ON THE MONEY

T rue collecting is not about money. It is about love of objects and a long-term commitment to their acquisition and study."

Wish we had said that. In fact, we have repeatedly expressed that sentiment, but we can never say it enough, in simple enough terms: Collect for pleasure, not for investment.

The quote above comes from a column in June's Antiques & Collecting magazine. While most of the piece by Harry L. Rinker is a diatribe against sports trading cards, he does raise some good points — none better than the quote above. The column takes an inordinate amount of glee in being a prophet of sports card speculators' bursting bubble, but when the author rises above the "I told you so" mentality, his points are telling. "A trading card is nothing more than a mass-produced, printed piece of paper ... (its) value is created by demand," he writes.

That's where prepaid phonecards and other moneycards, by their nature, have an advantage over trading cards. They have intrinsic value. They are a form of money, not mere scraps of pretty paper or plastic. Whether a generic retail phonecard or a limited-edition card issued solely for the collector market, the owner, can, if he chooses, pick up a phone and use that card to call Grandma.

We take no joy in the fact that the trading card industry was damaged and people hurt because speculators forgot what collecting was supposed to be about. But we do appreciate the lessons that can be learned — must be learned — by phonecard issuers, dealers and collectors.

Chief among those is that collectors are not Pavlovian dogs trained to drool when a new issue appears. They have brains, and know if they like something. Some prize collectibles are easy to spot — limited-run, exciting images and good per-minute values from solid companies which excel in customer service. Then there is the universe of cards issued for other purposes which have been embraced by collectors. Witness Michigan Bell cards, the 1992 Democratic National Convention issues, the 1995 NCAA Gillette series, Olympic Visa Cash and a variety of other cards.

Whither goes our hobby? Not in the downward spiral of sports trading cards, as long as those involved continue to support products that will stand the test of time.

That's not to say the moneycard industry will not have its unsettling times. We recently have observed many mergers, acquisitions and closings. Bigger might not be better, but that doesn't mean its worse.

LDDS Worldcom, or "Worldcom" as they now prefer, acquired Bottom Line Technologies. Smartalk Teleservices bought GTI and merged with SmarTel, creating a retail-promotional phonecard powerhouse. Finish Line Racing and OmniTel, among others, closed their doors.

As the players in this young industry sort themselves out, the opportunities for collectors have never been brighter. Sound like a contradiction in terms? A company like Worldcom issuing Michael Jordan's image on retail series of cards can only help increase awareness and draw more people into the hobby. Fewer companies mean that every available dollar will be contested fiercely, and could very well mean that companies who have paid scant attention to collectors up until now will work harder to get those collector dollars.

And the best way to do that? Let us repeat ourselves: Limited-run, exciting images and good per-minute values from solid companies which excel in customer service.

READERS ALWAYS WRITE

Silence on AmeriVox is deafening

I want to voice my disappointment with Moneycard Collector in regards to the lack of information published about World Telecom Group and AmeriVox.

AmeriVox has been featured in articles, ads, new card introductions, etc. Since last fall, the ads, articles, etc. have all but disappeared. AmeriVox appears only in the price guide. Is it a coincidence that the network marketing side of WTG's business (AmeriVox) has disappeared at the same time?

What about the sudden appearance of Genesis Telecom Incentives? A Genesis card is pictured on Page 49 of the September issue ("New Issues"). Shouldn't your readers be made aware of the fact that Genesis is AmeriVox revisited? Although a couple of former AmeriVox reps now own Genesis, the program basically is the same. People who have worked, supported and invested in the company for five years are not being paid; why would anyone believe that new Genesis people will be treated any differently?

Maybe the subject is too hot to handle, but I find it curious that you didn't have a problem reporting Destiny's problems. Why not tell the readers about AmeriVox?

Yes, there is a sour tone to this letter. Being one of the above-mentioned AmeriVox reps who lost a lot of money buying into "the promise of the future," I am sure you can understand why.

Roberta A. Gregory, Rochester Hills, MI.

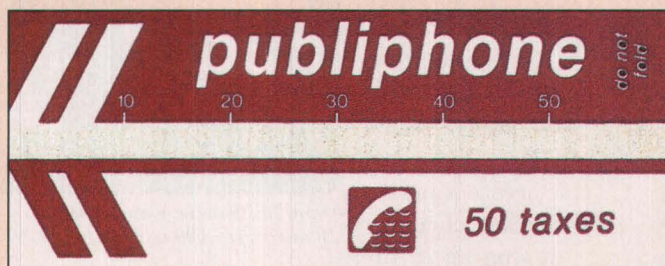

While AmeriVox has a lower profile than in the past, the company's name has appeared in the pages of Moneycard Collector this year. Concerns that AmeriVox reps were selling cards at fire-sale prices was mentioned in February's "Words on Numbers," provoking a fiery letter in response in April. The AmeriVox profile in March noted the company had fallen on tough times in 1995 and 1996, and ended with the hope that the telecard pioneer would rebound this year. AmeriVox executives have been invited to respond to your comments, but at least for the time being have declined. Finally, thanks for the note about Genesis. More information on the new network marketing company appears in this month's "Tapping the Networks" column.

Another look at Crouzet's Publiphone cards

Due to mechanical errors, the color of the French thermo-magnetic Publiphone cards pictured on Page 44 of October's edition ("Making History") was not faithfully reproduced. Here's another look at the cards, which were tested in the United States by the French company Crouzet in the fall of 1994.

The U.S. test cards can be distinguished from their French counterparts by the English words "Do not fold" beside "Publi-phone" on the card obverse. The two series of the cardboard cards are distinguished by a series of numbers and "A" or "B" on the reverse.

Phonecard series is history in the making

When was the last time you saw a phonecard series featured in Newsweek? Check out their Aug. 25 issue. Star Telecom's Internet Home Page series can put this hobby on the map. Don't short change it, please. The Series hits a nail on the head and eventually will put all the football, baseball and other tired idioms to shame. This is what the hobby has needed to put it to the predicted level of dwarfing stamps and coins. If you make this series your centerpiece, you will vitalize the entire hobby. Believe! Phonecards can be the big thing. The Internet is now. The combination is synchronicity.

Star Telecom Network; Internet Home Page 64-card series; each $20 denomination; 3,500 of each issued; July 1997.

Larry Ball, Pacific Palisades, CA.

Your enthusiasm is commendable, and we applaud the collectibility message included in the series' mention in Newsweek's "Cyberscope" page. The Star Telecom Network series, featured in September's "New Issues" section of Moneycard Collector, is a good example of the innovative, collectible phonecards that continue to help the hobby grow.

More information on 7-Eleven hockey cards

I am writing to you regarding the 7-Eleven NHL telecards. In the August 1997 "America's Most Wanted," you referred to a 12-card set, but it is a 20-card set — the first eight issued in December 1996, followed by six at the end of January 1997 and six more released at the beginning of April 1997.

This is a difficult set to come by. All were available in British Columbia and had mintages of 3,000 to 4,500 except the Daniel Alfredsson cards, which were only available in Ontario and only 635 were issued — why the low printing, I do not know. I was able to obtain one through Frank Ataw of F.A. Marketing of Toronto. It was through your magazine that I found his address and phone number. Otherwise, I would not have been able to get a full set. Thank you, and keep up the good work.

Drinking It In!

Coke's not the only real thing on phonecards

by Jim Chudnow

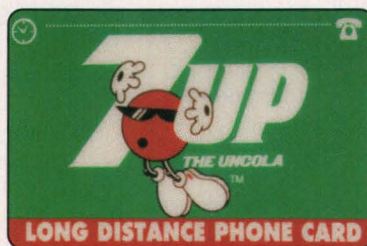

One of the more popular subjects for prepaid phonecards has been various types of beverages. If the enduring popularity of Coca-Cola themed cards is not enough, witness the recent furor over the Karis and Direct Link versions of the Pepsi "Time in Space" card and Karis' Mountain Dew card, which have been visitors to "America's Most Wanted" and "Hot Cards."

