, as a logical modern-day extension to issuing metal and paper currency.

AMERICA'S MOST WANTED

If the cards in this month's "America's Most Wanted" look familiar, it's because they are. All of the cards listed here or pictured below have been in the pages of Moneycard Collector in recent months, most of them in "America's Most Wanted" or in "Hot Cards." This month's roster includes several low-mintage cards, as well as Sprint's Radio Shack Jetsons card, of which a whopping 7 million were made in three denominations (5 minutes, 20 minutes and 60 minutes).

Promotional cards continue to be among those that collectors want the most, according to dealers who participated in this month's column (Please see listing on Page 13.)

BRAND NEWS

Welcome to a new month and a new name for what veteran Moneycard Collector readers have known as the "Corporate Corner" column. We think the "Brand News" is a more accurate reflection of what readers have come to expect from this column — the latest tidbits on popular images, brand names and logos on moneycards.

Leading off the inaugural column is one of the nicest cards I've seen in quite some time. Communications Design Group issued a real colorful Krylon spray paint card for Sherwin Williams in January. There were 25,300 cards issued with 30 minutes of time and no scratchoff. When the card is attached to the cardboard carrier, it blends in with the background picture — seven different colored cans of spray paint.

In order to get the card, customers buying the paint had to take a picture of their finished project and send it along with their proof of purchase to Sherwin Williams.

If you live in New Mexico and drove into any one of 35 Jiffy Lube locations during the holiday season, you received a 10-minute card issued by Grapevine Telecards just for having some service done to your car. There were 3,000 10-minute cards issued.

Readers might remember the Stroh's Beer card by Winston Taylor that we reported on last month. The issuer has tapped another phonecard keg with a nice-looking card for Old Milwaukee Beer. The cards have 10 minutes of time provided by Cable & Wireless and there were 700 regular edition cards issued. The regular version of the card was available to consumers who purchased Old Milwaukee Beer. Consumers received a coupon with purchase and had to redeem it in order to get one of the cards.

If you're a collector, you'll love the Special "Collectors Edition" of this card. There was an additional 250 individually numbered cards issued that also says "Collectors Edition" on the reverse and there is no scratch off on either version. This is a great card that has everything collectors want in a card. A tip of the hat to Winston Taylor. Contact your favorite dealer for this card.

Two of the latest ITS — now part of iTELSA — cards were issued for Lee Sport and Kmart. 1,000 five-minute cards were issued for Lee Sport. The card was available to consumers who stopped into their VF Factory outlet store and participated in a survey about the New 98 Lee Sport Spring Line.

Also from ITS is a 10-minute card issued for a Kmart employee safety awareness program. A drawing was held at each of the 2,000 Kmart stores across the USA and a predetermined number of employees received the cards for participating in a safety training quiz. There were 7,200 of the cards issued.

One of DeltaCom's latest features Nabisco's popular candy brands. There were 500 10-minute cards issued; most distributed internally to Nabisco employees.

Blue Cross continues to use phonecards as a promotional item. Phonecard Express issued cards to help the Blue Cross sales force enroll new members. Cards were distributed at sales meetings. Originally, Blue Cross ordered 15,000 cards and just recently re-ordered 30,000 of the 15-minute cards.

New from Caymen Resources is another Mexicana Airlines card featuring the new Boeing 757-200 image. There were 500 total cards issued in a variety of denominations. 5-, 50-, 60-, and 150 unit cards were issued with most being used by Mexicana pilots and mechanics traveling abroad for training and business travel. Very few were made available to dealers.

DeltaCom; Nabisco Multi-Brand; 10 minutes; 500 issued; December 1997.

OH CANADA

News on Canadian phonecards flows at different rates throughout the year. Some of the news is just too interesting to wait until our normal April column, so here's an extra look at what's going on up north.

Let's start with a look at the Toronto Sportcard & Memorabilia Expo, held in November at the Toronto International Center. The show is one of the largest of its kind in Canada, and attracts visitors from throughout North America as well as Japan and Finland.

Out of about 400 booths, three offered phonecards, all from businesses based in Ontario. Frank Ataw of Toronto had the only all-phonecard booth at the show, sharing his space with Roy Stark, a keen collector. The other two phonecard dealers, Ben Osato of Oshawa and Louis Kurowski of Mississauga, supplemented their phonecard selections with sports trading cards.

The trio expressed different reactions to the show. Price seemed to be the biggest motivator at the Ataw/Stark booth, with a large offering of North American remote-memory specimen cards, priced at $1 each, proving popular. Like the Collectors International 1997 ("Show Stoppers," February 1998), hockey cards were popular, including the Score Board 7-Eleven hockey series and the IDB Worldcom Wayne Gretzky card. All three dealers also mentioned that Bell Canada QuickChange cards, especially cards intended to be used, were in demand. Visitors to the booths were amazed at the variety of phonecards available.

Kurowski felt that this show was "too early" for a phonecard show, but said he is planning an all-phonecard show for early June in conjunction with the Greater Toronto Phonecard Club.

Cardinal/ Smartalk-Canada

Among the many recent business moves of Smartalk Teleservices Inc. was the purchase of Cardinal VoiceCard of Toronto in November 1997. The company now will be known as Smartalk-Canada. Still showing the Cardinal logo are the third series of Coca-Cola designs. The cards can be purchased at Mac's, Mike's Mart and Becker convenience stores with the purchase of 12 cans of Coke. The distribution of the three designs — polar bear, Santa closeup and Santa with toys — was not even. There were 6,650 of each design issued, and each outlet has co-branded cards. Other recent designs include a "Men in Black" card, which has an identical obverse to the American Smartalk version, as well as cards advertising Petro Canada gasoline.

Cyberpro

Cyberpro is a Montreal-based organization that provides smart card services to businesses that began as a joint venture with French chip-card manufacturer Oberthur. The joint venture ended in 1996 and most new cards carry a Schlumberger chip. Cards issued for the Capitole Theater and Normandin restaurants were mentioned in the report on the Collectors International 1997. New this year are matching $20 and $50 cards for the St. Hubert Barbecue restaurant chain.

The cards are marketed as gift certificates and can be used for restaurant, takeout and home delivery in Quebec, Ontario and New Brunswick.

Calibre

As a fund-raiser, the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters commissioned a set of three 10-minute cards. The 3,000 sets depict different types of waterfowl as painted by wildlife artist Michael Dumas. Proceeds from the set, which sells for $34.95 or less, benefit grassroots conservation programs in Ontario. While the cards read "Network Services by Calibre" on the reverse, the customer service number answers as "NBTel Interactive" and the customer service representatives are not familiar with the "Calibre" name.

CardCaller

Although CardCaller has not appeared in these pages for some time, the company quietly has issued a variety of designs during 1997. Many are retail designs focusing on the beauty of British Columbia and Alberta, plus an additional series of Montreal-area sights. A custom card was produced for the popular Royal Canadian Air Farce comedy troupe, to be packaged with their videos sold at Eaton's. CardCaller also has produced what appears to be the first political party phonecard in Canada, for the Reform party, although the image was not available at press time. For callers looking for discounts on overseas calls, CardCaller has produced the "Connection" cards for specials to one country and "Ratebuster/Callbuster" paper cards for access to different countries.