Of course, Coke is still king — a recent example is the TresCom Coca-Cola diecut and its accompanying packaging — but since Coca-Cola cards easily is a major subject unto itself (visited in Moneycard Collector's March 1995, July 1995, January 1996, and June 1996 editions), this article will poke into the non-Coke world, in general chronological order of card issuance.

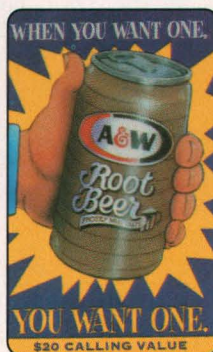

Here then, are some familiar favorites, some hot new cards and some that might have escaped many collectors' attention until now. Drink up!

THE UNCO-

LA: Yep, we're talking 7-UP here, in the form of three cards issued in November, '94 by LDDS. The card pictured a sunglass-bedecked character jumping up in the middle of the logo, with units being denominated at 5 minutes (500 issued), 20 units (3,235 issued), and 60 units (1,055). In part due to the comparatively early date of the issues, the cards have maintained a hefty value (about $45, $30 and $35, respectively).

WHEN YOU WANT ONE,

GET ONE!: That motto can be seen on a striking A&W Root Beer $20 phonecard issued by CDG in February 1995, to be given to distributors at trade shows. Only 600 of these were produced — and, if you also get their BARQ's card (mentioned below), you can have start a Root Beer section in your beverage collection.

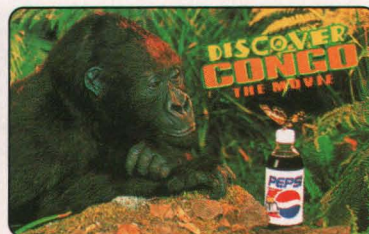

SUNKIST & CANADA DRY: For a Coca-Cola bottlers convention in Chicago in June 1995, OmniTel issued 1,600 cards as a trade-show giveaway; the cards featured logos of soda producers Sunkist and Canada Dry. The 10-minute card expired in June 1996.

MONKEY SEE, MONKEY DRINKS:

One of the largest card-issuing programs occurred in June 1995, when LDDS Worldcom released 18 million cards for a joint promotion of the movie "Congo." On the card, a gorilla can be seen contemplating seaside sunset scene can be seen on a Harbor Sprint Triathlon "Official Souvenir" card issued by HT for the Morro Bay (Cal.) Festival held in early October 1995. The release features logos of Culligan water and PG&E. Quantity: 1,000 10-unit cards, plus around 100 (unnumbered) ones imprinted "Test."

OmniTel; Sunkist-Canada Dry; 10 minutes; 1,600 issued; June 1995.

THE FLEET'S INTO WATER: Cards No. 2 and 3 of HT's Fleet Week set released in October 1995 had numerous logos – including that of Crystal Geyser water. There were 5,000 of each of the 10-unit cards issued.

DOO-DAH TO-DO: Chandler, Arizona held its Doo-Dah Festival from Oct. 12-15 in 1995. Commemorating the event was the ever-prolific HT, whose cactus card had a large Pepsi logo (besides ones from Planet Hollywood, Budweiser, Fox TV and three others). You can find up to 100 numbered cards imprinted "Test," plus 3,500 regular 10-unit versions.

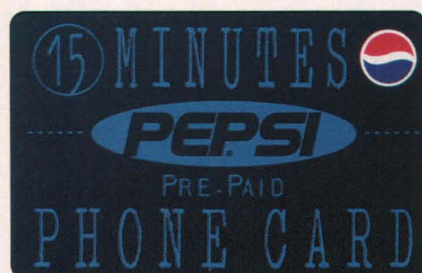

YOUR RITE TO DIET: A well-arranged collaged collection of cheerfully colorful cartoonish characters can be clearly comprehended in HT's Arizona State Fair card released for the mid-October 1995 version of that event. At the bottom of the front of the card are the logos of Diet Rite and its parent RC Cola, while the back has numbering up to 3,000 and the phrase, "If you don't go, you won't know!"

A used 20-unit Snapple card (seemingly from 1995, with time by Incomm; quantity unknown) cost $6. It has a sort of charming drawing of a guy wearing a baseball-style cap with the product's name on it, using a card to make a call. There's a scratch-off on back, but no info on any expiration date.

In addition, two expired 15-minute "Pepsi Points" cards (one with a dark blue background, and the other with a large logo on a white background) cost $6 each. They apparently were released around October 1996.

LDDS Worldcom; Pepsi logo; 210,000 issued; 15 minutes; October 1996.

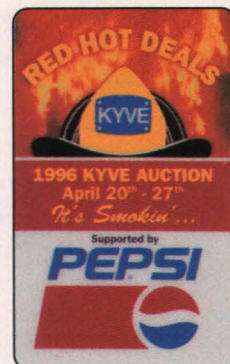

LDDS Worldcom; Pepsi logo on blue; 175,000 issued; 15 minutes; October 1996.

The blue one (sequentially numbered to 175,000) says "Phone-pass card good For... Free Phone Calls from Pepsi." The white one indicates at least 210,000 were printed. Time expires in October 1997 on both, and is carried LDDS Worldcom, whose logo appears on the back. Similar cards were done for the Canadian market through Canada Telecom Network. The CTN versions, issued in June 1996 with second runs of each in February 1997, totaled 20,124 for the blue background

Grapevine Telecards; Maui Marathon 1997; 10 minutes; 1,500 issued; March 1997.

Grapevine Telecards; Pepsi KYVE Auction; 10 minutes; 1,000 issued; April 1997.

card and 14,176 for the white background card.

OK, OK, we can't resist some mention of Coca-Cola. In addition to the TresCom card mentioned above, Grapevine Telecards' Maui Marathon card ("Run With the Whales") was issued in March 1996. There were 1,500 cards issued with time by Cable & Wireless. The next year, another card was issued for the same charity event, again using the whale-tail logo of the event, plus the red Coke logo over some palm trees. The latter card also shows the logo of the Maui Marriott Hotel, and Adidas shoes.

In April 1996, Grapevine issued a card with a large Pepsi logo for the KYVE Auction held at the end of that month to help raise funds for that Public TV station in central Washington State. The front uses a firefighter's hat to tout the "Red Hot Deals," while the back shows the sequential number of the 10-unit card (of 1,000), plus the logo of Cable and Wireless.

For the 1997 yearly auction, Grapevine issued a new card featuring the auction dates, a TV saying "Music To Your Eyes," and the phrases "25 years of bidding, buying and broadcasting!!! Now that's something to sing about!" Once again, the bottom of the front has a large Pepsi logo. This time, there were only 700 10-unit cards done, with network services by LDDS Worldcom.

As mentioned above, Direct Link Telecommunications and Karis Communications both issued 5-minute "Pepsi Time in Space" cards. The reverses of each are different. In order to reveal the PIN under the logo symbols, you have to yank a pull-tab on the front. Direct Link issued 1,500 cards for Vertical Partners, a marketing firm, and Karis released 500 live cards and 500 samples. In June, Karis released the first-ever Mountain Dew card, a joint project with Vertical Partners. There are 500 live 10-minute and 100 matched "Test / Sample" cards.

When it comes to collecting beverage images on phonecards, then, a "soft" touch can be good. Look for a more spirited follow-up next month, as we look at alcoholic beverage-themed cards.

The author is a phonecard collector living in Chicago, Ill.

TAPPING THE NETWORKS

WELCOME TO GENESIS. On July 1 a new network marketing company was formed called "Welcome To Genesis." The new firm is owned jointly by three former national sales directors for AmeriVox, Jill Davidson, Lou and Deb Lampier and by former AmeriVox Vice-President of Sales, James Cummaro.

Cummaro is President of W. T. Genesis and told Moneycard Collector that although it was established with the blessing of AmeriVox "any suggestion that this is just another division of that company is false. It's a totally independent operation," he said. "The four of us just felt that with 14 years of combined experience in the phonecard network marketing business we wanted to go our own way and do our own thing. We've tried to take the best of AmeriVox and make some improvements," he added.

Corporate offices are based in Syracuse, N.Y. The official launch was to be on Sept. 6 at the Westchester Marriott in Tarrytown, NY and a follow-up event on Sept. 13 in Syracuse at the Holiday Inn-Fairgrounds.

Initially five cards will be offered: a charter member card and four standard cards. World Telecom Group, the parent company of AmeriVox, is providing the phone time. Special introductory rates as low as 14.9 cents per minute will be offered on these cards.

The company is in the process of finding and placing leaders to open up various geographical regions of the country.

STS WINS UT PHONE CARD CONTRACT.

Strategic Telecom Systems Inc. (STS) of Knoxville has been awarded the exclusive right to market its prepaid phonecards on the University of Tennessee's Knoxville campus.

The competitively bid contract was awarded to STS for one year, with an option for up to four more years upon the mutual agreement of the parties. Providing carrier service for the campus cards under contract to STS will be Zenex Corp. of Oklahoma City.

The cards will be sold in increments of $5, $10 and $20 through 18 vending machines located in residence halls and university apartment complexes.

"We're excited about the chance to work with UT to establish its first prepaid card program. Students are an ideal market for prepaid cards. We plan to market them aggressively on campus to educate students and parents on the advantages of using prepaid cards instead of traditional means of reaching out to their family and friends," said Tom Solomon, manager of prepaid card services for STS.

He said the cards offer both convenience and potential savings to students and other purchasers. They are available to those who do not have their own "home" telephone from which to make calls using traditional long distance carriers, and can offer significant savings compared to other calling methods often favored by students, including collect calls, operator-assisted calls and many other calling cards.

STS began by selling prepaid phonecards. It now sells a variety of other products, including, travel packages, including prepaid cellular service, home theater systems, Echostar digital television satellite systems, paging, one-plus residential long distance service and the STS Flowerclub with Florafax. STS is a wholly owned subsidiary of Easy Access International Inc. of Boca Raton, Fla.

Easy Access International Inc. through its other subsidiaries, focuses on the retail distribution of prepaid telephone cards and prepaid telephone cards with instant win promotional game pieces.

CELEBRATING FREEDOM IN DALLAS.

"Celebrate Freedom" lays claim to being the largest contemporary Christian/Gospel concert held in the United States, and was held on the Fourth of July at Southfork Ranch (made famous by the "Dallas" television series). Winston Flood, an independent STS representative who operates Flood & Associates Telecommunications, issued 1,501 10-minute cards for the event. The card, which features Interstate Batteries and radio sponsors' logos, has time carried by Zenex.

STS REP BUILDS BRIDGE

CARD. Zanesville, Ohio, is home to a well-known Y-shaped bridge that spans both the Licking and Muskingum rivers. That bridge, reportedly the only one of its kind in the United States, and originally constructed in 1814, is now pictured on a five-minute phonecard by STS representative Fred Schuster of Zanesville, who calls his business All Sell Communications. The total mintage of the card will depend on how many orders are received.

AMERICA'S MOST WANTED

This month's selections again contain all-time favorites Coca-Cola and McDonald's – but from 1996! Another 1996 release that appears this month, the Demi Moore Cigar Aficionado card, is always in high demand. (My personal Coca-Cola favorite is the Trescom die-cut Coca-Cola bottle, which also has been an "America's Most Wanted" visitor. This makes a striking addition to any collection). And again our friends at USA Card have come up with another entry to go with their repeat visitor, Cracker Jack. Here are this month's selections!

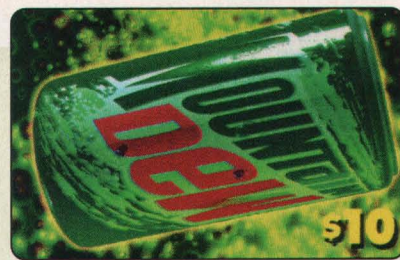

MCDONALD'S HAPPY MEAL DIE CUT. Score Board; set/3 $25 denomination each; 856 issued, May 1996. Reappearing after a long quiet spell, this year-old set popped up again in strength. If you want it, this is probably an opportune time.

LONG BEACH EXPO/MARILYN. USACard; $5 denomination; 1,000 issued, June 1997. One more solid winner for USACard, whose specialty is functional telecards carrying award winning designs and features. The other Marilyn from a couple years back has performed among the very best of all the Marilyn cards. I don't think this will repeat, but it is already climbing.

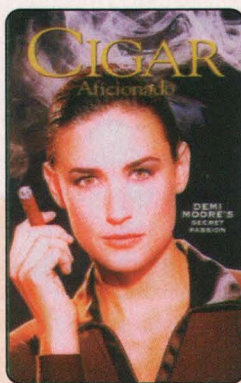

CRACKER JACK BUTTER TOFFEE. USACard; 10 units; 1,500 issued, May 1997. The Cracker Jack theme seems to be magic in the hearts of telecard collectors, and the demand for the Butter Toffee version is very steady. With the first issue in the stratosphere for a food product card, this one is being devoured, too.

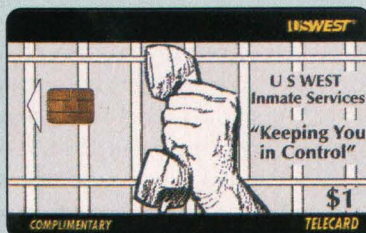

MOUNTAIN DEW. Karis Communications; 10 minutes; 500 issued, July 1997. Delayed slightly by spectacular new packaging (the product that "delivers" the telecard to the customer), Mountain Dew hit the pavement running. The packaging is truly nice. Although there seem to be just a few telecard collectors "Dewing It," this will fit nicely into any generalized soda collection.

COCA-COLA GOLD AND SILVER SETS. Score Board; 50 X $2 denomination; 2,715 issued, May 1996. Two sets, one gold and one silver, feature 50 different designs on the $2 cards. They were released originally at the 17th National Sports Collectors Convention in Anaheim. They are very nice and it is a pleasure to see them again.

DEMI MOORE CIGAR AFICIONADO. TotalTel; 10 minutes; 1,000 issued, September 1996. When most of the movie star collectors were wanting you, where were you hiding? I'll bet there are still many more than 1,000 that want Demi in their collection, so this will dry up very quickly.

INMATE SERVICES KEEPING YOU IN CONTROL. U S WEST; $1 denomination; 2,500 issued, June 1997. This card is used as a promotional tool to advertise the specialized telecom services available to penal institutions. It has a pleasing design and will grace many a telecard collection. U S WEST considers this very inexpensive advertising, and gives them out at various conventions they attend.

America's Most Wanted is compiled monthly by Moneycard Collector and written by dealer Steve Eyer of Mt. Zion, Ill. All dealers are encouraged to participate by faxing a list of their company's top sellers to (937) 498-0876 by the 16th of each month.

WORDS ON NUMBERS

Collectors like phone-cards that don't expire!

We frequently hear from collectors who are critical of expiration dates on phonecards. Other established collectibles, like money and stamps, always hold at least face value. A 32-cent stamp, regardless of the passage of time, is always worth at least 32 cents, and you can use it.

So what about phonecards? Phone time doesn't have to be a perishable commodity like milk or breakfast cereal, and there are clear indications that phonecards that don't expire are popular with collectors.

Look at a prominent issuer like USACard. Notice that the prices for its cards are up and they frequently appear in America's Most Wanted and in the Hot Cards section of Moneycard Collector. The cards are popular with collectors for several reasons — USACard is a company in good standing, the cards show clever and creative images, and the time on its cards does not expire.