CyberPro; Capitole Theater Quebec; $25, $50 and $100 denominations; quantity unavailable; 1997.

HOT CARDS

MONEYCARD COLLECTOR

Welcome to Hot Cards. This list represents the most heavily sold and traded cards within the last month. Due to the size of the Price Guide, it is often very time-consuming for readers to make their way through the listings in a short amount of time. We created HOT CARDS to provide you trends information quickly, accurately and concisely. Prices reflected on this page are dealer asking/selling prices only for this month.

How to Use The Moneycard Collector Price Guide

Price listings in the Moneycard Collector Price Guide are provided only as a guide and are based on price lists supplied by several dealers around the world and on other market information. Listings without prices will be completed as suitable market information becomes available.

Of course, actual card values must be determined by the buyer and seller, and the Moneycard Collector Price Guide is just that - a guide.

NUMBERING SYSTEM

S (before #) = Sports

a card depicting an organized, competitive sports-related image (comes before numerals, e.g. S125)

Pr (before #) = Private card issued for a customer, distributed by the customer at his/her discretion

Post-numerical descriptor (falls after the numeral)

#-2 = Second Printing

the second printing of a card; a three, four or greater number can follow to denote the actual print run; occurs often with Canadian cards or unlimited run cards

a-z = error/variety

a card whose identical front or back differs from the card with the primary listing; includes language variations, but not denominational variations

M = model/prototype

full-front printed card, may or may not be full-back printed, never issued

E = error

card with an error that caused its destruction or recall

J = jumbo

an oversized or jumbo card

P = proof

artwork on front, blank back

R = replacement

a card that replaced a defective or recalled card

S (after #) = specimen

artwork on front, complete back with false or no pin, or word "sample" or "test"

T = trial/test

live card used specifically for testing a stored value card system

Moneycard Collector is committed to providing collectors with the most accurate and unbiased pricing information available in the phone and debit card hobby. Data used in compiling this month's guide was supplied by the following dealers whom we thank for their assistance:

• Acme Telecards	• Powell Associates

*BellSouth states that a total of 80M cards were produced for the trial, but the exact number of each denomination is not know. All remaining unsold cards were withdrawn in May 1995 and destroyed in October 1995. Most dealers estimate that approximately 15,000 of each card were actually issued, but the actual number may even be lower.

At the Phone Card Connection, one of our most popular topics is the stamp phone card. These are phone cards embedded with real U.S. postage stamps, with backgrounds designed to enhance the image on the stamp. Tell-One is one of the leaders in this field and has produced subject areas such as the Olympics, cartoons, music, & popular American icons in very limited quantities.

Phone Card Connection specializes in stamp phone cards as well as ad/promo cards & show cards, and offers many starter and theme packages, such as beer, food, and cities. Contact us for these cards, and many more. We also cater to the new collector with the right mix of advice and price and have been doing this since 1994.

NEW ISSUES

Groundhogs on phonecards

U S WEST; Groundhog Day; $5 denomination; 3,000 issued; December 1997.

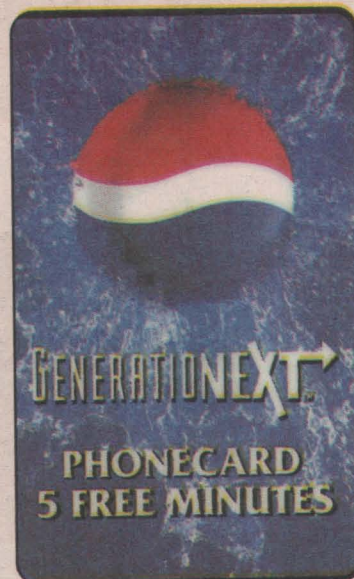

The issuer believes this might be the first card to celebrate this uniquely American February holiday. The Groundhog Day card is the fourth and last in U S WEST's 1997 Celebration Series. Call (800) 739-3339.

Pepsi generates telecard

1-800-PRE-PAID; Pepsi Generation Next; 5 minutes; 8,000-plus issued; January 1998.

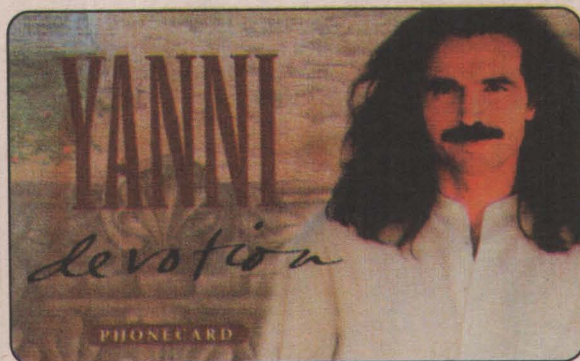

The promotional cards featuring Pepsi's new logo design were used in an internal launch and were distributed to employees in Pepsi's western markets, including Denver, Albuquerque, Phoenix and Salt Lake City. No cards were set aside for public distribution. Please contact your favorite dealer or consult our "Dealer Directory" pages.

Yearning for Yanni

Cable & Wireless; Yanni-Devotion; 10 minutes; quantity unavailable; September 1997.

International recording artist Yanni and his latest recording, "Devotion," are the subject of this promotional card. A recording directs callers to a phone number that gives concert information. Call (703) 287-6160 or fax (703) 760-1799.

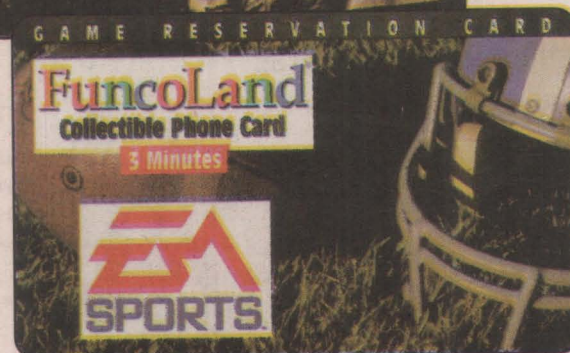

Funco Inc., Crash 2; 3 minutes; 5,000 issued; September 1997.

Let the games begin

Funco Inc., through its FuncoLand stores, is a retailer of new and used interactive video games, hardware and accessories. Phonecards, with network services by CommCard Inc., are used to promote events and specific game titles, and about 25 cards promoting each new game, seven titles in all, were distributed to each store. The company, headquartered in Minneapolis, operates 249 stores, plus a mail-order business and Game Informer magazine. Contact your nearest FuncoLand store or call (612) 946-8883 or fax (612) 946-7250.

Funco Inc., Blasto; 3 minutes; 5,000 issued; September 1997.

NEW ISSUES

Suited for play

Grapevine Telecards; Cyborg Clothing; 10 minutes; 5,050 issued (August 1997), 7,700 issued (October 1997).

Skateboard clothing manufacturer Cyborg Clothing of Los Angeles used the cards as promotional giveaways at apparel shows in Los Angeles and New York. The cards feature a Cyborg – half human, half robot – skater zooming out of a celestial formation. E-mail www.cyborgclothing.com or call (415) 331-1298.