"Sound money never expires," says Klaus Degler, president of USACard. "USACard decided from the beginning to set an example by backing the time on our cards indefinitely." That commitment to a new collectible has served his company, and the collector, very well.

As the prices of cards fluctuate, collectors should always have the consolation that their phonecards always have the value of the phone time — the prepaid phone time. The more companies that adopt a no-expiration policy, the more incentive to potential collectors to join an exciting and growing hobby. USACard has succeeded in part because their cards are not just pieces of plastic with a pretty image, but a collectible that does not expire. They are moneycards!

Just a side note regarding another popular issuer from whom we would like to hear more: Ameritech, please phone home! Recently I spoke with a very nice gentleman, who was trying to find out what was going on with Ameritech in the collectors' market. He is a loyal collector of Ameritech cards, having started collecting with the 1987 Michigan Bell series. He enjoys finding out what Ameritech's new issues are, and chasing them down. However, for about six months, he has been unable to find out what, if any, new cards they have been issuing.

If there is one collector out there interested in Ameritech, then the odds are that there are many more. These loyal collectors are waiting to hear some good news, and, if the Price Guide listings are any indication, Ameritech cards are often good news for collectors. So, Ameritech, keep the momentum going! We encourage the company to tune in once more to the collectible side of phonecards and urge Ameritech collectors to be patient.

STORED VALUE SYSTEMS PROGRAM LINKS K MART, AT&T. It's

being hailed as the first of its kind. Kmart Cash Cards, launched in mid-August, can be used as an electronic gift certificate, a cash replacement for merchandise returns and an AT&T calling card. The program was designed and implemented by Stored Value Systems of Louisville, Ky.

"Consumers want convenient transactions, and retailers are looking for their own place in the world of electronic cash. Retail cash cards reflect a convergence of these two demands," says Delroy R. Hayunga, SVS president and chief executive officer.

Plans call for the cards to be shipped unloaded and placed on Kmart shelves. Customers will purchase a card by taking it to a cashier, who will load the card with the amount of value specified by the customer.

SVS combines Kmart's point-of-sale system and AT&T's calling card function with SVS' retail cash-card platform on the magnetic-stripe product. "Retailers can finally take gift certificates out of the drawer and put them on the shelf," says Hayunga.

The new Kmart Cash Cards also can be used as AT&T prepaid calling cards.

PLAYBOY TO PRODUCE COLLECTIBLE CARDS. Cards featuring images of Playboy magazine's Playmates will be produced under a licensing agreement between Playboy Enterprises Inc. and National Access LLC of Irving, Texas.

The initial products will include a series of prepaid cards known as "Playboy Select," several limited edition collector sets and an interactive "access" card featuring actual Playmates doing the voice prompts.

The cards will feature non-nude images of popular Playmates such as Pamela Anderson and Donna D'Errico and be available in $5, $10 and $20 denominations. A special collectible series with each current Playmate of the Month also is being produced.

The cards and services will be marketed via Playboy magazine and Playboy Online, as well as through retail outlets which parallel the magazine's distribution in the United States and at U.S. military installations worldwide.

"This is a fast-growing market," says Irwin Kornblau, vice president and marketing director of Playboy magazine. "National Access is bringing us state-of-the-art technology, combined with marketing programs that maximize our brand's impact."

LCI, BLUEWATER SIGN MULTI-YEAR PACT. LCI

International has signed a multi-year deal with Bluewater Communications, a Miami-headquartered provider of prepaid phonecards to store outlets in the U.S., Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Under the terms of the agreement, which has an approximate value of $32 million, LCI will provide long-distance network services for Bluewater's cards, allowing users to place calls from anywhere in the United States and to 230 countries worldwide.

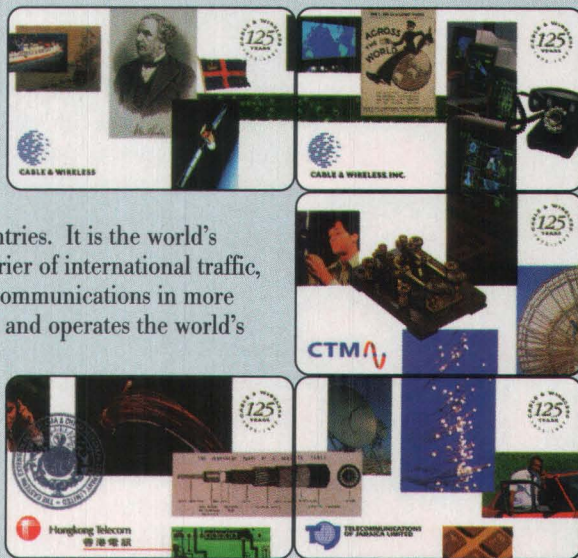

"Since opening sales operations in Fort Lauderdale and Tampa last November, LCI has been very aggressive in pursuing opportunities like this one," says Marshall Hanno, senior vice president of sales for LCI's commercial division.

CABLE & WIRELESS MARKS 125TH. Cable & Wireless Inc. released a prepaid phonecard puzzle set to mark the 125th anniversary of Cable and Wireless plc. The company is a descendant of the Eastern Telegraph Co., which was formed in 1872 to link London to

Hong Kong via telegraph cable. C&W is a leading provider of international telecommunications, with 15 million customers in 70 countries. It is the world's fourth-largest carrier of international traffic, provides mobile communications in more than 30 countries and operates the world's largest cables ship fleet. Cable & Wireless has operated in the U.S. since 1975.

The C&W set includes five prepaid cards issued by the following

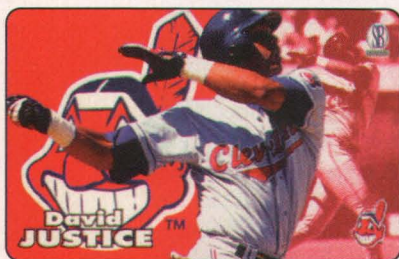

Cable & Wireless companies: Cable & Wireless Communications (United Kingdom); Cable & Wireless Inc. (United States); Companhia de Telecomunicacoes de Macau SARL (Macau); Hongkong Telecommunications Ltd. (Hong Kong); and Telecommunications of Jamaica Ltd. (Jamaica). Each of the 11,000 sets issued comes in its own folder, and each card has the equivalent of $3 U.S. calling time. Images depict each company's history and current technologies.

When it comes to travel, they say that "Getting there is half the fun," and that was certainly true for me as I flew to Cleveland in early August to attend the 18th National Sports Collectors Convention in Cleveland.

I flew on Continental Airlines, and of course had a chance to look over their complimentary in-flight magazine. In the past there have always been ads for "user" phonecards in such publications, but in this edition there were no less than nine of them. Not all were for pre-paid's mind you, but the sheer number of them and the sophistication of some of the offers are proof-positive that the user market is hot, highly competitive and that all of this activity is helping to build awareness of phonecards in general.

Cleveland's David Justice swings away on this 100-minute Score Board card. The card, quantity unavailable, is not for sale to the public, but is used as a promotional/incentive tool.

By the time I had waded through the details of all the phonecard and calling card ads we had landed in Cleveland and it was just a short shuttle ride to get to the IX Center. The IX is an enormous facility. The show floor had been laid out with wide aisles that afforded lots of walking room.

Again this year, there were phonecards at the show, but not as many as I would have liked. There was no special "pavilion" area as in the past two years. But by the same token, even in the general "corporate" areas, the trading card companies themselves were sparsely represented — perhaps partly due to the fact the Fanfest for Major League Baseball's All Star Game had been held in Cleveland just a month before.

Score Board was there displaying memorabilia merchandise (such as signed shirts), as well as boxes of some of their card products such as the Talkin' Sports, which have interactive cards providing users with updates on sports scores besides allowing long distance calls.