Seattle series premieres

Gazelle Telecard (GZT); Seattle Skyline No. 1; 15 minutes; 250 issued; November 1997.

The card is the first issued in a planned series that eventually is to include several unique phonecards, each featuring original images by local artists. Cable & Wireless provides the time. Call (888) 860-9359 or fax (206) 935-3515.

C&W card is on the marquee

Cable & Wireless; 10 minutes; quantity unavailable; 1997.

Cards were issued for Cablevision promotional campaign introducing that company's new affiliation with Radio City Music Hall. Cards were distributed to visitors at Radio City Music Hall, commuters at Grand Central and Penn Stations and attendees of related events. For more information, call (703) 734-4474

AT&T Canada; Twix - It Kicks; 15 minutes; 25,000 issued; September 1997.

AT&T Canada's sweet tooth

A sweet deal from Effem Foods was available last fall. The maker of Mars, Snickers, M&Ms, and Twix chocolate bars offered a choice of four designs advertising the candy. Chocolate lovers needed to send in two wrappers from multi-packs (regular or Halloween-sized) of the above chocolate bars or Three Musketeers bars for each card. All cards carry 15 minutes of phone time. Please contact your favorite dealer or consult our "Dealer Directory" pages.

AT&T Canada; Mars; 15 minutes; 25,000 issued; September 1997.

USACard does the reel thing

USACard; Doctor Zhivago; 10 minutes; 500 issued; October 1997.

This card and "The Wizard of Oz" (see "America's Most Wanted") continue issuer's earlier movie-themed releases of "Casablanca" and "Gone With the Wind." In addition to the live cards, there are 25 samples and 10 proofs of each. As with all USACard issues, there is no expiration date. Call (303) 777-3034 or fax (303) 733-4946.

NEW ISSUES

Detroit Red Wings fly on phonecards

Sideline Sports/Comm Card Inc.; Detroit Red Wings six-card series (two-card set and four-card set); 5 minutes each; 10,000 of each card issued; 1997.

Two sets of cards celebrate the 1996-97 Stanley Cup champions. The sequentially numbered cards originally were marketed in two-card and four-card blister packs through Meijer department stores, but the issuer says they were withdrawn from those stores. For more information call (616) 896-8180 or fax (616) 896-1174.

Coke is it, times two

Kaanapali Maui cards were produced for a senior PGA tournament. The Summerset '97 card was issued for an annual Labor Day weekend festival in Little Rock, Ark. In both cases, the cards given to event participants and VIPs, and both cards featured the popular Coca-Cola logo. Call (415) 331-1298 or fax (415) 331-9259.

iTELSA/ITS; Holiday Greetings; 10 minutes; quantity unavailable; December 1997.

Jingle, one more time

Phonecard (above, left) came in a holiday greeting card of the same design, with artwork done by 7-year-old Daniel Fernandez of Miami. This is one of the first cards produced since iTELSA and ITS merged, and lists both companies' names. Call (800) 800-7199 or fax (305) 374-0593.

LCI International; LCI Snow Blocks; 15 minutes; quantity unavailable; December 1997.

Season's greetings from LCI include two entries, one with an elf, the other showing the LCI logo done in igloo-style lettering. The cards were billed as "limited edition" and available only for a limited time. Call (800) 457-2114.

LCI International; Santa's Elf; 30 minutes; quantity unavailable; December 1997.

LOOKING SUPER

When it comes to the Super Bowl, why should phonecard collectors expect anything less than a super promotional effort by Sprint, the official telecommunications provider of the National Football League?

Regardless of whether you were rooting for the Green Bay Packers or the victorious Denver Broncos during Super Bowl XXXII, if you are a moneycard collector, then you should be a fan of the Sprint phonecards issued to celebrate the game.

The more accessible Sprint cards are the 32-card series of Super Bowl replica tickets that are 10-minute phonecards. To get those cards, customers had to sign up with Sprint for long-distance services. Every month that a person retains Sprint as his carrier, he receives four of the replica tickets. The offer was good through Jan. 25. According to a collector who called to discuss the cards, existing Sprint customers also had the option to order the cards at $5 apiece. (Her husband is a football fan, so she decided to take Sprint up on that offer.)

Karen Hardeman, Sprint corporate communications manager, declined to say how many of those cards might be available.

Not only is that contrary to normal Sprint policy, but card production depends on how many customers sign up, she says. That probably means that once an initial number of cards are issued to account for those who sign-up, that also will be the mintage of each card, she says — mintage will not be affected by the number of subscribers who might subsequently drop out of the program (although that potentially means that the number of available cards could rise by the end of the program, depending on what is done with any surplus).

The other Sprint phonecard, a dazzling 32-minute hologram card featuring the Sprint logo, its Spree brand logo, and the NFL and Super Bowl logos, was distributed to each of the 80,000 seats in San Diego's Qualcomm Stadium, site of Super Bowl XXXII. Hardeman says an unspecified number of additional cards were printed for promotional use.

According to The Highland Mint, 250 of those are being paired with bronze medallions and packaged in velure boxes, similar to Highland's baseball and football promotions (see Moneycard Collector's January and February 1998 "Quik Takes").

Gil Barry of The Telecard Galley of Santa Barbara, Calif., estimates that only a fraction of those cards, perhaps as few as 500, will ever make it into collectors' hands through dealers. "That's what makes it exciting," he says, "as opposed to 1,000 cards done by a company that specializes in collectible phonecards that anybody can buy."

A likely scenario is that a collector-entrepreneur will go to the game and seek out fans who might be willing to part with their cards, or keep an eye peeled for cards discarded in the bleachers, Barry says. That person will then call up dealers until he sells all the cards he has collected. That means it is likely that only a handful of the dealers in the country will be offering the Sprint Super Bowl XXXII cards, he says.

Sprint (SPR); Super Bowl XXXII; 32 minutes; 80,000-plus issued; January 1998.

Sprint (SPR); Super Bowl replica tickets 32-card set; 10 minutes each; quantity unavailable; January 1998.

THE SCOOP ON CHIPS

A collector's visit to the New York City Visa Cash and Mondex smart-card pilot

Exploring New York City is always exciting. For a smart-card collector like myself, it was extra special when I could explore the Upper West Side to see how the Visa Cash and Mondex smart card rollout was progressing.

I was ecstatic when I walked into the Citibank branch on 86th Street and Broadway and saw a large sign that advertised limited edition Visa Cash cards, four to a set. Since my wife and I had planned to eat breakfast in this test area, I decided to go all out and buy all four cards at a cost of $60 (two $10 cards and two $20 cards are in the set). Surely, one New York breakfast and a few other items would polish them off. (I had recently obtained a Citibank ATM card, but had not had time to have it updated with the Visa Cash chip.)

The four-card set features scenes of the Upper West Side — the Bethesda Fountain in Central Park, the West 79th Street Boat Basin and Rotunda, the 72nd Street Subway Station, and the Ansonia Condominiums, located at 73rd Street and Broadway. Various musicians are shown performing at each of these sites. Much to my surprise, the teller told me that since I had brought the entire set, I would get a free $5 card as a bonus. Now that is instant profit!