Score Board's staff, including the enthusiastic and helpful Brian Cahill, gave away promotional (non-time) specimens of an 8-card baseball set (produced by Frontier) — different cards at different times during the four exhibition days of the show. Score Board was once again doing a good job of introducing more people to phonecards!

Sports Time Inc. which is mainly a trading card producer showed some 1995 Canadian Star Trek phonecards it distributes, plus some of its own new Bay Watch cards — both of which could only be seen in a glass case.

A small number of dealers had phonecards at their booths. These were mostly Score Board Coke and Finish Line racing cards. Prices on many cards were higher than in phonecard price guides, so it took a little negotiating to come away with a bargain.

One of the big benefits of large shows such as the Sports Nationals is the opportunity to meet and speak with professional star athletes and hall-of-famers. I was fortunate to have a couple of minutes with former NFL great Johnny Unitas and asked what he thought about trading cards and phonecards from the perspective of someone who has been pictured on such cards. He replied that while he enjoys going to shows like the National to do signings, he doesn't receive any of the royalties paid to use his image on officially licensed cards. Rather all royalty monies for such cards are paid to NFL Properties. Thus all the autograph revenues go to the owners of the teams rather than to the players pictured. So, unless it's a private deal (i.e. a card not showing team logos), royalties don't go to the players. Understandably they have relatively little interest in licensed cards, much less the desire to help promote them.

Helping add to the public's awareness of phonecards was a booth from the one and only phonecard publication at the show, Moneycard Collector. Advertising Manager Tim Yedinak enthusiastically urged people to take a free copy of the magazine, explaining to many how it concerned a "new collectible." I enjoyed periodically helping out at the booth.

This year's Sports National left me as perplexed as ever about the decisions of other sports card issuers such as Topps, Signature Rookies and Press Pass not to issue phonecards. In my view, these firms need to forget earlier half-hearted efforts made by some of them in 1995. These products came on the scene too soon and were too weakly promoted to be viable. As well, the industry never did enough to educate trading card dealers and bring them into the phonecard business.

In time, the brighter decision makers in the sports collectibles business will act on this opportunity, not only because their traditional business is in the doldrums, but also because the fundamentals of phonecards are so clearly superior to trading cards. I'm looking forward to the 19th Sports Nationals in 1997 and seeing a change in this direction. Gentlemen, read your in-flight magazines!

SHOW STOPPERS

(Editor's note: Buz and Betty Houghtaling of B&B Fone Cards, Alta Loma, Calif., took part in the Singapore Book Fair in June. Here's Betty Houghtaling's report.)

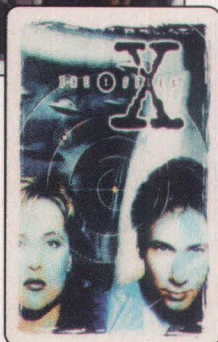

SINGAPORE SHOW The fair was held from June 21-29 — nine straight days, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day. Part of the reason for the length of this show was that it wasn't just a single event. There were three different shows going on simultaneously at the Trade Center, so the crowds were huge. Most collectors I encountered preferred to use their cards and then collect them. Still, there was a lot of interest in U.S. phonecards.

One of the more notable aspects of the show was the decision on the part of some dealers to display cards depicting nudity. Having previously visited Singapore, I knew this was a definite "no-no." The dealers involved found this out when halfway through the show we were visited by the Singapore police, who confiscated questionable cards and took three people into custody. They each received a written "Stern Warning" letter, which is, in Singapore, a very serious charge.

There were new cards brought out at the show specifically for Singapore collectors. Of course, like U.S. collectors, Singaporeans go for the images such as Coke, Disney, McDonald's. There were other images which caught their interest too, however, such as science fiction (very big!) and USACard's Pink Panther series. They seemed concerned about cost, especially when they knew they wouldn't be able to use the time.

Starcardz; X File three-card set; inactive in U.S., but can be activated upon request; 500 sets (250 with different fonts destroyed) issued; June 1997.

A booth with Marilyn Monroe trappings, complete with look-alike models, were one of the lures at this summer's Singapore Book Fair.

The cards that sold best were the 17th National Coke series I — not too expensive at $2 each and they loved the images — as well as the new Michael Jordan series, BayWatch, and, as already mentioned, science fiction-themed cards.

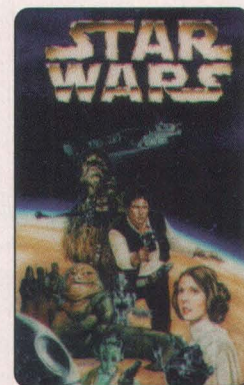

Modern Mobility of Arizona came with what I considered some great collector series from Starcardz. First was a 3-card X Files series in a folder with an edition of 750. Only 500 sets had matching numbers as some cards were sold individually. Also as sets were put together, almost 250 were found to have been printed with different fonts. Therefore, MM decided to have these destroyed. As these cards were produced for sale in Singapore the time was not activated, but the issuer has assured me that cards sold in the U.S. can be activated upon request. Being an X-File freak, I naturally jumped on these cards.

Also produced was a three-card Star Wars set in a folder with an edition of 1,000. Half of these were sold in Singapore, making this item even more rare in the U.S. market.

Lastly were two Batman series from the new movie. The first is a three-card puzzle set in a folder with an edition of 1,000. All but 300 sets were sold at the show. The second is a five-card character set (no folder) edition of 1,000. These also sold well, with only 350 remaining after the show. All cards are authorized and, as with the X Files, the issuer has assured me that should anyone wish to activate these cards, they have but to ask. I believe that the scarcity of these cards and their popular images will make them much sought-after here.

I truly look forward to going back to Singapore. Even though the show was expensive and exhausting, I find the Singapore people friendly and warm-hearted. I just have to find the stamina for another nine-day show!

VISA CASH DOWN UNDER

Australia and New Zealand are moneycard pioneers

by Art Becker

Quick! Name two countries that each have issued more than 75 different Visa Cash cards. Of course, the USA is one of them. What's the other? Australia! In fact, this country and neighboring New Zealand were among the first to implement Visa Cash programs.

The five Australian banks issuing Visa Cash have each gone through one or more of three distinct phases. Four of the banks implemented an in-house program, called a pilot. This consisted of employees being able to use Visa Cash in the bank's cafeteria. For this reason, such cards are also known as cafeteria cards. Usually a A$5 disposable card was given to each employee, and then disposable A$20 cards were sold. Often, these cards are referred to as employee cards. The Australian cafeteria cards used the same design as the cafeteria cards at Visa HQ in San Francisco (Moneycard Collector, November 1996, Page 52), and, in fact, most of these cards read "stored value card," with "Visa Cash" coming in the next series. However, there are exceptions. The Commonwealth Bank cafeteria cards read "CBA Byte Card," instead of "stored value card." One set of A$5 & A$20 cards looked the same as the other cafeteria cards, except for having the bank's diamond logo on the obverse, while a second A$20 CBA Byte Card is actually an overprint of an NAB cafeteria card.

Next came a series of cards known as "logo cards," which had the bank's logo on the obverse. Two of the banks issued these cards. After that, all the banks issued a series of generic cards, available to the public. They are called "generic" because all of them have the same obverse and reverse. In fact, the reverses of the generic cards feature the logos of all five banks. Thus, the only way to tell which bank issued a specific A$5, A$20 or A$50 cards produced for another bank, because their own cards hadn't arrived yet. The correct codes are:

05021 Australia & New Zealand Bank (ANZ)

05022 National Australia Bank (NAB)

05023 Commonwealth Bank

05024 Australian Credit Unions (CUSCAL)

05025 Westpac Bank.

Generic cards are also known as Gold Coast cards. That's because they were accepted by merchants along Australia's Gold Coast, a popular resort area. While many collectors are satisfied with collecting one of each denomination without regard for which bank issued the card, specialists want to collect all of them.

The bad news is that the Gold Coast trials have ended, and all of the terminals were removed by the end of September 1997. The good news is that three

Gold Coast theme parks continue to use A$20 Visa Cash cards, issued by ANZ, and two additional parks should be using them by now. Wet'n'Wild, Sea World, and

Warner Brothers Movie

World are featured on six different Visa Cash cards, one each by Wet'n'Wild and Sea World and three by Movie World – Movie World Entrance, Movie World Batman, and Movie World Lethal Weapon, plus an additional rare Movie World Entrance variety. There were 10,000 of each card were issued, with an expiration date of 4/97. Additional cards with the same designs were then produced with expiration dates of 3/97 and 8/98, and different design numbers, though the designs remained essentially the same. That makes 15 varieties of the first theme park cards, plus the Movie World Entrance variety.

Sea World subsequently has issued a A$30 card; the first in Australia with that denomination. Of the three Wet'n'Wild Water Park cards, most of the second issue, and all of the third issue, have holes punched in them, so that the cards can be worn on a lanyard. The differences among the issues are the expiration dates.

Dreamworld theme park cards were issued by NAB, with denominations of A$50 and A$100. At least 5,000 of each card were produced, but all were withdrawn shortly after their introduction, for reasons unknown. Thus, issue quantity alone doesn't always indicate scarcity. Apparently few of the A$100 were sold, and they are already difficult to obtain from dealers.

By the time you read this, Westpac Bank will have issued A$20 and A$50 Visa Cash cards for Sega World, another theme park. Yet another theme park that will be using Visa Cash is Technology Park, in Sydney.

The use of Visa Cash in a closed environment, such as an amusement park, shows how successful this product can be. Many parks don't want to use cash inside their gates. The fewer employees who handle money, the less chance there is for mistakes. Many parks use tickets, or scrip, but these are difficult to track. With Visa Cash, the park can instantly know who spends what, when, and where. What a tremendous tool for conducting market research, besides being convenient for everyone concerned!

Several interesting overprints have been produced on Australian Visa Cash cards. A Commonwealth Bank A$20 card for the Asia Pacific Smartcard Forum is really an overprint of the entire obverse of the bank's A$20 generic card. In fact, one of this bank's A$20 cafeteria cards is actually an overprint of an NAB A$20 cafeteria card. An early card commemorating Technology Park is said to exist, and it too apparently is an overprint. A commemorative Visa Cash card produced for the Visa Asia Pacific Conference in 1995 was overprinted on a NAB generic $20 card. Note how this overprint strongly resembles the cafeteria cards. Westpac Bank issued a Coca-Cola all-over overprint of its generic A$20 card. This overprint commemorates a world first: the first time a Visa Cash card could be used in a Coke vending machine. A mere 200 were produced. Other overprints include a CUSCAL Convention in 1995, overprinted on a $5 cafeteria card, as well as the AICUM Expo in 1996, also overprinted on a $5 cafeteria card.

Two of the banks have issued newly designed general purpose cards. Commonwealth Bank has A$20 and A$50 cards with a flag design, while NAB has a A$50 card featuring a surfer.

All of the banks have issued reloadable cards. Some are available to the public, while others are for bank employees only. The employee cards generally look like a logo card, while the public cards have new designs. Some of the employee reloadable cards exist with two different expiration dates.

Many early Australian Visa Cash cards were produced in quantities as small as 200, while public cards were issued in quantities as large as 10,000. The thing is, you really have to have specific information for each issue to know how rare the card really is. Even some serious collectors have still only seen a photocopy of a few of the rarer cards. Some of the reloadable cards were apparently issued in quantities as small as 50 to 500. There is still a lot of information to be discovered when it comes to Australian Visa Cash cards. Many of the early Australian Visa Cash cards are selling for hundreds of dollars, and prices are rising daily, with most A$5 cards very difficult to obtain.

New Zealand issued Visa Cash at three banks: Australia and New Zealand Bank (ANZ), Bank of New Zealand (BNZ), and Westpac Bank. Each issued NZ$5 and NZ$20 cafeteria cards, some in very small quantities. While the BNZ cafeteria cards used the standard cafeteria card design with the standard Gemplus chip, the other banks cafeteria cards resembled the Australian generic cards on the obverse. They had a different chip, however, and their reverses resembled the stored-value cards by showing the appropriate bank's logo. The New Zealand Visa Cash cards were issued in quantities of from 100 to 1,800. They are getting more difficult to locate every day, too. Two of the New Zealand banks are the same as the Australian banks issuing Visa Cash, while the third has similar initials. All this adds to the confusion, and to the fun, as well.

Visa Cash collectors Down Under prefer mint cards. They actively seek the rarer USA Visa Cash cards, as well as those from other countries. Several dealers in Australia and New Zealand sell collectible Visa Cash cards. Both collectors and dealers are usually willing to swap for rare cards. One reason for the high level of activity might be due to Australia and New Zealand each having a nationwide phone company, both of which have been issuing stored-memory phonecards for years. Large quantities of used phonecards provide an entrance into the hobby. The climb in prices of the early cards taught them the lesson that early cards are worth getting. When Visa Cash came along, these savvy collectors didn't need to be told twice that this was a ground floor opportunity.

It's quite possible that there are more Visa Cash collectors in Australia than in the USA. On the other hand, if we could get, say, Walt Disney to start using Visa Cash, there could suddenly be thousands of people collecting these great cards.

Special thanks go to Torsten A. Weller and Bruce Phillips for their invaluable assistance.

Art Becker is an attorney in Washington D.C., and has produced a worldwide catalog of collectible Visa Cash cards.

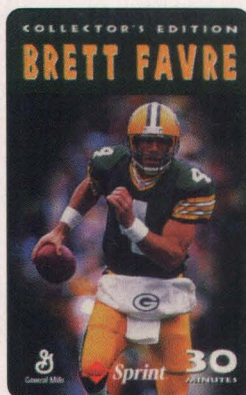

CORPORATE CORNER

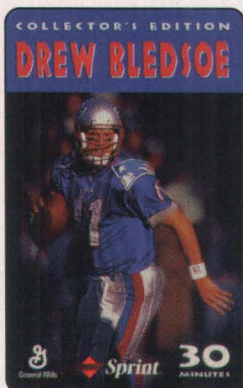

It's fall, and the sounds of football are in the air, and the sights of football are on a new series of phonecards issued by Sprint for General Mills.

There is a total of 113,000 cards featuring four of the best quarterbacks in the National Football League: Dan Marino, Drew Bledsoe, Steve Young and Brett Favre. The cards have a whopping 30 minutes of time and are randomly inserted inside specially marked boxes of General Mills food products. If you don't find one inside a box you can send in for an instant winner game piece to see if you're a winner. Odds of winning a phonecard are 1 in 301. Is anybody hungry?

ITS keeps going and going and going with an Energizer bunny. ITS recently issued 2,500

10-minute cards for Energizer batteries. The cards were distributed at a trade show to anyone who happened to stop by the Energizer booth. The card is tough to come by so you're going to have to do some digging.

CTN (Canada Telecom Network) recently quenched everyone's thirst with a 10-minute card issued for Labatt Breweries, one of Canada's largest. The 1,000 cards were used as prizes in a promotion running in bars throughout the province of Quebec.

If a cup of tea is more your, well, cup of tea, then head on over to your local supermarket and look for specially marked boxes of Tetley Tea. Inside these boxes you'll find one of six different five-minute Tetley Tea cards. Collect all six and they form a really cute puzzle. The cards were issued by Coin Ex with time by LCI. These cards use the same Tetley cartoon characters pictured on a series of cards issued by Canada's MT&T Technologies in 1995.

Communications Design Group and Southern New England Telecommunications recently issued two nice cards. A Marriott Hotel in Dallas utilized a five-minute card to thank guests who booked a room. 600 of the cards were issued. CDG/SNET also issued a card for New York Life. The 3,050 10-minute cards were given to sales reps to pass along as customer "thank you's."