The $5 card also has the Ansonia Condominiums on the front of the card, but the reverse of the card clearly stated that this reloadable card was initially set to $5. The reverse of each card indicates the card serial number, the expiration date, the series number, card number within the series, the number of cards issued, and a contiguous number indicating the card number within the issued series. These cards all indicated that this was Series 1 and that 6,250 cards were issued of each.

An additional piece of information of information is a reference that relates to the graphics of the card. The four-card set was specified as SV# 019739 through SV# 019742. An interesting point for collectors — each of the Ansonia Condominium cards are marked as Card 4/4, each issued in a quantity of 6,250 cards. The $10 card is SV# 019742; the $5 card is SV# 019744.

All of the cards state the initial value of the card on the reverse side. This is important for collectors to know. Unlike the Visa Cash Olympic cards that were non-reloadable (disposable), these cards can be reused after the value reaches zero, or at any time along the way. Although the cards have a stated face value, they can be loaded with any value up to $500.

The Citibank Visa Cash cards that I purchased were produced by G & D, America. These reloadable cards each contain a Siemens microprocessor chip. A point of interest — the Olympic Visa Cash cards were based on a token memory chip.

I also had a reloadable Visa Cash card from the Bank of America that I wanted to test. It is currently being used in another Visa Cash pilot — one that allows the purchase of goods and services over the Internet using Visa Cash. Would merchants balk at accepting a smart card from a bank other than from Citibank or Chase, the two New York City banks participating in this trial, or would they accept any card that had the Visa Cash or Mondex logo on it? I also had a Visa Cash Olympic card with me. Would this also be accepted? With questions in mind, we continued on our mission.

To load value onto this card, I had to go to a special kiosk in the bank lobby and use my ATM card to transfer money from my checking account to my smart card. The instructions were simple and easy to follow for a veteran smart card aficionado like me, and I believe that most others would also find them so.

It would have been somewhat nicer if both cards could be put into the kiosk at the same time, rather than having to remove the ATM card, then insert the smart card. However, when using an ATM card that already has the chip embedded on it, you only want one insertion. Also of note was that none of the ATM machines in the lobby could be used for this transfer, only the special kiosk. The signage in the lobby advertising the cards were placed strategically and every teller's window displayed the four-card set. Pamphlets were available for customers along with maps listing the more than 600 merchants that accepted these cards.

As we walked along Broadway the Visa Cash and Mondex logos were prominently displayed in merchant windows, along with Visa, Mastercard, American Express, and other logos.

Going into the Chase branch office a few blocks away was equally rewarding. There was a special sign-up area staffed by two helpful employees where each of us received a Mondex reloadable card and a Mondex viewer, just for signing up and showing two forms of identification. This was a real bonanza. The cards had a zero value loaded into them, and I suppose I could have just left and said "thank you," but I really wanted to test the system.

At two modified ATMs in the branch, I was able to again transfer funds onto my Mondex card using my ATM card. It was just as we had imagined when we were planning the EPS/MAC system five years ago. And, as at the Citibank kiosk, I also had to insert the ATM card first, then insert the smart card. The instructions were just as easy to follow. My wife loaded her card with no difficulty.

Imbued with these initial successes, and having added considerably to my smart card collection, we were off to spend some of this electronic money. But before we go on this "New York shopping spree," let's examine this Chase Mondex card. It is made by Gemplus and uses the Hitachi H8 microprocessor chip. It is a fairly sophisticated chip and somewhat expensive. For this pilot, Chase had special graphics made for the stand-alone cards, but only one design. There isn't any information concerning the card serial number, date of expiration, number of cards issued, and so on. If desired, a Chase ATM cardholder can request an ATM card with the chip embedded in it. This makes sense, especially since the card only has to be inserted once to both withdraw and transfer funds.

The first purchase was made in a large retail drug chain, a cost of $1.69. The clerk didn't question the Bank of America card I offered, merely accepting the Visa Cash logo or the gold chip on the front of it. A separate stored-value terminal, partially buried under a shelf at the far end of the register bank, had to be used.

When the balance was displayed, it showed that the clerk had only entered in 9 cents, rather than the required $1.69. My receipt clearly stated that only 9 cents was removed off my card. Alerting the clerk to this situation, she apologized and correctly entered in another transaction for $1.60. Having already seen the transaction being processed, I removed my smart card before the receipt was printed. This caused a printer error and a call for the manager to help.

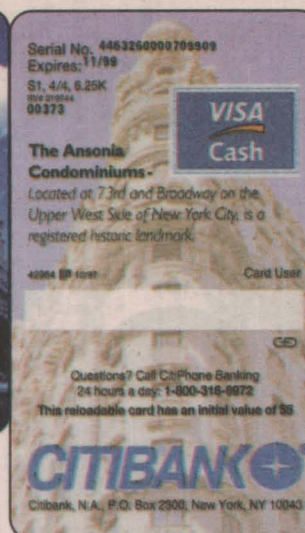

After several attempts to find a restaurant that took the card for breakfast, we resorted to using that old-fashioned, green-paper legal tender. We could have used our card in quite a few fast-food restaurants, but were looking for a more conventional New York breakfast. Having just had breakfast, I decided that a chocolate chip mint cone would make a good desert. At $1.59 it was a bargain. Much to my delight, there was a customer in front of me using a Chase Mondex card to purchase a cup of coffee. At first the gentleman put his card in backwards, then upside down. At this point the manager came over and helped with the operation. My transaction, using a Citibank collector's card, proceeded with no problems. Upon speaking to the other card user, I found out that he worked for Chase and was using the card for the first time. As a native New Yorker, he longed to replace those handfuls of quarters required to use washers and dryers.

Next we decided to purchase some apples for the drive home. A small fruit and grocery store, so typical of the many Mom and Pop stores in New York City, had the smart card logos on its door. As I handed the card to the clerk for payment, she said "I'm sorry, my terminal is 'canceled.'" I put the apples back and politely thanked her.

There was a similar store a few blocks down Broadway. As I went to pay for the apples, I noticed that there were two checkout areas, each with a smart card payment terminal. The clerk accepted my Chase card, inserted it into the terminal, typed in the amount, and depressed the green "yes" button herself. So much for having the customer approve each purchase! As we stepped outside, my wife saw a lovely bunch of miniature orchids for $4. When I went back in again, I handed over an Olympic Visa Cash card issued by the Bank of America. No questions asked. The $4 was promptly removed and I was on my way. I had checked my balance with my Visa Cash card reader.

Overall the outing was quite a success. I saw billboards advertising the Chase Smart Card, had purchased several new cards, had gotten a Mondex card reader, and observed several purchases. The one big improvement needed to the whole system is the incorporation of the smart-card reader directly into the cash register. In smaller stores the separate terminal can work, but in the larger chains where they must double enter the amount and print out two receipts, it slows down the process.

The New York smart card rollout is important for the smart card industry in America. It proves that Mastercard (Mondex) and Visa (Visa Cash) can co-exist in the same terminals. And for the collector the exciting news is that pilot is up and running. There is talk of expanding to the Upper East Side of New York as the next step in the New York rollout. This could lead to another set of collectible cards, expanding still further the assortment and variety of cards available to the serious smart-card collector.