After a long delay, Telenova and Hannibal Communications have finally issued the long-awaited Bob's Big Boy card. The cards have six minutes of time and only 760 were issued. The card is unique in that it utilizes a four-color over two-color printing process. Most of the cards went to the client, but collectors may find some at dealers.

Puzzle sets are great way to collect phonecards

by Robert J. Sodaro

To paraphrase an old expression, everyone loves a puzzle. Apparently, this has never been more true than in the world of moneycards. An increasing number of manufacturers have begun producing what have come to be called "puzzle sets." These sets offer a single scene that is depicted across all of the cards in the set. It's not unusual to find accompanying single cards, either standard or jumbo, which repeat the whole scene.

According to all of the dealers, manufacturers, and collectors we spoke to, there is a growing market for puzzle-card sets, and they foresee a bounty of other types of images that can be tapped for future sets. In fact, the consensus is that puzzle sets have an advantage over standard sets, as the connecting image offers a unique collectibility aspect to the set, and tends to motivate both collectors as well as casual buyers to splurge for the entire set, rather than simply purchasing one card from a multiple image set.

Bottom Line Technologies, through its recent merger with Worldcom, has recently come out with a retail Talk'n'Toss puzzle set that supports that trend. The six-card Holiday Puzzle set, each with a $10 denomination, offers collectors a slice of Americana and is being issued throughout the year, starting with a Valentine's Day card and ending with the November release of a Holidays card.

Also new is a Tetley Tea six-card puzzle set, issued by Coinex with time by LCI International. There were a whopping 252,000 of each card issued. See this month's "Corporate Corner" column, Page 43, for details.

Some classic examples of these types of cards include the skylines of famous U.S. cities, skyscrapers, bridges, landscapes, paintings, and numerous other assorted images. According to Jeffrey Waltcher of Grapevine Telecards, a couple of reasons that issuers create puzzle-card sets is because "The bigger surface area offers up a better surface for the image." Some images simply warrant a larger surface area due to the subject matter, he says.

Also, puzzle cards add a unique twist and collectability aspect to the cards. Scott Shapiro of KARS Unlimited agrees. He is a fan of puzzle cards and feels that there should be more of them issued. According to Shapiro, some of his favorites include cards that have been issued by more than one telecard company. Recent examples are the International Telecard Association Chicago banquet seven-card puzzle set, issued April 1997, and the four-card Global Chip Card Alliance set, October 1996.

Another new set with foreign flare is the two-card Bell Canada Quick Change puzzle set done issued to commemorate the hand-over of Hong Kong to the Chinese in July. Put together, the $5 and $10 denomination cards form the Hong Kong skyline. There were 5,000 sets made, and 3,500 were available in souvenir covers. Frank Ataw of Toronto's F.A. Marketing listed the set as one of his favorites of 1997 (Moneycard Collector, October 1997).

Moneycard Collector was involved in one of the earliest U.S. puzzle sets. In 1994, Ameritech, PM Cards/Powell Associates, and the magazine issued a two-card set that coincided with the 103rd American Numismatic Association Convention and the launch of the magazine. The cards features the artwork of Moneycard Collector Art Director Teresa Wenrick, and carried the image of Detroit's skyline (where the convention was held), with the super-imposed image of a car, records, and several coins.

Even earlier was a February 1994 puzzle set offered by Global Telecommunications Solutions. The four-card GTS set, showing cartoon-like art of the New York skyline, might rank as the earliest puzzle set by an U.S. issuer. If there are any older sets, let us know!

Puzzle sets are no strangers to trade shows or conventions. One example of this is from the 1995 TeleCard World show in New York City. Telepoint International produced a five-card set that depicted this city's famous skyline at night. Each card carried five minutes of time, and only 150 of them were issued. The set received a Best of Show Award. Appearing at that same show was a triptych (a puzzle set of three cards) from NYNEX that depicted the outside of Radio City Music Hall. Cards in this set were denominated $1, $5, and $10. A four-card set released for the Strategic Telecom Systems' Dallas show in 1996 created a Texas-sized frenzy when STS reps realized they could try and collect cards with matching serial numbers.

For Fleet Week, an annual San Francisco event that celebrates the city's long association with the U.S. Navy, HT Technologies, Inc. issued a series of cards, including a three-card vertical puzzle set that displayed the Golden Gate bridge, a battleship, and a flight of Blue Angels fighters soaring overhead. The set also carried the logos of Swatch, Coke, Kodak, Citibank, Crystal Geyser, Fleet Week '95, and others.

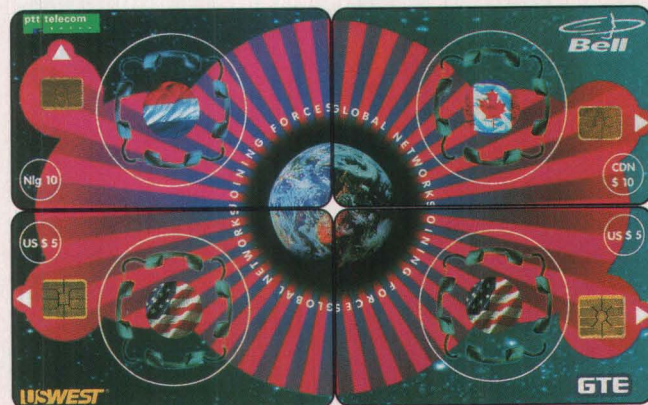

A four-card set was produced by Sprint for the fifth anniversary of McDonald's of Pearlridge Phase of Hawaii. The set shows scenes of Hawaii, and is overlaid with seven McDonald characters (including Ronald, the Hamburgler, and others), and carries the logos of Coca Cola as well as the Golden Arches. The original issue price was $36.64, and included the purchase of the obligatory Big Macs. Apparently, on the day they were issued, all 1,500 cards (as well as 6,000 Big Macs), were sold within minutes to the awaiting patrons in line.

Among other McDonald's themed puzzle sets, Phonecard Management of America turned out the "After the Holidays" two-card set, December 1995, showing Ronald McDonald and Santa, and also a two-card set supporting the Ron Fraser-Ronald McDonald house golf tournament in May 1996.

Another very popular set, mentioned above, was issued by the Global Chip Card Alliance. This four-card set is a multiple-issuer set by U S WEST, GTE, Bell Canada, and PTT Telecom (Netherlands); and contained images of the flags of the nations of the contributing companies. A new, six-card set reportedly will come out later this year, featuring cards from the original four, plus Deutsche Telekom (Germany), and Telecom Malaysia.

On the sports side, Champion Sports Collectibles issued a three-card, 100th anniversary Babe Ruth card set to honor the Sultan of Swat in February 1995. There 5,000 sets issued of the $10-denomination cards.

A more recent entry is the stored-value sports card set issued by Precis Card Systems in June to mark the Chicago White Sox and Cubs' interleague play. The three-card puzzle set, 5,000 issued, depicts the old White Sox stadium, site of the last non-exhibition game between the White Sox and Cubs - the 1908 World Series. Once the fans were educated as to what the cards were, and how to use them, they proved to be so popular that future cards will be issued, Precis Vice President Randy Bednar says.

"The cards are great because they are not only a very cool collectible by themselves, but they have the added functionality of being used to purchase other items, including souvenirs, and food and beverage purchases," Bednar says.

Future issues, in all likelihood, will be used as incentives for fans who pre-purchase season tickets, giveaways, as well as other uses and services. In addition to future White Sox cards, Precis plans on issuing other stored-value, puzzle sets for an as-yet-unidentified NHL franchise.