A Blizzard of Cards

U.S. Winter Olympics cards a mystery, but not Japan's

by Steve Fritz

The Winter Olympics is probably the third largest international sports competition in the world right behind the World Cup and Summer Olympics, and when it comes to phonecards, this year's host, Japan, has made a big deal about it.

At last count, there were about 100 designs of prepaid phonecards and transit cards marking the 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano. Now, try to find any U.S. telecards about it. Just try. A visit to the U.S. Olympic Committee's website turns up an "online store" with duffel bags, shirts, caps and pins, but no mention of prepaid cards. Inquiries to the committee are met with a polite "none that we know of." The word from moneycard dealers is the same.

While AT&T is an official sponsor of the 1998 Winter Olympics and used the Olympic theme to advertise its PrePaid Calls cards, there was no indication as of deadline that the giant telco had produced any Nagano-themed cards.

Scott Shapiro of KARS Unlimited is one of the dealers who hasn't heard a peep. "I imagine there has to be [cards from U.S. issuers]," he notes, "but I haven't see any advertisements for them at all. It's lousy marketing, I think. For example, we already have the first set of phonecards for the next Summer Olympics in the year 2000, which will be in Australia. In fact, we've sold quite a few sets of them already. I don't think it has anything to do with the Summer Olympics being more popular than the Winter. I know that ice skating and hockey cards are both very popular with my customers."

While American television viewers are enamored by the style and grace of figure skaters and the power of the National Hockey League, the American phonecard industry is keeping its efforts so quiet as to be non-existent. Repeated calls to a number of sources turned up nothing commemorating this year's Olympics.

There are some cards from Canada, but the saving grace for Olympic card collectors are the Japanese issues.

Frank Ataw of F.A. Marketing in Toronto says the Canadian interest in winter sports probably explains part of it, but Ataw doesn't think that explains all of it.

"We already have a series of Canadian Olympic hockey cards out from a company called Valu-Net," Ataw notes. "There's a few series. The first is of four cards and the other one is of 30. Actually, the 30-card set comes in different denominations. There's one set of 30 cards with five units of time on each card, another with 10 units of time on each card, another with 12 and a last one with 15."

Canada's Stentor network also has issued six different images, three each in $10 and $20 denominations. The breakdown of images and mintages are $10 speed skater, 7,280; $10 cross-country skier, 5,460; $10 curler, 5,460; $20 figure skaters, 4,880; $20 bobsled, 3,660; and $20 ski jumper, 3,600. Those cards are to be available in the marketplace through the end of February.

The Valu-Net cards have been distributed to retail outlets in Canada, while limited-edition collector sets are being offered through sports memorabilia stores and direct marketing efforts.

According to Moneycard Collector Canadian correspondent Rosemary Warren, other Canadian programs include a chip-card series from Bell Canada and a set from BCTel. Expect more details on those cards in next month's issue. Ataw says General Mills Canada also was expected to do a promotional card.

"Honestly, I don't know why the U.S. isn't doing it," Ataw says. "Hockey and ice skating are pretty popular down there. Also, the Olympics is a pretty big event with a lot of countries competing. Yes, we in Canada have the best hockey players and have a lot of snow here. You can possibly say that we like winter sports better but I know a lot of Americans who put the same amount of love and effort into the same sports and collecting those cards."

"I find a lot of interest from Europe," adds Ataw. "Actually, countries like Finland and Sweden love hockey, too. I have collectors there who will buy any new Canadian hockey cards I come across. They seem to be the same people who collect sports in general. Any sports issue I find they call me up."

According to the U.S. Olympic Committee's e-mail daily newsletter for the Nagano Games, the Japanese word for snowstorm is "fubuki." That describes the blizzard of cards that the host country's telco has issued to mark the games. The many cards issued by Japan's NTT to celebrate the Olympics didn't just start appearing last fall. Some of the NTT telecards were first issued five years ago, according to Shigeo Wada, manager of the Nagano branch of NTT. A set of cards issued in late 1996 began a 500-day countdown to the start of the 1998 Winter Olympics. Other cards marked 100 days until the games began. "We caught every opportunity to issue cards," Wada notes.

The available cards cover a wide range. A cute cartoon rabbit is pictured on a 10-card set promoting different events in the '98 Paralympics being held in Nagano. The official cartoon "Snowlets" – four zany owl-like birds – are repeated again and again on their own cards and as supplemental art on a variety of other telecards. There is a 14-card set that shows the Snowlets performing various Olympic sports, and another three-card set that shows the birds in full color each packaged with that most ubiquitous of Olympic souvenirs – a pin.

Other cards show culture sites around Nagano or the venues for the various sports. Snowlets on skis or skates appear on many of those cards, superimposed on color images of the Olympic venues and providing a clue to which buildings host which competitions. There is a four-card set promoting the "Nagano Olympic Harmony Fund" and a sharp eight-card set featuring the artwork of Dale R. Cooper in images like "Catch the Wind" (speed skating) and "Leap of Faith" (ski jumping) that capture Olympic athletes in action.

But the most dazzling collectibles are a 19-card "History of the Winter Olympics Games" set and a 25-card "History of the Olympic Games" set. Each comes in its own folder and features logos and artwork for each of the Olympic Games leading up and including Nagano ("Winter Olympics") and Atlanta ("Olympics"). Wada says those sets represent the first time the International Olympic Committee has granted permission for such historical cards.

Wada says that all the cards issued were in 50-unit denominations except for one 100-unit card, which he didn't specify. The mintages vary widely he says, with some tens of thousands of some images produced.

The phonecards with collector pins cost 1,200 yen each, or about $9.50. All other cards are 1,000 yen apiece (around $8), except for the Winter Olympics history, 23,000 yen ($184), and the Olympics history, 30,000 yen ($239). Those interested in cards should contact NTT. The company will calculate the price and shipping costs and send a bill. As soon as payment in yen, via an international postal money order, is confirmed, the cards will be shipped.

Send inquiries to Mr. Shigeo Wada, Manager, Nagano Branch, NTT Teleca Corp., 1-15-3 Minachitose-machi, Nagano-shi, Nagano 380, Japan. The fax number is 81-26-223-4289.

"I would have to say that in general, thematic collecting is much more popular overseas than domestically," says Shapiro, who's based in Florida. "I think it's a more mature market. People have to concentrate on one topic there if they want to have a reasonably complete collection. There is just too many phonecards out there to try to collect everything. So, sports in general is a good way to go and the Olympics is a very good sports theme."

It appears the reverse is also true in one sense, domestic U.S. collectors are much more interested in international Olympic cards, provided they are of the Summer Olympics.

"There's a [1996] set from Sweden that was done by Coca Cola," Shapiro says. "You turned in a number of caps from the one liter bottle of Coke and they would send you received a free 10-unit phone card. It's very tough to get full sets of these cards and has become very popular even two years after the Atlanta Olympics. I just recently got a handful of sets and they just shot right out at $75 a set. The Visa Cash card issued for the Atlanta Olympics is very popular, particularly as that was when the Visa Cash card was brand spanking new. There was also a six-card set from Canton for the Atlanta Olympics that is also very popular."

Among other still popular sets in Shapiro's catalog are the Olympic Pin set that Score Board issued at that time, a USACard's Pink Panther Olympic card and a jumbo card with an Atlanta Olympic theme that AT&T gave away to anyone who changed to their long distance service.

The 2000 Sydney Games already has produced its own interesting oddity and Shapiro is getting a lot of business because of it.

"The next Olympics already has produced a very interesting set of cards that we managed to get a few of," he says. "China thought it was going to get the Olympics at that time, so they put out a three-card set. Then it was announced it was going to Sydney, Australia. So the cards are missing the Olympic lettering, but it has the art. It has the Olympic rings on them."

Still, at least as far as the U.S. is concerned, the Australian set is the one that is attracting the most interest.

"We call it the Sydney Olympic 2000 Mascot Set," says Shapiro. "It's a four-card set from Telstra, the local service provider. It's got three $5 cards of the three different mascots, Syd, Millie and Olly. Those cards were produced in regular issue to the public. Then there was a $2 complimentary card of all three mascots. If you bought a collectors' folder with the other three cards, you got the $2 card as a complimentary card."

If anything, Ataw thinks one of the key reasons why there's more interest in the Summer Olympics cards over the Winter is really quite simple: More Summer Olympic cards have been produced. "When there's more cards, there will be more interest," he predicts.

What's available for the Winter Games could change depending on the success of North American athletes at the Nagano games, he notes. "If the Team Canada hockey team wins, I expect there will be a lot of interest for the cards. If Michelle Kwan wins a gold medal, then I would expect to see cards of her."

Until then, collectors looking to round out an Olympic theme should look to Japan.

QUIK TAKES

DARNELL TAKES OVER BELL CLUB. There should be some relief in sight for followers of Bell Canada's La Puce/Quick Change chip card releases who were frustrated by the collector club's erratic customer service in the latter part of 1997. In December, Bell handed over its entire collector club operation to Darnell Inc., Canada's largest coin and stamp dealer. Founded in 1967, Darnell has retail shops in Toronto and Montreal and worldwide mail-order service. The Montreal branch will coordinate the phonecard effort.

While Darnell is well known for its expertise in postage stamps, coins and hunting-license stamps, moneycards are relatively new for the company. Darnell targeted a mailing in late January or early February to clear up outstanding orders and indicate which cards are still available. Priorities were to be given to collectors with registered standing orders — about 10 percent of the 5,000-plus club members.

Darnell also will provide input to Bell regarding new issue designs and mintages, and institute a policy that every standing order will be guaranteed a low-mintage card, implying that there will be at least 500 issued of a particular card and encouraging serious collectors register.

The mail address is Darnell Inc. c/o Eaton's, 677 Ste. Catherine St. W., 5th floor, Montreal, Quebec, H3B 3Y6 Canada. The telephone numbers are (800) 404-PUCE or (514) 284-8686; the fax numbers are (888) 350-2582 or (514) 284-8596. The e-mail address is darnell@netcom.ca.

COMPUSERVE TELECARD FORUM ACCESS AVAILABLE. CompuServe Corp. says its new "C from CompuServe" Internet-based service is available for sign-up.

"C from CompuServe" makes the best of CompuServe's CSI online service available for the first time directly to Internet users," says Sam Uretsky, vice president of business management for the online service.

"Using any Internet service provider and popular browser, people can now access 500-plus Forum areas organized under 35 topical communities, links to the best related external Web sites, advanced e-mail and communications products, as well as high-quality research databases and e-commerce opportunities.

"It will be one of the largest, most comprehensive destinations on the Internet," says Uretsky. More details are available at <http://c.compuserve.com>.

DEALER FLAGS PHONECARD PROBLEM. Genny English of Phone Cards Plus reported problems trying to use the Global Link Six Flags card. That $5-denomination card (PEO Pr 66), 880 issued, was shown in the October 1996 "Corporate Corner."

English notes that the carrier to which the cards are attached says the cards expire "six months after first use" and warn that the cards "may revert to inactive status six months after last use," but none of the PINs on unused Six Flags cards she tried are active.

Global Link cards had been produced by People's Telephone, but that operation was sold to GTS in March 1996. A GTS customer service rep in the company's Philadelphia office acknowledged that because of the age of the cards, the PINs might not work. She said customers with similar unused cards could call the customer service number on the card's reverse and the PIN would be reassigned.

COMMKEY, HOMISCO ANNOUNCE PARTNERSHIP. CommKey Corp., a newly formed telecommunications provider ("Quik Takes," January 1998), and Homisco/Voicenet have agreed to a joint effort that will offer CommKey's network services to Homisco's customers in the hotel/hospitality industry. Homisco currently has more than 2,000 turnkey systems installed worldwide. By using the CommKey, a combination of electronic room key, prepaid phone and debit card, guests can get a discount on calls, while the hotel earns a 5-percent commission. Homisco/Voicenet has been a one-stop solution for hotel voice processing and telemanagement systems for 16 years.

NET, SBC FORGE ANOTHER BABY BELL MERGER. SBC Communications, which merged with Pacific Telesis last year, has agreed to buy Southern New England Telecommunications. The deal, reportedly for $4.4 billion in common stock, should be approved by shareholders and federal and state authorities by the end of the year. The effect of the purchase on Communications Design Group is unknown, according to CDG's Roberta Strom, but she doesn't anticipate any sudden changes. CDG issues cards on behalf of SNET and uses SNET's Southern New England Bell logo on its cards. For now, she says, it is business as usual for the Connecticut-based promotional card issuer.

SEARS RELEASES NEW PRICE LIST. More than 4,750 collectible phone cards in all price ranges are now available via mail-order from the Sears Phone Card Department. The 1998 edition of the Sears Phone Card catalog is the world's largest price list for phone card collectors, and includes a description of each telecard using the new Moneycard Collector Catalog numbering system. Featured are telecards issued mostly in the United States. There are some Canadian, as well as Disney-related cards printed outside North America.

Those new to the hobby will find helpful information included in the literature accompanying the price list, and those expanding their hobby will find helpful tips, and explanations of how and why companies unrelated to the telecommunications industry may opt to issue their own promotional prepaid telephone cards. The January 1998 catalog includes more than 850 color photographs and 100 pages. Those who have purchased telecards in the past from the Sears Phone Card Department, already have been mailed the Sears card catalog along with a discount coupon. Other interested collectors may call (407) 898-7778 or (407) 898-7770. Requests should include name, mailing address and home telephone number.

Requests may also be sent to: Sears Phone Card Dept., 3111 E. Colonial Drive, Orlando, Fla. 32803. FAX requests to (407) 898-7779, or e-mail a request to phonecard@compuserve.com.

U S WEST CLARIFIES POLICY. If it isn't broken, we can't fix it. That might describe the reaction of U S WEST to concerns expressed by some U S WEST card holders.

"Our policy is that if there is a problem with a card, we will refund the remaining time on it or send a new card," says Randy Tada, the Baby Bell's telecard marketing manager. "If there is no defect, then the card is yours."

Tada was responding to concerns expressed by individuals who unsuccessfully had tried to seek refunds. Those who were denied refunds had bought cards on speculation, Tada says, and there is nothing defective about those cards.