Other stored-value card issuers are not slackers when it comes to puzzle sets. First Union Bank issued eight-card puzzle sets in three denominations ($20, $50 and $100) for the NFL's Jacksonville Jaguars, and combined with Singapore's Standard Charter Bank on a 12-card Olympic Centenary puzzle set, in October 1995 and June 1996, respectively. NationsBank released a four-card set for the Carolina Panthers' NFL team. Players are pictured on the cards' fronts; the reverses form a puzzle set of the football stadium.

Puzzle sets that bear the Grapevine stamp include the Maxfield Parrish and Alexander Chen sets. Parrish's most well-known works were beautiful paintings of idealized women and fantastic landscapes. Grapevine actually issued a total of five cards featuring Parrish's work; a pair of single cards "Ecstasy" and "Morning" as well as the three-card puzzle set, "Daybreak."

The Alexander Chen cards sport a classic image of Times Square at night awash in neon and bright lights. The Grapevine three-card set offers up a wide vision of Times Square at night, and is reproduced in a single card that was produced in both standard as well as jumbo size.

There are a lot of opportunities out there to put the pieces together. Still, perhaps KARS' Shapiro sums it up best when he points out that puzzle sets from multiple issuers, especially those done in conjunction with trade shows and conventions, truly demonstrate the best of the best the industry has to offer. "It's very nice when various card manufacturers join together to create a single set," he says, "It shows how good we can be when we all cooperate to produce a cool set."

SUBWAY SERIES

It seemed only too appropriate. When the New York Mets met the New York Yankees for the first subway baseball series in 30 years, the New York Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) would have three different MetroCards to commemorate the event.

OK, maybe there wasn't a World Series on the line like those halcyon days when the Yankees took on the Giants or Dodgers. Still, it was something to be able to take the 4 Train to the Bronx and see two New York teams slug it out. It also was something that on the first day of the event, everyone who attended received one of these $15 cards — good for 10 rides on the subway as well as free transfers to a bus — to boot. Heck, next year it will be neat to take the 7 Train to Shea Stadium with the same cards.

What was the most amazing thing of all is the last time the MTA did any similar MetroCards was in 1994, when the New York Rangers won their first Stanley Cup in 47 years.

"It [The Rangers card] didn't do well at that time as you could only use the MetroCard in 59 stations," says Dick Trenery MTA chief of MetroCard Sales. "We also didn't have the 2,300 out-of-system merchants." Trenery says the main reason the MTA came back to doing these kinds of cards was those out-of-system, that is, non-MTA-owned, sales points.

"It was one of our strategic objectives from the MTA perspective, which is to induce our customers to go to our out-of-system sales merchants," says Trenery. "We wanted to create something exciting and innovative for shoppers to come to them."

"Also, the Yankees/Mets series was something of an event. It was definitely something that was all New York. It was the first subway series in 30 years and we are the subway. We had been in contact with the Yankees and the Mets about doing other activities, but this struck us as just perfect. It just came together."

Even though the cards were available at the A&P grocery stores first, it was the Modell's sporting goods chain that made it all come together.

"When we did the Rangers MetroCard, we didn't have Modell's ready to piggy-back on to the program, like they did with the Subway Series cards," says Trenery. "Modell's already had a relationship with both the Yankees and the Mets, so they were more than willing to add their resources to this program. Modell's made it a lot easier to get the licensing rights and they also helped give away cards to everybody who went to the first game in Yankee Stadium."

Another positive factor is that almost all MTA subway stations now accept the MetroCard. In 1994, the 59 stations that did weren't even 25 percent of the total. Another reason that New York natives now find the MetroCard attractive is that riders can transfer from a subway to a bus or vice versa for free. That is something the MTA never has done before.

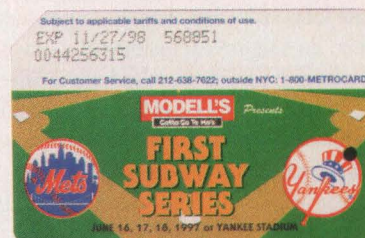

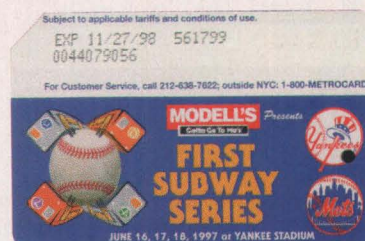

"We had done nearly 20 different cards at the same time as the Rangers, the most famous of those was for the Ringling Bros. Circus," Trenery recalls. "But there weren't enough stations (at which they could be used) so we weren't selling out. Only 5 percent of our customers were using the cards. Now it's up to more than 40 percent."

The end result is Modell's and the other out-of-service merchants sold more 230,000 of the Subway Series cards. Trenery will be the first to tell you this stands as an unqualified success. Don't be surprised now if the MTA does more.

"There will be two different avenues for us to pursue with these cards," he admits. "The first is just plain advertising on cards. A company can approach us and have their logo and message put on the back of our MetroCard. Those cards will obviously be sold out-of-system."

"We will also do a series of what we'll call commemorative MetroCards that will commemorate various local events. It will be something that will make a customer see there's no apparent corporate logo there, even if it's sponsored by a corporation. They will just see it as an exciting card. The Subway Series cards are some of them."

While Trenery is mum on what future commemorative cards will be, he says one of the ideas in the works is a card commemorating Dodgers legend Jackie Robinson.

MORE FAVORITES

To mark the third anniversary of Moneycard Collector, we featured a two-part series in our September and October editions, asking dealers for their "Favorites of 1997" and "All-time Favorites." Inadvertently we omitted the choices of KARS Unlimited of Ormond Beach, Fla. Here, then, are the favorites of Scott and Kathy Shapiro:

FAVORITES OF 1997

1. Multiple issuers, International Telecard Association Chicago Skyline set. This is a beautiful set of cards that defines the spirit of cooperation for which the industry should stand.

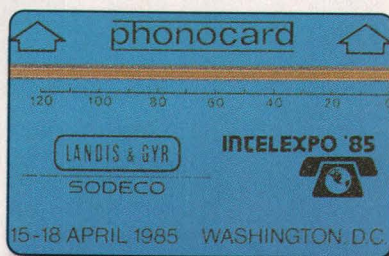

2. Innovative Telecom, Innovative Ale prepaid label. One of the most "innovative" ideas of the year, and useful in that hot convention hall!

3. Bell Canada, Chien Melancholique. Just love the picture.

4. USACard, Pink Panther Easter Egg set. This created a fabulous "egg" hunt among dealers and collectors. It reminded us of the Gillette 1995 NCAA card search.

5. AT&T, Oreo cookie die-cut. Well-done combination of great photography and die-cut design makes the card feel real enough to take a bite out of.

ALL-TIME FAVORITES

1. A tie among many early issues that got the industry started, created excitement among collectors and are historically important: Landis & Gyr IntelExpo, Nynex Democratic National Convention, AmeriVox City Skyline Series, U S WEST NW Leagey No. 1, AT&T Teletickets, Bell South UAB Medical Center Field Trial Set, plus others too numerous to mention.

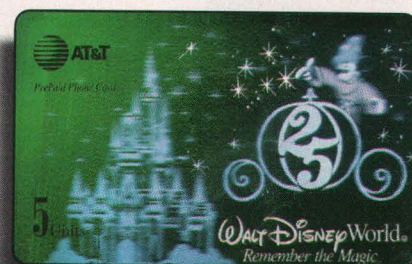

2. Multiple issuers, Keane Eyes Children Set. An early example of a beautiful piece of art worked into a puzzle set and jointly issued by six companies. It was made for the Phone Card Phair in San Francisco, one of the first phonecard shows in the United States.

3. USACard, Original Cracker Jack. Just one look takes you back in time. A new twist, with scratch-off denominations.

4. Hong Kong Telecom, Ageless Charm of Mickey. The first Disney set issued by Hong Kong Telecom, unique and one of the prettiest sets produced worldwide.

5. AT&T, Walt Disney World 25th anniversary hologram.

The nicest use of technology and imagery we've seen.