Tada pointed to U S WEST's customer service line — (800) 739-3339, then press "3" for telecards — as the appropriate place to seek refunds or replacements for cards that are defective. That number is printed on the reverse of all U S WEST cards.

U S WEST chip-based cards work in their own payphones and in those of GTE. An interoperability agreement signed with Bell Canada means that those phones will be able to use U S WEST cards around June, Tada says.

WHEN THE CHIPS ARE DOWN UNDER.

Australia's main phonecard issuer, Telstra, has jumped onto the chip-card bandwagon, launching cards at the Cards Australia 1997 conference in Melbourne last August. The rollout of payphones accepting the chip cards began in South Australia, Western Australia and the Northern Territory, and is to be expanded into the rest of the country early this year.

Retail and promotional cards have been developed, and the inaugural retail series will include one design for each of Australia's state's and territories. Among the promotional designs is a purple-hued landscape with a flying saucer. Both disposable and reloadable cards are planned, and Telstra intends for the new cards to be multi-functional, embracing such areas as vending machines, loyalty programs and dedicated funds for a child's electronic wallet.

Telstra's last magnetic-stripe card honors the late Lady Diana, Princess of Wales. A portion of sales for the A$5 card will be donated to the Australian Red Cross.

Diana also is commemorated on an A$20 Telstra PhoneAway remote-memory card.

KEEP THE CHANGE! PONDER'S SUIT. Keep the Change! might be defunct as a phonecard business, but the Orlando, Fla.-based company is still incorporated and its owners are contemplating a multi-million-dollar lawsuit against the U.S. Postal Service for infringement on its "Keep the Change" registered trademark. Scott duPont, president and chairman of Keep the Change! said in late January that the suit could be filed in about a month.

The phonecard store is taking issue with the Postal Service's use of "Keep the Change" as a slogan for its Liberty Cash prepaid cards, and officially notified the Postal Service of the alleged infringement in June and September 1997.

Keep the Change! has been "dormant" for about a year and a half, duPont says. The company's troubles climaxed when 10,000 catalogs sent out prior to Christmas 1996 all were lost. "We did not get any orders," he says, "We were expecting hundreds of thousands of dollars in orders." How the catalogs were lost is still a mystery, he says. Only one was returned with a postal sticker that read "found in empty equipment."

The catalog incident and the trademark situation are separate, duPont says, although the future of Keep the Change! will depend on the planned legal action. "We are going ahead with the suit," duPont vows.

The ultimate MCI phonecard would be? ... Contestants offer suggestions

That's the question we posed to readers in a contest that ran in our January and February editions. The responses were as varied as the hobby itself.

We'll get to them in a moment, but first, the winners, selected by random drawing. First prize, a Moneycard Collector Catalog, went to Arthur Jones of Elkhart, Ind. Runners-up, who will receive moneycards from our files, included Ed Matukonis of Forty Fort, Pa.; Mike Fromme of Temple City, Calif.; and Barbara H. Zamlan of Brunswick, Ohio.

OK, MCI, got your ears on?

The most common response was that MCI should create a puzzle set featuring each of the 50 states in the United States. A close second was for a similar set, featuring the different countries of the world. Some contestants specified that the cards forming the map should be die-cut in the shape of the states or countries (creating a Rhode Island card and a Texas card for the same die-cut set stretches the imagination!).

Sports-themed cards also were a suggestion offered by many contestants, led by the suggestions to make various Super Bowl sets; and there also were multiple entries suggesting single cards or series depicting historic moments in the development of communication.

More than one participant urged limited-mintage cards, and some wanted holograms (a combo phonecard-cash card, a Barbie doll, flashing different outfits) or jumbos (boxer Evander Holyfield). One suggestion tried to capture a variety of popular themes: "... denomination 1,000 minutes, picturing Mickey Mouse drinking a bottle of Coke, and awarded via sweepstakes offering 100 such cards as prizes."

Card images of movie celebrities, entertainers and musicians were among those mentioned, as were die-cut superhero cards, a puzzle set of quilt samplers, a series of U.S. presidents, and a series of children's drawings on cards, with proceeds going to children's charities.

Only one question remains: When can we expect to see the first one, MCI?

Collecting AT&T

Variety, rarity stimulate collectors' desire

by Art Becker

When you talk about American Telephone & Telegraph (AT&T) phonecards, there are really two different types: TeleTickets and "everything else." We'll get to the "everything else" part a bit later. TeleTickets are the grandfathers of the big league historical phonecards. They are high class personified. Most interestingly, it is unlikely that anyone has a complete collection of them.

There are several reasons why probably nobody has a complete collection of TeleTickets. Some of these phonecards are rare, and plenty of varieties exist, including several errors. Sample cards were produced for many issues. One estimate is that there are as many as 500 different TeleTicket cards and varieties. One collector and dealer who is actively attempting to assemble a complete collection of TeleTickets is Steve Schwartz, of the Sears Phone Card Department. Steve says he is willing to trade for cards he doesn't have. The TeleTickets he has for sale are listed on his web site, at <http://card-mall.com/phonecard> and are listed by MCC catalog number.

So, what are TeleTickets? Let's go back to the early years of 1992. AT&T was the first of the big long-distance companies to issue remote-memory phonecards. These are the type where the customer dials a toll-free number, enters a code number found on the the card, gets a second dial tone, and then enters the phone number to be called. The first TeleTicket was a 50-unit edition, commemorating the America's Cup sailboat race. About 500 of them were printed. Half of them were in English, while the rest were printed in one of these languages: French, Japanese and Italian. There is a variety of this first card, where the design is a bit smaller, and the cards might not have been activated.

TeleTicket designs have a standard format. Two-thirds of the card on the right have a colorful design element, with the word TeleTicket above it, and a title underneath. At the top left of the card is the AT&T logo. The middle of the left side contains a wide color bar with the denomination, in units, in the center. Many issues included a logo underneath the units. What makes TeleTickets such interesting collectibles is that varieties of many cards were issued, in several languages. Beside the three languages mentioned above, and English, cards can be found in Dutch, German, Korean, Mandarin, Portuguese, and Spanish. Both spelling and access number errors have been found. In addition, an estimated 50 to 100 cards marked SAMPLE, on the reverse, were produced, for many of the designs.

As Jim Moran of Telequest, says "The TeleTicket line is unappreciated and underpriced. Of course, astute collectors know a good thing when they see it, but I'm surprised at how few newer collectors have bothered to become educated enough to appreciate the value these cards currently represent."

One reason for new collectors not collecting TeleTickets is that AT&T stopped producing them in 1993, long before many people started collecting phonecards. Newcomers tend to collect what's most convenient. This often means inexpensive cards that are currently being issued, and that can be purchased at face value. Thus, in recent years, even when AT&T still operated retail sales outlets, the TeleTickets were long gone. Another reason is that the number of TeleTicket varieties is overwhelming to a new collector. Many of the cards are so rare that they will never be affordable to anyone new to the hobby, so why bother if you will never be able to have a complete set?

The answer has two parts. The first is that you are guaranteed to never have a complete collection if you don't start somewhere. Further, probably nobody else will ever have a complete collection either, so why should that be a bar to collecting these wonderful phonecards? The second part is that there are many TeleTickets that can stand on their own, are great topics, and generally are affordable.

Perhaps the best example of an interesting TeleTicket is the 1993 card issued for McDonald's. It has some of the most popular topics ever, in its design: McDonald's and Coca-Cola. Getting a bit more esoteric, this design also features french fries, and there are now plenty of other cards that have fries as part of the design. The McDonald's card, in its original sealed plastic wrap folder, retails for around $100. The packaging is different from the other TeleTickets, as it is significantly larger. You can knock about a third off the price if you will accept a card that is not in the sealed folder. An extra advantage is that you can display an opened card in an ordinary album page, whereas it takes a complete page protector to otherwise display a sealed card, in your album.

There are some interesting stories about the McDonald's 3-unit phonecard. The first is that millions were said to have been produced. They were to be given to customers, for free, as a promotional item. However, the cards were only distributed in a small area, and the vast majority of them were destroyed. Nobody knows for sure how few were given away. One collector tells the story of writing to McDonald's, and asking for a card, mentioning that they weren't available in his area. McDonald's responded by sending him more than two dozen!

This phonecard is both the sole 3-unit TeleTicket, and it is the only one with a denomination less than 10 units. Specimen versions exist. If you are only going to collect just a single TeleTicket, this would be a great one to get. Shop around for a good deal!

While much ado is made about the NYNEX Democratic National Convention (DNC) phonecards of 1992, there are several TeleTicket DNC phonecards that are considerably scarcer. A small quantity of the three Statue of Liberty denominations of 1992 were overprinted on the reverse with a DNC message. Later, three denominations were issued with a DNC design.

AT&T; McDonald's Teleticket, 3 units; quantity unavailable; April 1993.

AT&T; Statue of Liberty Press Pass; 10 units; 200 each in nine languages issued; May 1992.

AT&T; Democratic National Convention 1992; 50 units; quantity unavailable; July 1992.

The quantities are significantly smaller than the number of NYNEX cards printed, and we all know how supposedly valuable the NYNEX DNC cards are. TeleTickets were also issued for the Republication National Convention a month later.

What might be the best indicator that TeleTickets are hot cards is the number of dealer buy ads for them. How many buy ads have you seen for other phonecards? Several dealers have had long-running buy ads, seeking quantities of TeleTickets. They wouldn't be running these ads without good reason.

Finally, there is still some mystery about TeleTickets. Nobody is completely sure of exact quantities, and especially the number of languages and varieties, not to mention SAMPLES, produced. There are even arguments over whether certain cards exist at all. Quite possibly there are still some TeleTicket varieties, or even complete new designs, yet to be discovered.

Now, let's talk about "everything else." After the TeleTickets line ended, AT&T called phonecards by a number of names, including PrePaid Card, PrePaid Calling Card, and even PrePaid Calls. The latter was for technical reasons associated with the 1996 Centennial Olympic Games, held in Atlanta, Ga. Visa, an official sponsor of the Olympics, had the rights to all cards associated with the Olympics.

The problem was, AT&T was also an official sponsor. Nobody wanted these sponsors to go to war, so the compromise solution was that AT&T would sell PrePaid Calls, and not PrePaid Cards. Apparently everyone involved then pretended that PrePaid Calls were not actually cards, which, of course, they were. Incidentally, while several PrePaid Calls designs were issued, the most striking was the large diecut "1996" 10-minute card. This jumbo card is available, even today, at very reasonable prices.

AT&T produces promotional phonecards for companies such as the Duracell, and its Putterman Family series of cards. These phonecards feature the AT&T logo on both the obverse and reverse.

Among those who have been collecting phonecards for a "long time," the most popular AT&T-branded card always will be the "Lucy" card, issued for the April 1995 U.S. Telecard Association (now ITA) dinner.

Moneycard Collector differentiates between cards issued by AT&T and those whose issuers received permission to use the AT&T logo because the time on the cards was carried by AT&T. For instance, the Dairy Queen Misty Slush and Dairy Queen Dennis the Menace cards (TVA Pr1 and TVA Pr2, respectively) both show the AT&T logo, but are considered to be issued by Telenova. Similarly, the USTA-Lucy card (WTA 6) and the Snoopy-Steve Young cards (WTA S2 through S5Jc) are listed in the Moneycard Collector Catalog as being issued by Winston Taylor.

If you are a serious phonecard collector, you should have at least one AT&T TeleTicket phonecard in your collection. If you are not a serious phonecard collector, then the same rule applies. These are highly collectible, historical phonecards. If you really want to have some fun, do your homework, and start looking through the Moneycard Collector Catalog, and dealer price lists, to see what TeleTickets will best fit into your collection. As for other AT&T phonecards, there are everywhere, and chances are you already have some in your album. Now go out and get some more.

AT&T; 1996 Olympic Die-cut; 10 minutes; 100,000 issued; June 1996.

In pursuit of TeleTickets

The human side of collecting phonecards is just as much fun to read about, as are technical articles about the cards themselves. Here's what Jim Moran of Telequest went through, to get some prized TeleTickets, in 1992:

"I have a fondness for the AT&T TeleTickets for reasons unknown to me. They weren't the first cards I started to collect but they were the first that 'grabbed' me. When I found out about the E.T. cards, I actually planned a trip from Chicago to Universal Studios, in Orlando, just to grab as many of the cards as I could. My youngest son, who was about five at the time (I have a large family with kids ranging in age from 32 down to 10), was an E.T. nut and I promised him the first one we got out of the phonecard dispenser.

"As soon as we arrived in Orlando, I dumped the luggage in our hotel and headed straight for Universal. Flush with crisp $5 and $1 currency, I went straight to the AT&T pavilion, intent on emptying the machines. Damn near had a stroke when one of the desk clerks told me all the cards and machines had been pulled out because of a Spielberg dispute with AT&T. This had happened the previous day!

"The next day, I left my family to fend for itself at Disney World and I went off in search of phonecards. I stumbled upon the Mall of Florida, in Orlando, and headed straight for the AT&T phone store that was advertised on a mall billboard. They had a nice selection of TeleTickets including some of the older logo type which Moneycard Collector calls the 'lines' design. I bought out almost their entire stock. I left one of each card just in case some other poor soul who was visiting ran across the store. I also made an arrangement with one of the clerks so that I could call from Chicago and have more cards shipped to me once the store replenished its stock.

"I didn't have any E.T. but I still left happy. But, the best was yet to come when I got back to Chicago. To finance my trip to Orlando and an earlier one to Virginia for the first phone and credit card 'show' in the U.S., I had agreed to write a piece on phonecard collecting for CompuServe's print magazine.

"As soon as I returned home, I called the AT&T PR people for some photos. After arranging for the photos to be sent to me, I began chatting with the rep on the other end of the line. We got into a discussion of the Spielberg problem and I mentioned how disappointed both I and my son had been that no cards were available at Universal. She mentioned having a daughter my son's age and understanding how easily they are disappointed.

"About a week later, the photos arrived via FedEx along with a box of TeleTickets including quite a few of the E.T. varieties and two in the original 'Pow-Wow' packaging. Ah, life is great sometimes."
